ciation. In him a remarkable personality has passed away, an experienced man in business and seed-growing, always ready to give advice to those who needed it. He leaves a widow and grown-up family.

EDITORIAL work on the catalogues, in most cases, is progressing rapidly, it having been discovered that nothing is lost by giving printers a little time for their share of the task.

GUARANTEEING SEEDS.

To exploit its own work, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has sent out a press circular which says in part:

"A most hopeful sign, indicative of results largely attributable to the persistent efforts heretofore made by the United States Department of Agriculture in the line of seed testing, is manifest from an inspection of the catalogues of more than fifty of the principal seed dealers of the country.

"All of the firms referred to make definite statements that they test their seeds for germination. Nine firms advise purchasers to send samples either to the seed testing laboratory of the U. S. Department of Agriculture or to a state experiment station to be tested. Seven firms state that they themselves follow this course in regard to the seeds they offer and that the seeds are thereby officially guaranteed to be of the high grade represented. Six firms allow a stated time for making a test, advise purchasers to make such test on receipt of seeds, and request the return of seeds which do not satisfactorily meet the test.

"Five firms state that the seeds they are selling comply with state laws, and a number of firms give the percentage of purity and germination in compliance with state laws.

"These statements indicate that competition between seed dealers is becoming more and more a competition based on quality—a healthful tendency from the standpoint of both customers and honest dealers."

AS OTHERS SEE US.

Wm. Cuthbertson, the widely known seedsman and sweet pea specialist of Marks Tey and Edinburgh, writing in the Horticultural Advertiser, a British trade paper, says, "Your readers will perhaps enjoy my impressions of three recent American visitors." Of them he said in part:

such one of the largest and best-known seed growers in America. He controls over 5,000 acres of seeds, which include 450 acres of sweet peas, 750 acres of onions grown for seed, 400 acres of lettuces, and 2,700 acres of culinary peas. What sort of a man is Mr. Morse? He is not the type we in this country consider typically American. He is a man in the prime of life, tall, reserved, dignified. One has to ask him questions before he tells one much about himself or his business. He is a good listener, and after a discussion has gone a certain length Mr. Morse intimates he has made up his mind—and it is made up. I should say he is a man who would be a tower of strength to any concern—business, political or social—and I fancy when he comes across people he does not fancy or who do not treat him or his firm honorably, he would not take the trouble to quarrel with them—he would just leave them alone, a far greater punishment to some people than telling them what one thinks of them. As Mr. Morse showed at the dinner of the National Sweet Pea Society, he is a speaker with point, force and humor. He is an American of British descent; his ancestors emigrated to America from England in the Seventeenth century.

"I once asked E. J. Deal, of Boston, England, who, in his opinion, were the cleverest men in our trade in America. He named several and then he asked, 'Have you met Carl Cropp, of Chicago?' That question meant a lot. This summer S. B. Dicks brought Mr. Cropp and his son to see me, also Mr. Schaetell, of Vilmorin's. The party arrived at 3:45 p. m. Mr. Dicks pulled out his watch and said, 'Mr. Cuthbertson, we can give you only fifteen or twenty minutes, as we must catch the 4:20 train. We are all going back to London to celebrate Independence day.' 'All right,' I said, 'but you should arrange things better.' I walked the party through two large greenhouses filled with sweet peas and talked about varieties and other matters as well as I could. When we came out of the second one, I said to Mr. Dicks. 'Now you must go!' Mr. Cropp put his hand in his pocket and said to Mr. Dicks and the others, 'You can go to London and celebrate Independence day and I will give you money to do it; as for myself, I am going to spend two or three hours with Mr. Cuthbertson if he will have me.' That settled the matter. The 4:20 train was allowed to go without that party and they left to catch the 7:40 at Witham. I think that reveals Mr. Cropp's character. He wants to get to the bottom of everything, and his knowledge, especially of flowers and flower seeds, is amazingly extensive and accurate. Mr. Cropp is a well-built man, fifty years of age or more. He is a German, having learned his trade in Germany before emigrating to America.

"I was told that Howard M. Earl would bring with him 'the hustling atmosphere of the land of the hustlers.' I was not disappointed. Mr. Earl is a short man, not a small man, but he seems to be packed as full of energy as an egg is full of meat. I began to understand better the business of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. after meeting Mr. Earl and spending the best part of two days in his company. Here was the man, I thought, who must 'pull a lot of the strings' in the Burpee business. He speaks about 'his chief' with enthusiasm and admiration, and knowing Mr.

Burpee as I do, I said to myself, 'This is a combination that is going to be difficult to beat even in America.' Mr. Earl does not go round a seed farm making copious notes, as many do. His eyes seem to be everywhere. He finds something that impresses him, he asks a few pointed questions, and out comes a tiny notebook and a few jottings are made; the book is returned to Mr. Earl's vest pocket, and he goes on smoking his cigar and watching things and people. Mrs. Earl told me her husband had been doing too much recently, and was invalided this last spring. I asked Earl forthwith if that was true. He smiled and looked through me with his keen eyes. I was not to be done. I said in presence of his wife, 'What hours do you work?' His reply was, 'Any man who wants me can find me at business from 7 a. m. till 7 p. m. every day.' That explains a lot. We have something to learn from our American friends, but I think we can teach them something, too!''

FORCING CUCUMBERS.

Please give me a little information on the growing of cucumbers in winter. I should like to have you speak of the following points: The best varieties, the distance between the rows, the distance between the hills, the question of raised or solid benches, the time to plant for a Christmas crop, how to pollenize, the soil and the quantity of manure, the number of plants to each hill, and the average crop per hill in midwinter. I am quite sure there are many who would be benefited by an explanation of the foregoing points, with any other information you may give on the subject. I have one house, 25 x 150, with raised benches, which we have been using for carnations, and we shall plant it to cucumbers this winter.

L. M. B.

I would say that the time to plant the seed for a Christmas crop would be about October 1. Though they would commence to bear a little before Christmas, they would not be bearing heavily until that time.

Raised beds are not required; nearly all growers use solid ground beds. They are planted in rows, about one row to a 4-foot bed or two rows to a 7-foot or

WHEN a little child begins to think, the first indication he gives is by asking "Why?" In fact, some children have better reasoning powers than their parents, who go through life like a three-wheeled handcar on a railroad track—they get in a rut. "We do well enough," was the motto of a great city in olden times; people now dig up mementos of that city from underneath the sand. Every business firm has the dominating influence of one man, and the success of the business depends upon whether that one man is a progressive and a thinker or just a mere worker. The thinker is the most capable buyer, because he reasons "why." When he buys he makes an investment—an investment has revenue for its reason. The other kind speculate and gamble on the revenue—and no gambler ever made money in the long run. There's enough gambling in the growing, without taking any chances on the bulbs. Now, in order to minimize a possible loss, it is advisable to buy Horseshoe Brand bulbs, because they are produced with such care as to withstand much rough treatment. Horseshoe Brand Giganteum make the best Cold Storage bulbs in the world, just for that reason. Besides, the late arrivals are packed for that purpose. The following are offered in select stock, immediate delivery:

LILIUM MULTIFLORUM

Size 7/ 9-inch, at $18.00 per case of 300 bulbs
Size 8/ 9-inch, at 21.00 per case of 280 bulbs

8-foot bed. Some put one plant in a hill, two and one-half to three inches apart, and other growers put two plants in a hill, two, three or five inches apart, depending somewhat on the varieties and the season of the year.

The Davis Perfect variety is popular with most growers. It is long and prolific and of a dark green color. As to growing, it requires more space than any of the others. The Boston Forcing White Spine is the variety quite generally grown in the east.

Bees are always used to carry the pollen. All kinds of manure are used. Cucumbers require a liberal dose of fertilizer, probably a larger proportion than any other greenhouse crop. A mixture of three parts of soil to one of manure is not too rich to begin with.

I am unable to give the average crop per hill, but the yield during the winter months for any one day will not compare with the amount picked in one average day in the spring. They will not yield heavily in the dark, short days of midwinter and they grow slowly then.

The high prices of midwinter are exceedingly tempting to some amateurs, but not to the experienced growers, who have learned by experience that the proportional cost of production is too high in the coldest months.

I would advise you not to try to grow cucumbers until warmer weather, toward spring, at least until you have had more experience. Your house with raised benches will be all right for cucumbers, providing you can keep it warm enough. Do not try to grow cucumbers unless you can keep the temperature about 65 degrees at night; 68 degrees is their proper temperature and you will be wasting time and money if you can not give them their requirements. My advice would be to plant the house to Grand Rapids lettuce and have some young lettuce plants all ready to replant as soon as the first crop is sold, delaying the cucumber planting until the warm weather, toward spring. PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho—Henry J. Lubben has leased the west side of the Rex theater building, on Sherman avenue, for a flower store. Mr. Lubben is the proprietor of a cafe, but prior to coming to Coeur d'Alene was engaged in the florists' business in Seattle.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

Trade for the first part of October has been highly satisfactory. The supply of home-grown stock has not been equal to the demand and shipments from the outside have been resorted to, to fill the orders of the retail florists. The month opened with the nineteenth annual interstate fair, which called for a good many flowers of a cheaper grade for decoration purposes, while the funeral of a pioneer called for a large quantity of the better grade of flowers, thus using up the stock in a splendid manner. Carnations are of fine quality, but the supply is not equal to the demand. Roses and chrysanthemums are also beginning to arrive in good qualities and numbers. The people are beginning to stock up with house plants, such as ferns, palms and flowering plants, and this makes the plant trade much better. Only a slight frost has come along, so there is still some outdoor stock. A good frost would tend to increase the sales at the retail stores.

Various Notes.

E. W. McLellan, of San Francisco, was a visitor in the city recently, looking for a market for some of his stock.

S. Rosaia, of Colma, Cal., the big violet grower of that section, was in the city taking orders for regular shipments of his violets to this market.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., spent one day here while on his way east.

J. F. Austin, of Seattle, Wash., has arrived in the city and has connected himself with the Spokane Greenhouses, Inc., of which he will take the business and financial management. The firm is making plans for building a range of glass on its property near Spokane.

A. J. Burt had a formal opening of his new store October 1, with music and floral gifts for those visiting his store. The new store is a handsome one and a great credit to the city. He reports trade as quite satisfactory. He has purchased a new automobile for delivery purposes.

At the flower exhibit of the interstate fair the Spokane Florist Co. took first prize on artistic arrangement of cut flowers, with Hoyt Bros. Co. second. In the plant exhibits Hoyt Bros. Co. took first prize, Spokane Greenhouses second and H. E. Reimers third. Many small cash prizes were awarded to the amateurs for cut flowers.

All the florists were busy with the large orders for the funeral of Mrs. J. P. M. Richards, which occurred the first of the month. The Spokane Florist Co. had the family order, which was a casket blanket of white roses. The Spokane Florist Co. also had the decoration for the Doran-Paterson wedding, which was the big society event of the month. The ceremony room was in the rainbow colors, worked harmoniously in an arch over an altar built up for the occasion. The dining-room table was arranged with lily of the valley, while other rooms were in American Beauties and large yellow chrysanthemums.

The automobile parade on the opening day of the fair was the largest ever seen in this city, there being over 550 in line, and many cars were handsomely decorated. C. T. Kipp's touring car took first prize, which was a handsome silver cup donated by the Spokane Clearing House.

The most of the florists report a scarcity of competent help for the retail stores, and a good second man seems hard to find.

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

Any florist on the Pacific coast not satisfied to do a local retail business can build up a prosperous wholesale trade by using space in The Review to let the buyers know where stock is to be found. This way:

We have found advertising in The Review to be very satisfactory. We have had orders from all parts of the United States, as well as from the Pacific coast, showing that your valued paper has a very wide circulation. At any time we have any special advertising to do we certainly shall send it to The Review.—Hogan & Kooyman, Oakland, Cal., October 3, 1912.

SEATTLE.

The Market.

Business has been good during the last week. Several large funerals have helped considerably in disposing of stock. Chrysanthemums, roses and carnations are now arriving in first-class condition and in fairly liberal quantities. The street corners on Second avenue are bedecked with peddlers of violets; this, while showing the abundance of California stock, does not tend in any way to improve business or the status of the flower trade. Some straggling outside stock is still coming in, but from now on the stores will have to depend principally on greenhouse stock. Local roses are becoming more of a factor in the trade here, some excellent flowers being grown and sold, and the talk that roses cannot be successfully grown around Seattle will soon be forgotten.

Various Notes.

The H. Harrington Co. has been making lovely window displays this week. This firm's stock of roses and chrysanthemums is unexcelled. Today they had quantities of Richmond and Chatenay; for the latter they have long been famous, and to do justice to their present stock would use up all the adjectives. A large vase of Sunburst oc-

T. W.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Stock has not cleaned up quite so well during the last week. As is usual at this season, everyone who has a back yard full of mums dumps them in, and while the stock in many cases is not worth much, it checks the sale of better flowers. Bonnaffon still leads, though there are numbers of Appleton and other yellows, and by the time these notes appear Golden Wedding will be in full cut. In whites, Silver Wedding and Eaton are good. W. Duckham and the old Viviand-Morel are the best in pinks. Northern stock continues to arrive, San Francisco growers sending it in on commission. The express companies probably get more profit than anyone else out of the transactions.

Carnations are still plentiful and good in all varieties. Centaureas also keep up well. Some late Shasta daisies, now arriving, are elegant. The flowers are large, prettily fringed and exceptionally fresh looking. Indoor roses are fair in quality, with Radiance, Prima Donna and Beauties as the best offerings. There is only a fair demand for valley and orchids, the continued warm weather not being conducive to a heavy demand. There have been several good wedding orders, but the mainstay of the trade has been funeral work, which has been plentiful. The demand for greens has been excellent.

Starting October 16, the weather took an unusually hot turn, and the soil, which had been cooled down a little by the early rains, is now as dry and hot as before. The temperature for several days has hovered around the 95-degree mark and the exceptional warmth has continued well into the evening, something unusual for this vicinity, where the evenings are almost invariably cool. As I write, it looks cloudy and there is a good breeze from the ocean.

Various Notes.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett, of Pasadena, recently made a tour of the Montebello places, visiting, among others, the fine establishments of Howard & Smith and Dieterich & Turner. The fine rose sections at the latter place were a surprise to Mr. Bassett, who hardly expected anything so up-to-date, and Mrs. Bassett was also genuinely pleased with the fine palms and other stock, describing it as a beautiful place. Although so far away, Mr. Bassett evidently takes a lively interest in the doings of his firm and the new plant being built near Chicago.

During his visit here last week, John Morley, of San Diego, was loud in his praise of the southern city and he says he prefers it even to lovely Los Angeles. He speaks feelingly, though, of the rock he has to blast through before he can plant anything. Tons of dynamite have to be used, but I didn't hear that he was thinking of moving any of the sticks Dr. Houghton mentions as being stored away in Griffith park. Possibly they use a different brand in San Diego.

Nearly the end of October seems an unusual time for amaryllis to be in flower, but I noticed quite a number of fine blooms at Howard & Smith's Montebello grounds recently. The cactus and other dahlias are still finely in flower, as well as late phloxes. At the city place everything is torn up for alterations, of which particulars will be given later.

Bert Bateman, the capable decorator for the Hayward Floral Co., has returned from his vacation. Bert Harris, formerly of the American Florist's Main street staff, is also at the Hayward now.

Anton Soethout, of Gardener Junction, near Hollywood, has been taking a tour around the Montebello section. He is expecting large consignments of Holland stock at once and says business keeps up well.

The Star Nursery, of Montebello, is building a lath house, 40 x 400 feet.

O. C. Saakes says he has planted about 200,000 bulbs this season at his Belvedere ranch and is just about through. Business keeps up well at the store.

Wedding decorations and funeral work are the mainstay at the Freeman-Lewis store. Mr. Freeman is back again at work and is feeling much better.

Tom Wright has been taking a trip around the growing places. Trade is fine at the Fourth street store.

Tony Tassano is a busy man these days, his younger brother having gone north to join Joe. He has two extra men on at the store, to handle the increasing trade in choice greens and flowers.

Frank Lichtenberg managed to get away for a week or two in the mountains October 15. First heavy business and then sickness kept him here later than he liked, but a vacation was certainly coming to him.

S. Murata is well settled down in his new wholesale store, at 751 South Broadway. The floor space is 20 x 125 feet, and his facilities for handling a big rush of business are much better than at the Hill street place.

The H. N. Gage Co. is busy with Wisconsin moss in carload lots and it is taxing the room to take care of it. All will sympathize with J. Russell, Mr. Gage's grower at Montebello, in the loss of his baby daughter, whose death occurred October 15.

All roads lead to the Los Angeles Flower Market, and it is surprising to see the number of big boxes of mums arriving and departing all the time. It is surely a busy place these days.

The ferns from the Superior Nursery are fine now and Mr. Gutting has again settled down to business, after his hunting trips.

C. Brazee is planting an additional four acres to bulbs this season.

At Mrs. Booker's, on Vernon avenue, I noted some extra fine Bonnaffon

WE COVER THE FIELD

It is not necessary for a retailer to send to one firm for his flowers, another for greens and another for supplies. We keep everything a retailer needs in stock at all times, and we will appreciate your inquiries. We handle the entire cut of 25 large growers of hothouse and outdoor cut flowers and keep in constant touch with the largest and most exclusive eastern supply houses. Our indoor greens are grown under our personal supervision, and we have control of the best localities for wild stock, such as Mexican Ivy, Huckleberry, Ferns and Moss. This is a combination hard to beat.

mums, as well as other popular kinds. A good yellow, named Celonia, is exceedingly attractive here.

The wagon of Polder & Groen was pretty badly smashed by a collision with a motor truck, October 16, but fortunately no one was hurt.

H. R. Richards.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business is holding up nicely; yet there is almost a surplus of stock, as the bright, pleasant weather is bringing flowers out in profusion. Carnations are plentiful, but are soft and prove to be poor keepers. What we need is a good frost to kill all outside stock and create a demand. Roses are in good crop and move well, especially in the shipping trade. Mums are plentiful, the retail prices varying from $1 to $5, according to quality of stock. Valley and orchids are scarce, with a brisk demand. Cosmos is plentiful and of unusual quality.

Various Notes.

A. Rahn had the misfortune to cut his leg severely while cutting mums. He is able to be about with the assistance of a cane.

Alder & Robinson, of Gladstone, have dissolved partnership. Geo. C. Robinson will be the successor.

William Barsch is sending in some nice single violets.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Monday evening, October 14. Nothing special was accomplished, except the formulation of plans for the coming flower show. Amateur boxing matches served as an amusement for the evening.

Carl Miller, foreman for Clarke Bros., was absent several days from his haunts last week. It was a case of wedding bells for him.

Frank Luepke, of Vancouver, Wash., has been laid up for some time as a result of ivy poisoning on his face.

E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Business is rather quiet in comparison with that of several weeks back, and it is the general opinion that a good shower would enliven things considerably. There has been a tendency for stock of all kinds to move downward for several days. This is owing partially to the limited sale and also to the favorable weather we are enjoying at present. Mums are the most popular flower at present. Inside stock is good and can be handled at fair profit. The outside flowers are fine and the growers are selling them at low prices. Roses and carnations are about up to the average again and are quite a bit cheaper than they were one year ago. Violets are of fair quality and cheap. Orchids and valley are more plentiful. Lilies are over for the season. Other kinds of outside stock are beginning to show the effects of the cool nights and will be more scarce from this time on.

Various Notes.

The Women's Clubs held a flower show for products of San Mateo county, at Redwood City, October 16 to 18.

A new retail establishment has opened under the name of the Quality Floral Co., Telegraph avenue and Nineteenth street, Oakland.

Henry Johnson, Seattle, Wash., is in town for a few weeks' visit.

The show of Bonnaffon mums in the windows of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., Kearney street, last week has not been surpassed in the town's history.

T. J. Breen, gardener for several years for Wm. Babcock, of San Rafael, has resigned his position at that place.

Domoto Bros. Co., Elmhurst, will shortly enter extensively into the growing of orchids. They have a large house almost completed, which will be stocked with the best market sorts.

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

WM. PITKIN, JR., of Rochester, is going in for the landscape end of the business.

VISITED CHICAGO: John W. Maher, president Devil's Lake Nursery, Devil's Lake, N. D.

PETERSON NURSERY, Chicago, reports having got into the full swing of the planting season last week. It is hoped planting will go forward steadily for at least five weeks. W. A. Peterson has not yet recovered his usual robust health.

GEORGE S. JOSSELYN, for many years in the nursery business at Fredonia, N. Y., and widely known in the trade, generously remembered his employees in his will, which recently was admitted to probate. The sum of $23,000 of his estate, valued at $170,000, was left to some of his old and faithful employees. Maurice Young was bequeathed $7,000; A. H. Lewis, $5,000; Carl Privateer, $3,000; Thomas Halligan, $2,000; Bert Martin, $2,000; Julia Ryman, $2,000; Charlotte Haniser, $2,000. Carl Privateer, one of the beneficiaries, died last week.

INSTRUCTIONS TO IMPORTERS.

The Federal Horticultural Board, which has charge of the administration of the new quarantine law, has issued, under date of October 15, the following circular of information to importers of nursery stock:

Under the plant Quarantine Act, approved August 20, 1912, the importer of nursery stock must attend to the following conditions of entry:

(1) He must take out a permit therefor in advance. This permit should preferably be taken out by the person who is to receive the goods at final destination. A broker or commission merchant may take out a permit in his own name, if he imports for his own account, or he can act as agent for and take out the permit in the name of the actual purchaser.

(2) He must see that each package on arrival bears the proper certificate of foreign inspection. (See Regulation 6.)

(3) He must see that each package is marked in accordance with Section 3 of the Act. As a matter of convenience, this marking should also contain the additional information called for in Section 4, to avoid the trouble of remarking before the goods can be delivered for interstate shipment. The certificate and marking should preferably be on the goods before they leave the foreign port.

(4) After December 1, 1912, each shipment must be accompanied with the consular declaration called for in Regulation 9. This declaration must accompany the consular invoice and is not to be attached to the individual container.

What the Importer or Broker Must Do Before the Goods Can Be Shipped or Removed From a Port of Entry:

(1) He must immediately (before shipping or removal) advise the Secretary of Agriculture and State Inspectors in accordance with Section 2 and Regulation 8.

(2) He must see that each container is marked in accordance with Section 4; that is, in addition to the information on the label of entry, each container must bear the name and address ings made by the Department of Agriculture under the new plant quarantine law. The Treasury notice says:

"The chief officer of the customs at the port at which any nursery stock shall first arrive shall promptly notify the Secretary of Agriculture of the arrival of such stock, stating the nature and quantity thereof, the date of arrival, the name and address of the consignees (both nominal and ultimate), the name of the port of delivery, whether or not the shipment is accompanied by a certificate of inspection, and the number of the permit from the Department of Agriculture, if the permit has been received. Prompt advice of the delivery of nursery stock under permit shall also be forwarded to the Secretary of Agriculture.

"The Secretary of Agriculture having promulgated his determination, it is necessary to forbid the importation into the United States from the following named countries, viz., Great Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Russia, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Italy, of the following named species and their horticultural varieties, viz., white pine, western white pine, sugar pine and stone or Cembrian pine. The importation, until the withdrawal of such determination by the Secretary of Agriculture, for all purposes, of the said species and their horticultural varieties from the countries named, is prohibited."

HOISTED BY OWN PETARD.

Department of Agriculture officials are said to be struggling with the problem of how best to inspect the several hundred thousand packets of plants, bulbs and shrubs annually distributed throughout the country at the instance of individual members of the two houses of Congress as a part of the free seed iniquity. This free distribution has unintentionally fallen under the inspection requirements through a postal regulation directing that nursery stock shall be admissible to the mails only when accompanied by a certificate that the stock has been inspected and found free of insects. The government is the most extensive mail shipper of nursery stock. It is said the mailings amount to 200,000 to 300,000 per year.

West Grove, Pa.

On a recent visit to the E. G. Hill Copmany's establishment, Richmond, Indiana, I was surprised at some of the beautiful Cannas in flower there, and was informed by Mr. Hill that they were some of your this year's new varieties. He named them at the time, but I do not recall them, and as I have spoken of them to superintendents and gardeners of the various estates I have visited lately, who were interested in Cannas, all of whom had fine displays of King Humbert, I have been asked by them to get the information as to the names of the flowers and advise them of the same. Yours very truly.

M. C. EBEL,
Treasurer Aphine Mfg. Co.

MR. M. C. EBEL,
Madison, New Jersey.

Your very kind favor of the 9th is just received, and reminds me of a most pleasant morning spent with Mr. Hill on the grounds in front of their plant at Richmond, and also the Sanitarium across the railroad, where many of our newer Cannas are planted, but not those of most recent introduction.

The Cannas which Mr. Hill had growing on part of his grounds were such varieties as Mrs. Alfred F Conard, Gladioflora Brilliant, Buttercup, California, Gladiator, Mont Blanc, Martha Washington, Venus, Chautauqua, King Humbert, Meteor, Pillar of Fire, Niagara; among the Orchid flowering kinds he has New York, Uncle Sam and Wyoming, if I remember correctly, and I am not sure whether he has some of the newer and splendidly large flowering kinds, like Olympic, Kate F. Deemer, Halley's Comet and William Saunders, offered on page 15 of the catalogue I am sending.

Now if there are friends of yours who are really interested in Cannas, and you will kindly send us their names, we shall be glad to send full information, with copies of our catalogue.

Very cordially yours,
THE CONARD & JONES COMPANY.

The Gateway to the South.

The market is glutted, for which no single line is the cause. All are responsible for a heavy cut of every seasonable flower. The call for stock is only fair and as a result considerable is either sacrificed at job prices, disposed of through street fakers, or is dumped. Shipping business is good. It is the local call alone that is below normal.

The receipts of roses are large, of good quality and include everything from American Beauties to Sunburst, also some fine Killarney, White Killarney, Bride, Richmond, Taft, Golden Gate and Mrs. Aaron Ward. Of these only the best find a fair market. The shorter stemmed stock hardly sells at all. Pink moves better than white and short Beauties better than the longer ones.

The chrysanthemum line is complete. It includes all sizes and grades of white, yellow and pink. Up to date all of them have been selling nicely.

The carnation cut, too, is strong and the sales large. Most of them, however, have been cleaned up at low prices. Easter lilies are proving good property in this crowded market. Lily of the valley and, at times, orchids sell well. Many of the former have been used for work. Violets are, thus far, meeting with only an ordinary demand. Sweet peas, in small quantities, come in regularly.

The green goods business continues steady in spite of the slump in the market for flowers. The demand is for everything from cut fern and adiantum to wild smilax.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports that this wedding season has brought with it a good, steady demand for valley and orchids.

The South Park Floral Co., New Castle, is cutting the best Beauties of the season to date.

The Bloomhurst Floral Co., Lockland, is cutting an unusually choice line of roses and carnations.

Among recent callers were Frank Farney, representing M. Rice & Co.; Mr. Corbett, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., and Mr. Thomas, of Augusta, Ky.

L. H. Kyrk was the recipient, last week, of fine yellow and white mums from L. J. Barbier, of Dunkirk, Ind. The stock was of such quality that it found a ready sale.

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was held October 17 at Kolb's German Tavern. Hermann Doescher presided, the secretary, C. R. Panter, was at his desk and many members were present.

During the discussions of the evening Secretary Panter brought up the question of holding social gatherings after the regular meetings during the winter months. He pointed out that by doing this a much larger attendance, as well as an increase in membership, could be secured. It is done with much success in other large cities; why not here? Everyone present shared his opinion and promised to support this plan, which will be brought before the society at the next meeting, November 21. No efforts will be spared to make this meeting a large and interesting one, with definite arrangements for the new feature.

Richard Eichling, foreman at U. J. Virgin's nursery, made a fine exhibit of palms, ferns and foliage plants. His Cocos Weddelliana and Areca lutescens were declared the best ever seen here; in fact, all his plants were highly commented upon. Hermann Doescher showed some fine October Frost chrysanthemums. A vote of thanks was tendered to the exhibitors by the society.

Various Notes.

Frank J. Reyes & Co. have enlarged their store, now occupying the entire building at 301 to 305 Bourbon street. They are hustling day and night, constantly increasing their business, and are bound to make good in the course of time.

Frank Rieth reports a good business for the beginning of the fall trade, and says the winter season, although short, will be most satisfactory.

J. St. Mard has bought four lots on Salcedo street, where he is busy erecting a new residence. The start for a nursery will be made later. R. E.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Merriam Park Floral Co., capital $25,000, has been incorporated by Max Kaiser, of St. Paul, and Peter P. Quist and Nels O. Welander, of Minneapolis.

A premium list has been arranged, with prizes aggregating $6,000 in value. A large number of cash prizes and trophies are offered by members of the trade and its allied industries throughout the country. The following will serve as judges: W. N. Rudd, of Morgan Park, Ill.; J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia.; W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo., and J. J. Hess, of Omaha, Neb. It is expected there will be keen competition in all classes and with weather as favorable as other conditions this show should be a record breaker.

Omaha, Neb.—While in Switzerland, J. J. Hess, of Hess & Swoboda, received an appointment as judge for the St. Paul flower show, to be held in the Minnesota city November 8.

Various Notes.

J. P. Kayl was thankful that the weather of last week was mild, as his boiler was disabled by a leak.

An unusually large number of members attended the meeting of the Florists' Club Monday, October 21. An interesting paper by Thomas Beattie was read by the secretary. The compensation and labor laws were discussed at length. J. F. Sullivan and Albert Pochelon were appointed as a committee on publicity, to work in connection with the S. A. F. publicity committee.

John Davidson, gardener for Mrs. H. Newberry, leaves at the end of October for Australia, having given up his position. He showed an exceptionally fine vase of mums at the meeting of the Florists' Club.

Albert B. Havrane, of Walkerville, Ont., recently purchased a Commerce truck to handle his large vegetable business. He is doing a big business in geranium cuttings. H. S.

Irwin, Pa.—W. G. Kintigh is rushing the work on his new greenhouse opposite Union cemetery. The house is 30x100, with a workroom 16x30.

Greenwich, Conn.—The funeral of Mrs. A. W. Green, wife of the president of the National Biscuit Co., held here October 20, occasioned possibly the heaviest demand for flowers this city ever has known. Many designs were sent from New York, but local florists had innumerable orders, quite a number coming by wire from distant cities.

Woodstock, Ill.—Michael Jacques and Bert Zender have just completed building the new greenhouse, 30x60 feet, for Geo. Moncur, the material being supplied by the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago. This is the first greenhouse at Woodstock. Mr. Moncur came here about one year ago, has been successful and is continually increasing his business. He also does a farm and garden seed business, landscape gardening, etc. If business continues to prosper, Mr. Moncur will erect two more greenhouses the coming year.

GOETTINGEN

Goettingen is a Fuchsia that is not as much in evidence as it should be. It has dark, bronzy green, metallic appearing foliage; bright cinnamon red flowers, borne in large clusters, flowering continually during summer and winter; extra strong constitution, enabling it to withstand considerable summer exposure; effective as a porch and vase plant. We have an exceptionally fine stock of strong plants, in 3-inch pots, for immediate shipment, $1.00 per dozen; $6.00 per 100.

BRILLIANCY

Brilliancy Coleus belongs to the Giant leaved type, is of strong, vigorous habit, growing from two to three feet high, with leaves often nine to ten inches long, which are of a bright carmine shading to a deep maroon, the margin being yellow and green, the whole leaf having a rich, velvety luster; a splendid variety to grow in specimen plants for Spring sales. Strong 3-inch plants, ready now, 75c per dozen; $4.00 per 100.

We are booking orders for future shipment on a full line of Bedding Plants and Geraniums, also Dahlia and Canna Roots.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Banking and currency, not flowers or the coming flower show, were the chief topics under discussion at the meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association October 14. The speakers were Dr. Frank T. Stockton, instructor in economics and history at the University of Rochester, and Joseph T. Murray, of the J. S. Bache Co. Both men said that the system of banking in this country was the worst in the world, that the United States was the only country in the world subject to financial panics and that such panics went in cycles. If the cycle theory holds good, one of the speakers said the United States will soon be in the panic zone. After the discussion the association adopted a resolution favoring reform in the national banking system.

Several members of the committees working on the flower show, which will open at noon on election day in Convention hall and continue through November 9, made informal reports. C. H. Vick, chairman of the general committee, said that all the committees were pushing the work, and that he believed the show would be better in every way than the one two years ago, or the show of 1909. The plans for staging as made by William Pitkin, Jr., and Fred L. Trautman have been adopted. In the absence of John Dunbar, president of the association, who was out of town, Vice-president C. B. Ogston presided.

Pensacola, Fla.—Andrew Hauge, formerly of Birmingham, Ala., is now at the San Carlos Flower Shop, corner Palofox and Garden streets.

Waco, Tex.—The greenhouses of James Mohan, on North Ninth street, near Vermont street, were recently damaged by fire. The amount of the loss has not been reported.

Attica, Ind.—The Attica Floral Co., of which W. S. Kircher is proprietor, recently has completed a greenhouse 28 x 100, put in a new boiler, twinning it with the old one, built a new office and coal shed and given the entire place an overhauling. Business is increasing splendidly.

NO ARGUMENTS NEEDED TO SELL OUR GOODS

25 years' experience in importing, growing and shipping his specialty, that so well-known novelty,

THE ARAUCARIA EXCELSA

which makes him The Araucaria King of America.

ELECTION IS NEAR For whom will you vote? Be wise, and Vote for Godfrey Aschmann.

I am a leader in the land where the Araucaria grows,
The only real progressive, as every florist knows.
When making out your orders, give your biggest vote for me,
Then you'll have the richest Christmas you ever yet did see.

Let Wilson, Taft and Roosevelt, in their travels to and fro,
Promise all the big improvements that either of them know,
Still if you come to Aschmann's, you can see the very best,
So mail to him your orders and he will do the rest.

The easiest thing a man can do, is to make a noisy breeze,
The hardest task a seller has, is to grow the plants that please;
Yet in the years that I have spent in growing for the trade,
I've filled the bill and satisfied the many friends I've made.

WHEN YOU BUY, IT PAYS TO BUY GOOD STUFF

1200 BOSTONS, 1000 WHITMANI COMPACTA (new). This stock is from the bench and is in fine condition. The Whitmani compacta is simply a greatly improved Whitmani—it does not revert back to the Boston leaf as the old Whitmani does, and while in appearance it is much like the old variety, the fronds have a stiffer mid-rib and make a handsomer plant. These plants now occupy my propagation benches, they must be closed out early, for which reason I quote the following low prices: Boston for 6-in., extra good value, 20c. Whitmani compacta for 5-in., 25c. Cash or reference. See my classified carnation adv. A. A. Gannett, Geneva, N. Y.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years, and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers up to date. Some of the many reports: "I had 3000 of your Pansy Park Perfection pansy plants last fall. They began to bloom in February and from then on were a sight; immense blooms, wonderful coloring and great variation. Shall want at least 10,000 for next fall and possibly more of the same giant mixture." F. E. Peckham, Norwich, Conn. "Pansy plants rec'd in fine condition. They have the finest roots I have ever seen." T. L. Martin, Shreveport, La. "Pansies arrived in good condition. In fact they are the best plants we have ever bought." Myers & Co., Bluffton, Ind. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots. Greenhouse Heating.

HEATED WITH 4-INCH PIPES.

Enclosed you will find two diagrams of my greenhouses. You will notice that in the two connected houses the two pipes running from the boiler are fed by one main. Both pipes ascend to the farther end of the house and the one marked R. P. descends to the boiler. All are 4-inch water pipes. Is the piping properly installed? In the other house there are also two 4-inch pipes, both fed by a single main, but in this case both pipes descend to the boiler, after rising to the highest point at the farther end. I am located in northwestern Missouri. L. M. S.

One of the sketches shows two houses, each 20x40 feet, with one 4-foot wall exposed in each house. The heating is done by two 4-inch flow pipes, which run along the exposed walls in each house, with a 4-inch return alongside. The temperature desired is not stated, but it would not be possible to maintain a higher temperature than 40 degrees when it is zero outside, and to obtain that temperature along the inner wall of the houses the return pipes should be carried across the ends of the houses and back to the boiler along the side opposite the flow pipes. For 60 degrees run three flows and three returns in each house.

The other sketch shows a house 20x50 feet, which has two flows and two returns put in as recommended above. This would give perhaps 45 to 50 degrees. The piping would be improved if the highest point in the system were near the heater, with a fall throughout the length of the pipes.

EXPANSION TANK BOILS OVER.

I have recently installed a small cottage hot water heater in a small house built for special use, and piped as follows: The house is 14x18x24 feet. It has a shingle roof, board sides and ends. In each of the two sides there are four sashes, each 3x6 feet, and there are two windows in each end. We need a temperature of 85 degrees in the daytime and 80 degrees at night. In this part of Washington state the outside temperature never falls below 20 degrees above zero. The trouble with the system is that we have to watch the boiler carefully or the water will boil out through the expansion tank.

The boiler is of the saddle type, with a firebox 20x22 inches. The bottom of the boiler is two feet lower than the return coils. We started with a 2-inch flow, raising it to the highest point, right over the boiler, and then continued with one 2-inch line placed under the eaves on each side and dropping eight inches in the length of the house. At a point near the end we took a side leader, 1½-inch, which we connected with two 1½-inch returns under the benches. The other coils are placed on each side wall, three 1½-inch pipes forming the coils and dropping toward the boiler with a fall of two inches in ten feet. All the coils—that is, three 1½-inch on each side and two 1½-inch under each bench—connect with a 2-inch return to the boiler.

We first connected the expansion pipe at a point on the return near the boiler, but it boiled over and would raise the water out of it until we had a full head of steam. We then changed it and connected it with a 1-inch pipe at the highest point directly to a bar-

TRAVIS GREENHOUSE ROCKER GRATES

This is the grate that will not become clogged. Will not shake fine coal through into the ash pit. Will open wide enough to pull the cinders through without disturbing the fire. Will successfully handle soft coal, which makes a great amount of cinders and ashes. Also hard coal, making a great amount of fine ashes. Use better grates and increase your heating capacity. Regulate your draft and save fuel. Have control of your grates and lessen your responsibility. Give size of furnace and we will send prices with full information.

"Detroit" RETURN TRAPS

insure a more uniform temperature in the houses by keeping all steam lines free and clear of condensation.

Sluggish lines sap the real heat value out of the new steam and add dangerously to the general inefficiency of the plant.

Avoid this condition in your system by installing a "Detroit" Return Trap.

Bulletin No. 326-WF gives details of construction, operation and application of Detroit Traps. Yours upon request.

rel five feet above, but this is no better. It appears that the hot water flows almost directly into the barrel and then, when cool enough, takes a gravity run into the mains. From past experience in cold climates, I think ten 1½-inch returns and two 2-inch mains should be sufficient to heat a house twice that size. Where is the trouble? Of course, lowering the boiler would help a great deal, but where should the expansion pipe on any hot water boiler be connected? I have heard the opinions of both experts and novices, and I am still puzzled as to which is right. H. H. K.

The boiling over of the expansion tank is caused by the circulation being too sluggish to cool the water in the boiler, and perhaps by the boiler being too large for the amount of radiation. If the boiler is rated for more than 250

Where There Is Condensation

—there is need for a Morehead Steam Trap. Condensation in steam lines is akin to matter out of place—means wasted energy.

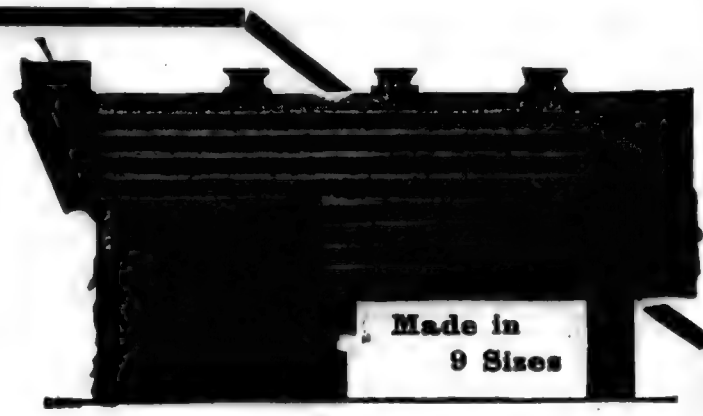
to 300 square feet, trouble might be expected unless the circulation is quite rapid. The circulation could be improved by lowering the heater below the level of the returns and increasing the size of the main flow and return pipes to 2½-inch, but a simple method of improving the circulation and preventing the boiling over would be to attach a mercury generator to the expansion pipe, which should be connected with the highest point in the system.

TWO NEW CARNATION HOUSES.

We have built two greenhouses, each 25x100, running east and west. The sides and ends consist of four feet of glass and two feet of cypress boarding. The houses measure sixteen feet to the ridge. We wish to grow carnations, and we intend to put in a hot water heating system. We should like to know how many pipes should be used, their size, etc. Any information will be appreciated. Our location is central Massachusetts. F. F.



For a new and well-built house 25x 100, with four feet of glass in each side wall, three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns will be needed to secure a temperature for carnations. One flow should be under the ridge and the others upon the plates. Three or four of the returns can be upon each wall, and the others distributed under the benches or on the sides of the beds.

To connect the flow pipes with the heater, run a 4-inch main to each house and put in returns of the same size. Connect the highest point of each main with the expansion tank and give the flow pipes a fall of one inch in fifteen feet to the farther end of the houses. If this is done, the expense and bother of air cocks will be done away with.

What We Say:

Wilks Boilers are ideal for the man who owns a small greenhouse, who does his own firing and needs a boiler that can be relied on at all times.

Wilks Boilers are self-feeding. Fill the magazine with fuel in the evening and an even, continuous fire will be maintained until morning without any attention.

Wilks Boilers will heat as much as 3000 square feet of glass to 65 degrees in zero weather. They are made of the best quality of steel, strongly riveted and calked, with no cast-iron sections to crack.

Our Catalogue is yours for the asking. It tells all about our heaters, shows their economy, and gives a plan for heating a model greenhouse.

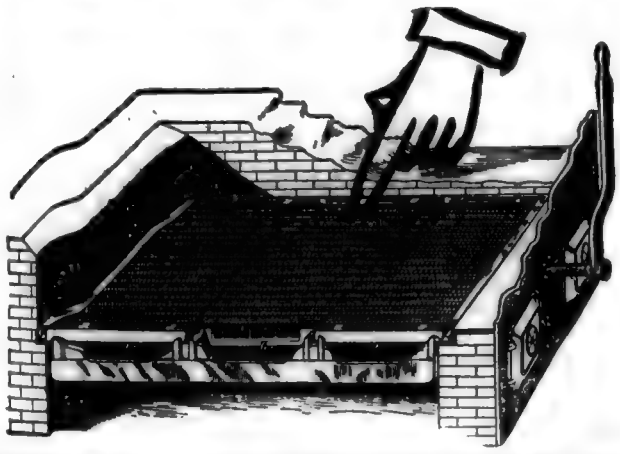
Dear Sirs:—

I purchased one of your 20 x 36 Wilks Heaters in June, 1898, and it has been in constant use since then. It has heated my greenhouse, 12 x 50 feet, and has been very satisfactory.



I can recommend your Wilks Heater and think it would be fine for house heating purposes.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been fair for the last week. Mums are coming in larger quantities now and are commanding a fair price. Roses are of good quality and are equal to the demand, the best bringing $6 per hundred. Carnations are improving, bringing from $2 to $2.50 per hundred. Beauties are fair at $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Easter lilies are plentiful at $7 per hundred. Cosmos and dahlias are still obtainable. Some violets are being shipped in, but the call is not heavy. Violets and orchids are moving slowly.

Various Notes.

The November meeting of the State Florists' Association is to be held at Richmond, November 4. The Indianapolis florists are to go via the Pennsylvania railroad, leaving Indianapolis at 7:20 a. m. Tickets should be purchased to East Haven, as the first stop will be at the establishment of the E. G. Hill Co. The return trip will probably be via interurban.

Alfred Brandt will move his store two doors north of his present location.

Sidney Smith has sold the property where his greenhouses are located and expects to retire from business. However, he will not vacate until next July.

The Roepke-Rieman Co. has an unusually fine lot of cyclamens coming on. This concern has been cutting some good white mums, a new seedling of its own. H. L. W.

Alpena, Mich.—James H. Dove has sold his greenhouses to Emil Voss and has removed to Cleveland. Mr. Voss has taken down the greenhouses and re-erected them in connection with his range at 320 Lincoln street.

The Market.

Conditions last week were quite satisfactory to the florists. Stock is getting more plentiful, especially carnations, which are also improving in quality. Business continues to improve. Some exceptionally fine mums are coming to this market.

Various Notes.

The Minnesota State Florists' Association met in Minneapolis, at the Park Board greenhouses, October 15. A good representation from St. Paul was in attendance.

The general committee of the flower show met at Holm & Olson's store, October 16, and all reported progress. August Swanson, who was formerly of this city but has now withdrawn from the florists' business, will act in the capacity of superintendent of the show. The members of the committee consider themselves fortunate in securing so able a superintendent.

A new firm will enter the field here soon. Messrs. Hoffman and Sullivan, formerly of L. L. May & Co., have leased a store at 18 West Sixth street and expect to be ready for business by November 1.

BAKERSTOWN, PA.

Seeking to overcome the difficulty workmen have had in procuring suitable boarding accommodations in the country, and recognizing that men are scarce, the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. will build a dormitory and clubhouse at its Bakerstown plant. The plans of Architect Paul W. Irwin show a two-story building, with sleeping quarters for about thirty-five men on the second floor and a clubhouse, with reading and writing rooms, shower baths and hot water heating system, on the first floor. The company employs about ninety men in Bakerstown, there being about ten acres under glass.

The dormitory, an official of the company says, is designed with a view to giving the employees city accommodations in the country, which all cannot get when they are quartered in a half dozen or so boarding houses. Competent workmen, he added, are hard to get since there is so much work in the city, with its many places of amusement that cannot be had in the country. The clubhouse idea was included in the dormitory as an added means of making life in the country attractive when the men are not on duty.

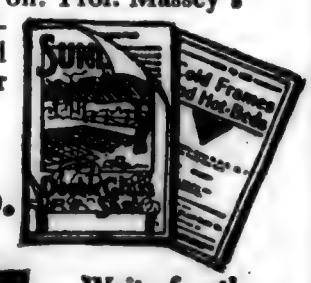
SUNLIGHT Double Glass Sash
for Hot-beds and Cold-frames

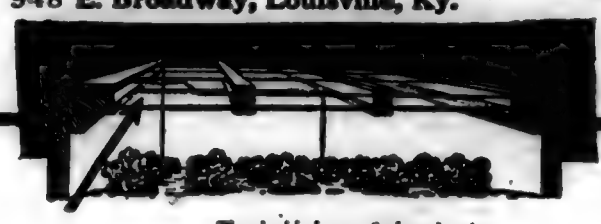
Double-Glass Double Profits



The old single layer hot-bed sash are far better than none; but they must be covered with mats, boards or shutters every evening and uncovered every morning. They are wasteful.

The new SUNLIGHT DOUBLE GLASS SASH, with two layers of glass enclosing an air space, are COMPLETE IN THEMSELVES. They eliminate all extra covers; they wipe out half the labor cost; they admit all the light by day to store warmth in the bed and then save the warmth at night.

They make plants earlier and stronger. They double final profits.



Every practical gardener or florist will see the value of this.

And it is good business for you to get our free catalog for full information. Write your address plainly and send it today; the hot-bed season is not far off. Prof. Massey's booklet on Hot-beds and Cold Frames sent for 4c in stamps.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

This week shows an increase of business over last, with a great many decorations to take the supply of cut flowers. At present no one is overstocked, as the demand is about an even break. All the early varieties of chrysanthemums are in full crop. Carnations are not as good as they should be, owing to the hot weather that prevails. The demand for potted plants is rather slow. The window displays last week were the best seen for some time.

Various Notes.

Henry Kusik says the demand for stock is greater than the consignments. Mr. King, of the Butte Floral Co., Butte, Mont., is visiting Mr. Kusik.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is exceedingly busy decorating. The firm reports that the business in decorating is twice as heavy as it was a year ago.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. has just finished planting five new houses, each 30x200.

Samuel Murray has an unusually pretty window display, consisting of Scotch heather, with a row of araucarias at the back.

Ed. D. Ellsworth has as fine a lot of araucarias and pot mums as can be seen anywhere.

R. S. Brown & Son are making big preparations for spring trade, as they have never been able to supply the demand as yet.

W. J. Barnes is still busy decorating. He had the decorations for the Skinner-Stowell wedding, at the home and also in St. George's Episcopal church.

A. Elberfield, of the Alpha Floral Co., had a boiler explosion last week in the conservatory at the rear of his apartments. The damage amounted to about $250. The cause was low water.

THE SOIL CARRIER IN USE.

SAVES TIME, LABOR AND MONEY

We call your attention to our Gravity Carriers for conveying soil into and out of greenhouses. You are aware of the great amount of labor necessary for changing the loam in your benches. It requires but a few feet of our Gravity Carriers to reduce this expense.

Carriers are made in eight and four foot sections, which can be instantly joined; the rollers are of the best seamless steel tubing, ball bearing, and are 14 inches in length by 2¼ inches in diameter. Cut shows how they operate.

A run of carrier is set up with one end projecting through a window and a cart containing the loam is placed at this end. The loam is shoveled into the boxes, which are pushed or conveyed by gravity into the house and dumped into the benches. Empty boxes are pushed back to cart over same run of carrier. When the beds within a convenient radius are filled, the carrier is set up at another window and the work continues until all benches are filled. For removing soil the process is, of course, similar.

We shall be pleased to furnish further details relative to construction and durability of the carriers; also, upon receipt of information relative to size of your greenhouses, furnish an estimate of the cost of a system for your requirements.

THE NEW CLEAR SCARLET BEDDING GERANIUM "HELEN MICHELL."

The best commercial novelty for 1913 (name registered with S. A. F. & O. H.). Seedling cross Jean Viaud and Alphonse Ricard. This sterling novelty will be introduced jointly by Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and ourselves and the plants will all be grown by us at our place at Norwood, where we will be pleased to have you call. You will find that this Geranium has all the good points claimed for it. "Helen Michell" is semidouble, of the clearest possible shade of scarlet, is early in bloom and produces these continuously during the season. It grows compact medium dwarf, with lustrous green foliage, and throws up gigantic flower heads continuously; we claim it to have the largest flower heads of any of the bedding geraniums. The individual blooms measure 2½ inches across. It is a common occurrence that a single 4-inch pot plant shows 4 fully open gigantic flower heads, several half open, and more in bud. We are booking orders that will be filled in rotation from January, 1913.

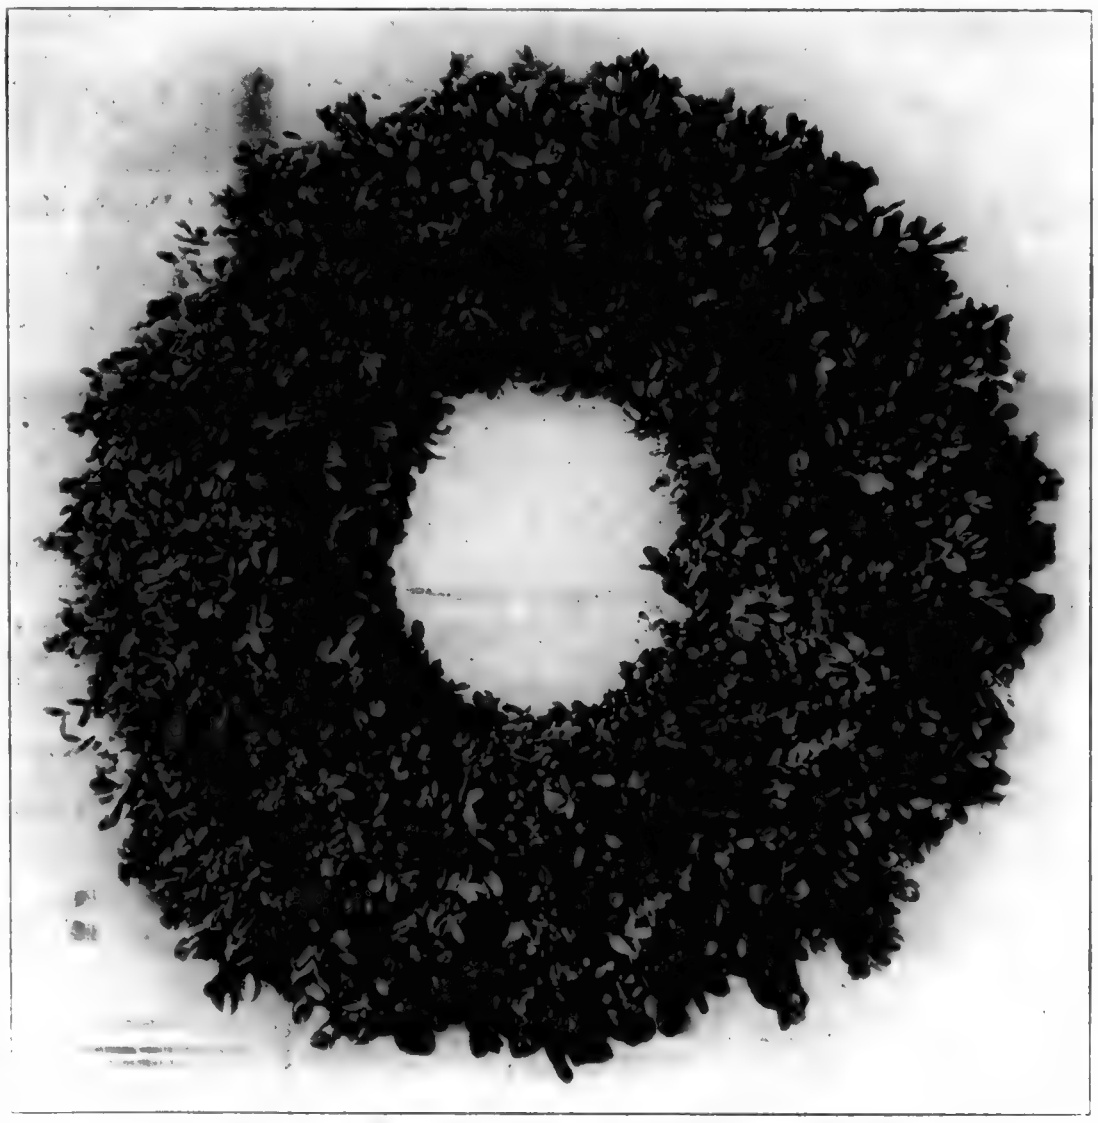
THE ART OF FLOWER ARRANGEMENT

By FRED C. W. BROWN

Mr. Brown will be pleased to answer, as this series of articles progresses, any criticisms or questions that may occur to his readers. The first article of the series was printed in the issue of October 10. The next installment will appear in an early issue.



ART AS AN AID TO ECONOMY.

Prevents Waste of Materials.

We hear and read on every hand that we have to be extravagant to be artistic. There could be no greater libel on art than a statement of that kind. When you hear it, be generous in your denunciation of it, for the utterance of so erroneous an opinion is proof positive that the principles of art are not understood. The very first principle taught is that of simplicity, and you will remember what great stress was laid on that principle in former articles of this series. Let me give you an example of how art, if utilized in your work, will save you money.

The Illustrations.

Study well, if you please, the three illustrations that form a part of this article; study each in its turn, and if you are not convinced that art is economical, then I should like to hear your arguments and see your examples. Mind you, I would not for one moment have you accept any or all of the three designs as perfect; nor is any special merit claimed for them, beyond their power of illustrating a particular argument. I do claim, however, with reference to two of the designs here shown—the carnation wreath and the boxwood wreath with the cluster of carnations—that one of them is so much superior to the other that there is little room for comparison. I do claim that the boxwood wreath with the carnation cluster embodies the essential principles of art. I think it should be apparent to all.

An Expressionless Arrangement.

First you will notice the wreath of boxwood. This, in itself, is attractive; it has rich, deep foliage, and displays fairly pleasing proportions. But, for sufficient reason, we desire to enrich its value with our own material, so we will take sixty carnations and place them carefully in this wreath, producing what I have already referred to as a carnation wreath. We are certainly not proud of our work, for we have used a lot of beautiful flowers and placed them in what we were satisfied was already a fairly pleasing design.

What have we gained by our addition of flowers? It is doubtful whether we have gained anything beyond a wonderment as to what our meaning could be. There is monotony of form, for we have lost the solid, conventional lines of our original boxwood wreath. We have also lost a factor that pleased us in the killing of the beauty of the boxwood by our expressionless arrangement of the sixty big carnation flowers.

This wreath—the carnation wreath—illustrates the principle of the average arrangement of cut flowers offered by florists today. That, we admit, is a broad statement, but it is a fact, a cold, unsavory fact. If you will watch and analyze the designs, bouquets or basket arrangements of flowers put up by florists in any city or town, you will be forced to agree that not only the average work, but the majority of the work, is carried out on the lines of this design—lines that embody only the principle of consumption of material, placed without rhyme or reason.

Fewer Flowers, More Art.

We are still going to use the same boxwood wreath, but this time we shall embody a principle of art. We are going to reason and we are also going to allow ourselves only one-half the material used in the carnation wreath. Instead of sixty carnations we use thirty, also using a little thought in the arrangement. We thus produce the wreath of boxwood with a cluster of carnations.

What is the result of our efforts this time? Let us be cool and calculating in our judgment and, above all, let not our egotism gain command over our reason.

Just here I want to put in a word in defense of the egotist. Without individuality there is no such thing as being artistic, for art in design is a direct reflection of personal, individual theory and power. In general outline we may carry out some direct principle, but in the final high light we must display the big "I" of egoity.

"A wreath of boxwood with a cluster of carnations." That is the simple story of the simple material we have used. It is told in the wreath as well as we know how. It may not be told as well as you or someone else could tell it, but we do not believe that you will question the statement of fact. It will speak for itself.

The Cluster.

The big interest or attraction is in the wreath and its material, but after we have gained the attention it is "up to us" to hold that attention, and our power lies in the nature of our high light, which in this instance is in the carnation cluster.

We have chosen simple material to refute the thoughtless statement that "you have to be extravagant to be artistic," that "you have to educate the public to appreciate art." Had we used the whole of the sixty carnations, there would be an open question whether there was any real improvement, but there can be little uncertainty on that point after a fair comparison has been made of the finished wreaths as they are shown in the pictures. And if there has been any doubt in your mind as to the economy of art, surely it is removed by these telling examples.

There may be some who will see beauty in the carnation wreath and ask by what authority we pronounce the other the more beautiful, since the richer quantity of material is in the carnation wreath. Some may claim that, by their method of considering values, the carnation wreath is the better, for it required as much or more energy for its production and contains a greater amount of material.

A Fair Comparison.

We would answer that argument this way: The same energy and material were used to produce the original form of boxwood; this is the big interest. Then about the same energy was used to place our blooms, for in the case of the fewer flowers we had the longer stems to contend with, and what is the result? In the carnation wreath we have lost a principle; we have gained the factor of flowers but lost the factor of boxwood; we have not added to the blooms by collective grouping or any suggestive form. In the other design we have still retained the wreath of boxwood, have added the second factor of flowers, and have intensified the interest by a greater opposition gained by leaving the stems a greater length and grouping the blooms. Thus, by a course of sane reasoning, we shall always be able to analyze and classify the work of designers and distinguish the artistic from the inartistic.

Remember, however, that while you may direct and employ all these essential principles in your work, the charm of your work is in your gift of conveying, through the medium of the high light—such as the cluster of carnations on our boxwood wreath—the feeling, character or theory of your individuality. Fred C. W. Brown.

Extravagant of Material but Devoid of Art.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

PASADENA, CAL.

Fall Flower Show.

Rivaling in beauty and artistic arrangement many larger shows in bigger cities, and surpassing by far any of the previous exhibits held here, the fifth annual fall flower show of the Pasadena Horticultural Society was opened to the public October 24 by Mayor William Thum. Completely filling an immense tent pitched on the grounds of the Hotel Maryland, the display attracted thousands of lovers of plants and flowers. It lasted three days and, judging from the attendance on the opening day and evening, there are few Pasadena residents who have failed to spend at least a few minutes there.

Although the competitive classes in no case permitted exhibits of commercial growers, the latter turned out in full force and made a most creditable showing. Awards were made as a token of appreciation from the society, but no prizes were given to these displays.

Attracting much attention was a large group of rare plants, palms, ferns and cattleyas from Henry E. Huntington, staged under the direction of his landscape gardener, William Hertrich. This exhibit was given the place of honor in the center of the tent, but was not for competition, and received a certificate of merit.

Much credit for the success of the show is due to the unremitting efforts of J. B. Feldman, president, and George H. Kennedy, secretary of the society. All the classes were well filled, including the one for floral baskets from the public schools. Of course mums were the leading feature, but by no means the only things of interest.

Commercial Displays.

Certificates of merit were awarded to the following:

Kempton's Flower Shop, for display of carnations, artistically surrounded and banked with ferns and palms. A specimen Alsophila australis, the Australian tree fern, received high commendation.

Coolidge's Rare Plant Gardens, for 100 varieties of ferns and general display of foliage plants.

Campbell's Seed Store, for bulbs, gardeners' supplies, etc.

Will S. Laurie, for general display of about 800 varieties of dahlias, 400 of them being their own seedlings.

Mentor Nursery, Robert Pegg, proprietor, for display of foliage and flowering plants, including berried solanums, coleus, roses and palms and ferns.

The Clemence Nursery, successors to the Ross Nurseries, for large display of many varieties of bedding and potted plants, both foliage and flowering.

W. S. Round, for display of dahlias. About thirty varieties were shown, although over 600 are grown by Mr. Round on his grounds.

Edward H. Rust, proprietor of the Palm Nurseries at South Pasadena, for display of foliage plants in great variety.

Howard & Smith, Los Angeles, for large display of plants and bulbs. Especially worthy of note were dwarf lantanas in white, yellow, orange and red; giant zinnias, and two tables of dahlias.

Germain Seed Co., Los Angeles, for well arranged exhibit of plants and bulbs.

Notes of the Show.

John H. Teekamp, importer of Dutch bulbs, was present with an assortment of hyacinth and tulip bulbs, etc.

Sherman Forestry Co. had an interesting exhibit showing a new method of tree doctoring by means of a reinforced seal of wire mesh and paraffin paper, well sanded over.

Theodore Payne, Los Angeles, showed seeds, bulbs and plants, specializing in native trees and shrubs.

Figueroa Street Nursery, Los Angeles, had rare Japanese plants, including two dwarf pines which were said to be from the Mikado's garden.

West India Gardens, of Altadena, exhibited 100 specimens, embracing twenty-three varieties of budded avocado trees, perhaps better known as the alligator pear.

Magnolia Nursery Co., of Whittier, also made a showing of avocados.

Unquestionably the sensation of the show was the announcement by Kempton's Flower Shop that 30,000 carnations would be given to lady visitors during the three days of the show. Six blooms with a little plumosus were handed to each caller and the booth was constantly surrounded by a crowd. Before the first day was over the supply ran short and Mr. Kempton phoned to Los Angeles for all the carnations the market afforded. Over 17,000 flowers had been given out when the closing hour arrived and there were still two days of the show to be reckoned with. Although the expense was considerable, Mr. Kempton says the advertising derived from the stunt was more than worth the price, as his business card was in every bunch.

Miss Sadie A. Thomas, probably the third largest chrysanthemum grower in the country, showed over 300 varieties of these blooms, ranging from pompons and singles up to the newest of the large types. Miss Thomas called particular attention to several of her own seedlings, among them Mrs. H. C. French, a large reflexed yellow, tinted with orange and lavender, and Pasadena, red on top and gold on the bottom, the colors being the reverse of Pockett's Surprise. Miss Thomas has the distinction of making chrysanthemum exhibits at seventeen shows within three weeks.

Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., sent fifteen varieties, which came through in excellent shape and were well staged by Miss Thomas.

A seedling from Mrs. H. C. French, of Oak Knoll, named Jean French, and bright yellow with red tints, was much admired. The plant grew seven feet tall, with a strong, stiff stem and the same style of foliage as General Hutton.

The fern display of Coolidge's was said to be the finest ever shown in California. This firm also had a pretty table of petunias.

Among the many new dahlias shown by Mr. Laurie, particular attention was called to Beloit, a deep red; Sandy, orange shading to salmon, and Sensation, a brilliant red tipped with white.

A beautiful specimen of Cattleya labiata was shown by the Mentor Nursery.

Coincident with the opening of the flower show, Henry E. Jaeger and Louis F. Wolfskill welcomed the public to their Orchid Flower Shop No. 2, which occupies a fine store directly opposite the Hotel Maryland and the entrance to the flower show. The new store is somewhat larger than the original one and is tastefully decorated in tan and blue, with white trimmings and white fixtures. The service counters and icebox are well to the rear, leaving the entire front of the store free for the display of flowers in baskets and vases, palms, ferns, etc. The show window is lowered almost to the level of the store floor, giving a light, roomy appearance that greatly adds to the attractiveness. A. C. Bushnell.

Art Is Economical, Not Extravagant.

LENOX, MASS.

First Show of the Season.

The Lenox Horticultural Society led off with the first exhibition of the year, opening October 24 and continuing through the two succeeding days. There was an unusually large attendance of out-of-town members of the trade, and they were unanimous in saying that it was the best show ever staged at this center of skillful gardening. The exhibits completely filled the town hall. There were five large groups, including three of miscellaneous plants and two of orchids. Instead of using tables for the cut flowers as heretofore, the vases of mums were placed on the floor. This improved the general effect of the show, but proved bad for the cut blooms themselves, as the attendance was so large that the visitors could not avoid brushing against and bruising the flowers. The groups occupied the center of the floor, the roses and carnations on the right, the specimen blooms on the left, the flowering plants being given the stage, with the vegetables and fruits upstairs. These latter always are a special feature of this show.

The exhibits are by the gardeners on the private estates of the wealthy who make their homes at Lenox, and the groups always are a striking part of the show. Probably at no other exhibition are these exhibits so rich and well arranged. A silver cup for best group was won by Fred Heeremans, gardener for W. D. Sloane, Phœnix Roebelenii, Lorraine begonias and lilies being principally used. Allen Jenkins, gardener for S. P. Schotter, was second. His group consisted principally of cocos, crotons and gloxinias. The third premium went to Edward Jenkins, gardener for Giraud Foster.

A. J. Loveless, gardener for Mrs. W. E. S. Griswold, had a fairly easy winning on group of orchids. Fred Heeremans was second. Other exhibitors of orchids were A. H. Wingett, gardener for Charles Lanier; J. J. Donahue, gardener for Mrs. M. K. Jessup, and E. J. Norman, gardener to Mrs. Geo. Westinghouse. Thos. Proctor, of the R. W. Patterson estate, had a particularly attractive exhibit showing how cattleya seedlings are raised.

The specimen blooms of chrysanthemums were generally conceded to be the best ever shown in Lenox. C. Carlquist, gardener for Mrs. Robert Winthrop, captured the C. S. A. cup in a competition that included six fine entries.

Trade Exhibits.

Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., staged two new carnations, Wm. Eccles, scarlet, and Lady Northcliffe, an English variety shown for the first time in this country. They also showed a fine tainty on that point after a fair comparison has been made of the finished wreaths as they are shown in the pictures. And if there has been any doubt in your mind as to the economy of art, surely it is removed by these telling examples.

There may be some who will see beauty in the carnation wreath and ask by what authority we pronounce the other the more beautiful, since the richer quantity of material is in the carnation wreath. Some may claim that, by their method of considering values, the carnation wreath is the better, for it required as much or more energy for its production and contains a greater amount of material.

Completely filling an immense tent pitched on the grounds of the Hotel Maryland, the display attracted thousands of lovers of plants and flowers. It lasted three days and, judging from the attendance on the opening day and evening, there are few Pasadena residents who have failed to spend at least a few minutes there.

Although the competitive classes in no case permitted exhibits of commercial growers, the latter turned out in full force and made a most creditable showing. Awards were made as a token of appreciation from the society, but no prizes were given to these displays.

Attracting much attention was a large group of rare plants, palms, ferns and cattleyas from Henry E. Huntington, staged under the direction of his landscape gardener, William Hertrich. This exhibit was given the place of honor in the center of the tent, but was not for competition, and received a certificate of merit.

Much credit for the success of the show is due to the unremitting efforts of J. B. Feldman, president, and George H. Kennedy, secretary of the society. All the classes were well filled, including the one for floral baskets from the public schools. Of course mums were the leading feature, but by no means the only things of interest.

Commercial Displays.

Certificates of merit were awarded to the following:

Kempton's Flower Shop, for display of carnations, artistically surrounded and banked with ferns and palms. A specimen Alsophila australis, the Australian tree fern, received high commendation.

Coolidge's Rare Plant Gardens, for 100 varieties of ferns and general display of foliage plants.

Campbell's Seed Store, for bulbs, gardeners' supplies, etc.

Will S. Laurie, for general display of about 800 varieties of dahlias, all of them being their own seedlings.

Mentor Nursery, Robert Pegg, proprietor, for display of foliage and flowering plants, including berried solanums, coleus, roses and palms and ferns.

The Clemence Nursery, successors to the Ross Nurseries, for large display of many varieties of bedding and pot plants, both foliage and flowering.

W. S. Round, for display of dahlias. About thirty varieties were shown, although over 600 are grown by Mr. Round on his grounds.

Edward H. Rust, proprietor of the Palm Nurseries at South Pasadena, for display of foliage plants in great variety.

Howard & Smith, Los Angeles, for large display of plants and bulbs. Especially worthy of note were dwarf lantanas in white, yellow, orange and red; giant zinnias, and two tables of dahlias.

Germain Seed Co., Los Angeles, for well arranged exhibit of plants and bulbs.

Notes of the Show.

John H. Teekamp, importer of Dutch bulbs, was present with an assortment of hyacinth and tulip bulbs, etc.

Sherman Forestry Co. had an interesting exhibit showing a new method of tree doctoring by means of a re-fenced seal of wire mesh and paraffin paper, well sanded over.

Theodore Payne, Los Angeles, showed seeds, bulbs and plants, specializing in native trees and shrubs.

Figueroa Street Nursery, Los Angeles, had rare Japanese plants, including two dwarf pines which were said to be from the Mikado's garden.

West India Gardens, of Altadena, exhibited 100 specimens, embracing twenty-three varieties of budded avocado trees, perhaps better known as the alligator pear.

Magnolia Nursery Co., of Whittier, also made a showing of avocados.

Unquestionably the sensation of the show was the announcement by Kempton's Flower Shop that 30,000 carnations would be given to lady visitors during the three days of the show. Six blooms with a little plumosus were handed to each caller and the booth was constantly surrounded by a crowd. Before the first day was over the supply ran short and Mr. Kempton phoned to Los Angeles for all the carnations the market afforded. Over 17,000 flowers had been given out when the closing hour arrived and there were still two days of the show to be reckoned with. Although the expense was considerable, Mr. Kempton says the advertising derived from the stunt was more than worth the price, as his business card was in every bunch.

Miss Sadie A. Thomas, probably the third largest chrysanthemum grower in the country, showed over 300 varieties of these blooms, ranging from pompons and singles up to the newest of the large types. Miss Thomas called particular attention to several of her own seedlings, among them Mrs. H. C. French, a large reflexed yellow, tinted with orange and lavender, and Pasadena, red on top and gold on the bottom, the colors being the reverse of Pockett's Surprise. Miss Thomas has the distinction of making chrysanthemum exhibits at seventeen shows within three weeks.

Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., sent fifteen varieties, which came through in excellent shape and were well staged by Miss Thomas.

A seedling from Mrs. H. C. French, of Oak Knoll, named Jean French, and bright yellow with red tints, was much admired. The plant grew seven feet tall, with a strong, stiff stem and the same style of foliage as General Hutton.

The fern display of Coolidge's was said to be the finest ever shown in California. This firm also had a pretty table of petunias.

Among the many new dahlias shown by Mr. Laurie, particular attention was called to Beloit, a deep red; Sandy, orange shading to salmon, and Sensation, a brilliant red tipped with white.

A beautiful specimen of Cattleya labiata was shown by the Mentor Nursery.

Coincident with the opening of the flower show, Henry E. Jaeger and Louis F. Wolfskill welcomed the public to their Orchid Flower Shop No. 2, which occupies a fine store directly opposite the Hotel Maryland and the entrance to the flower show. The new store is somewhat larger than the original one and is tastefully decorated in tan and blue, with white trimmings and white fixtures. The service counters and icebox are well to the rear, leaving the entire front of the store free for the display of flowers in baskets and cases, palms, ferns, etc. The show window is lowered almost to the level of the store floor, giving a light, roomy appearance that greatly adds to the attractiveness. LENOX, MASS.

First Show of the Season.

The Lenox Horticultural Society led off with the first exhibition of the year, opening October 24 and continuing through the two succeeding days. There was an unusually large attendance of out-of-town members of the trade, and they were unanimous in saying that it was the best show ever staged at this center of skillful gardening. The exhibits completely filled the town hall. There were five large groups, including three of miscellaneous plants and two of orchids. Instead of using tables for the cut flowers as heretofore, the vases of mums were placed on the floor. This improved the general effect of the show, but proved bad for the cut blooms themselves, as the attendance was so large that the visitors could not avoid brushing against and bruising the flowers. The groups occupied the center of the floor, the roses and carnations on the right, the specimen blooms on the left, the flowering plants being given the stage, with the vegetables and fruits upstairs. These latter always are a special feature of this show.

The exhibits are by the gardeners on the private estates of the wealthy who make their homes at Lenox, and the groups always are a striking part of the show. Probably at no other exhibition are these exhibits so rich and well arranged. A silver cup for best group was won by Fred Heeremans, gardener for W. D. Sloane, Phoenix Roebelenii, Lorraine begonias and lilies being principally used. Allen Jenkins, gardener for S. P. Schotter, was second. His group consisted principally of cocos, crotons and gloxinias. The third premium went to Edward Jenkins, gardener for Giraud Foster.

A. J. Loveless, gardener for Mrs. W. E. S. Griswold, had a fairly easy winning on group of orchids. Fred Heeremans was second. Other exhibitors of orchids were A. H. Wingett, gardener for Charles Lanier; J. J. Donahue, gardener for Mrs. M. K. Jessup, and E. J. Norman, gardener to Mrs. Geo. Westinghouse. Thos. Proctor, of the R. W. Patterson estate, had a particularly attractive exhibit showing how cattleya seedlings are raised.

The specimen blooms of chrysanthemums were generally conceded to be the best ever shown in Lenox. C. Carlquist, gardener for Mrs. Robert Winthrop captured the C. S. A. cup in a competition that included six fine entries.

Trade Exhibits.

Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., staged two new carnations, Wm. Eccles, scarlet, and Lady Northcliffe, an English variety shown for the first time in this country. They also showed a fine lot of single and pompon chrysanthemums.

From A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., came an exhibit of the new red rose, Milady, a cross of Richmond and J. B. Clark, excellent in color and fragrance. It was awarded a certificate of merit.

Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., put up a handsome vase of his new pink rose, Mrs. George Shawyer, which attracted much attention and was awarded a diploma. He also staged some of his new chrysanthemums and a pleasing exhibit of singles.

Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., showed a table of choice orchids and a number of plants suitable for conservatory use.

C. R. Johnson, grower for James D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., brought Carnation Northport, pink, which received a certificate.

Judges and Awards.

The judges were Wm. Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa.; Thomas Logan, Philadelphia; A. E. Thatcher, Bar Harbor, Me., and J. Stewart, Mamaroneck, N. Y. Their task was not an easy one, because of the uniformly high quality of the exhibits, but was accomplished with general satisfaction. The premiums were pretty evenly distributed among the gardeners for Mrs. W. E. Griswold, Giraud Foster, Mrs. Robt. Winthrop, W. D. Sloane, S. P. Shotter, Charles Lanier, W. M. Salisbury, Mrs. M. K. Jessup, Mrs. Geo. Westinghouse, R. W. Patterson, J. H. Choate, R. C. Dixey and C. S. Mellen.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A NEW DESIGN.

Recently, in answer to the request of a customer, we sent to a funeral an arrangement of flowers somewhat different from anything we have ever seen described. We thought possibly other florists might find it of interest.

The customers asked for a "crescent" that would encircle the top of a casket that opened about half-way down, the cover opening in three hinged parts, forming what would serve as a support for this crescent of flowers at the top and half or two-thirds down the sides. We did not use anything for a foundation except a heavy wire bent as seemed necessary, and we made it in loose form, much like a spray, using 150 carnations and about the same number of marguerites and a generous quantity of plumosus. It seemed to us it was a pleasing change from the large spray of flowers. Having received many helpful suggestions from others, we tell you of this that you may pass it on if it seems worth while. Z. K. Jewett & Co.

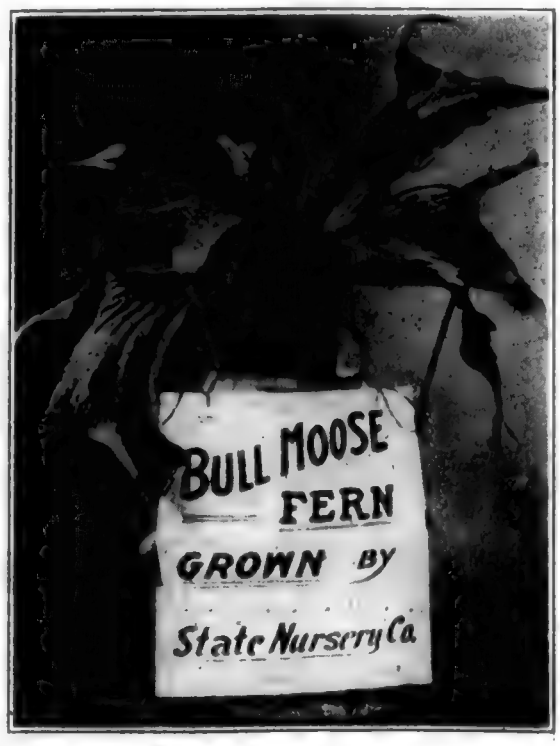
THE EXCHANGE ORDERS.

The following letter has been sent out by Irwin Bertermann, president of Florists' Telegraph Delivery:

"An organization with some sixty members who are now interchanging business is doing much toward educating the flower-buying public. Confidence inspired by the knowledge that flowers may be sent without shortcomings would certainly tend to increase the sales in this line enormously. Flowers have a peculiar advantage over all commodities in that they are used for the important events of life upon which anything else would not bear the delicacy or diplomacy possible with flowers. W. L. Rock, of Kansas City, at the recent F. T. D. meeting, spoke as follows:

"'During the year 1909, which was the year previous to the birth of this organization, if I remember right, we sent out 360 orders from our place of business, amounting to $2,950. In the year 1910 we sent out 405, aggregating $3,150. In 1911 the business aggregated $3,450, with 435 orders sent out.'

"The above statement would justify an approximate estimate of the inbound and out-bound business to be $7,000 annually. Multiply this by sixty, the membership of the F. T. D., and you have $420,000 worth of business possible by sixty members equal in size to the Rock firm. Taking 200 firms on the same basis would result in a volume of $1,400,000 worth of business possible and probable for a year."



SPECIAL SALES.

When a florist tries the department store's method of attracting attention by means of a special sale the florist should first find out just what the department store's method is.

The florist is likely to be confused when, after advertising a special sale of carnations at 29 cents per dozen, some good customer comes in the week after and wants to get in on the cut price.

The department store, as a rule, does not advertise special sales on its regular stocks—the sales are "special" all the way through; a special lot of stock is bought, special display and selling arrangements are made, special advertising is done and the special price is good so long as the special stock lasts, and no longer. After that, would-be buyers are told, not that the sale is over but that the stock is gone, and asked to look at some of the regular lines.

The florist can work it the same way. He can, if he takes the trouble, make special purchases for special sales and, once he gets the people to know that his special sales are special in fact as well as in name, he can turn a big lot of stock, frequently at a good profit.

WANTED THE ADVERTISING.

Galesburg, Ill., recently had an automobile day. I. L. Pillsbury had no auto, but he wanted to get in on the publicity that went with the parade of decorated vehicles, so he hired a car for the occasion. The accompanying illustration shows what he did with it. "The affair drew an immense crowd," he writes, "and a long line of autos were in the parade. Four prizes were offered for the best or most artistically decorated machines. On the one I entered the wheels were covered with pink cheesecloth, with white carnations. The name was made of white immortelles over pink cheesecloth. The body was trimmed with pink carnations and pink roses over white muslin and the young ladies carried American Beauty roses. Mostly natural flowers were used, but we worked in a few paper carnations where they would be most liable to wilt. It was much admired and won second prize."

MUMS AND PREPARED OAK.

The accompanying illustration is prepared from a photograph of the delivery automobile entered by the Gross Floral Co., Denver, and which received second prize in the automobile parade held October 17. Prepared oak foliage and yellow chrysanthemums made a most artistic combination. Aside from the cash prize of $75, the advertising feature was worth a great deal, and Mr. Gross feels that he was more than repaid for his trouble. The automobile used was a Ford delivery car.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA.

I have just purchased a lot of Hydrangea Otaksa in 6-inch pots. They have been grown in a slat-covered house. I want them for Easter and Memorial day sales. Will you please tell me what treatment to give them?

J. L. S.

Keep the plants fully exposed to the sun and weather, but protect from frosts, which will scorch the foliage. Run them somewhat on the dry side, in order to better ripen the wood. Easter comes early, March 23, and unless your plants were pot-grown through the summer and already have wood tolerably well ripened it would not pay to force for this early date. If well ripened, house at the middle of December. Give 50 degrees at night until well started, then 60 degrees. Water and feed freely until the flowers are well developed. For Memorial day keep the plants in a cold greenhouse or frostproof cellar, pit or shed and place in warmth about the middle of March. C. W.

THE BOSKOOP ROSE SHOW.

It was a good idea of the Tree and Plant Exchange, a society of the smaller nurserymen in Boskoop and vicinity, to show the world what Boskoop can produce in roses. The success of the 1911 exhibition encouraged them in their plans and they resolved to have an extensive exhibit of roses in the first part of July, 1913.

As a nursery town, Boskoop stands unique among nursery centers, owing to the desirable social condition of the inhabitants. Not that there is a great deal of wealth, but the extremes in riches and poverty are lacking, and the fact that almost everyone has his own small nursery places the people in an independent position.

Boskoop is divided into about 800 large and small nurseries. The smaller places are run by working people who are employed part of the week by the larger concerns, or who help their fellow men part of the week and devote the rest of the time to their own business. They generally start with a small patch of ground, which is worked at odd hours mornings and evenings; later they get an occasional day off, and finally have their own independent business. The large employers encourage this idea, as it makes the men industrious and intelligent and results in producing skilled labor.

There is another great advantage in these numerous small nurseries. The stock is grown under the personal care of the owner, and is not subject to the neglect of incapable employees. Also the quantity of the stock is better regulated, as the supply is in the hands of numerous parties, who keep it on a level with the demand. This is why Boskoop seldom has much surplus stock and has a constant supply. It is gratifying to Boskoop nurserymen that several other places have tried to copy these methods, but they lack the favorable soil and the well-regulated system of pumping the superfluous water away, and, last but not least, they lack the population of a race who have been nurserymen for more than three centuries.

Boskoop is divided, as already stated, into about 800 large and small nurseries. The larger nurseryman are generally the traders; the smaller ones are the growers who supply the dealers with stock and have no trade of their own.

The expansion of Boskoop is largely due to the increasing number of small nurseries, of which several are added each year. The rich meadows around Boskoop serve well for that purpose, and give an ideal soil for roses during the first two years. Roses root more deeply than conifers, azaleas or rhododendrons, and thus change the structure of the ground into a fine condition for other cultures. Hence the growing of roses is chiefly in the hands of the smaller nurserymen, and there is a great deal of truth in the saying, "It is the roses that made Boskoop great." This culture of roses is much more important there than is generally believed. The number of acres in cultivation is at present about 400. For stocks, Rosa rugosa is chiefly used, while thousands are grown on their own roots. The rugosa stock is particularly satisfactory. Roses grown on this stock have proved to be especially adaptable to forcing, and excel those grown on canina and Manetti.

J. H. Van Nes, who was largely responsible for the success of the great jubilee flower show in 1911, is president of the executive committee for the 1913 show, and his connection with it inspires confidence in its success. The show will be held on the Boskoop athletic ground, which covers an area of 22,500 square feet. The front and sides will be bordered by a large pergola, made of 9,000 climbing and polyantha roses. In the rear will be erected a large tent for cut roses and novelties in pots. This tent will cover 9,000 square feet. The main field will be covered with boards and white linen.

The 1911 exhibition drew an unexpected amount of attention and it is hoped that this one, held at the best time of the year, supported by numerous other exhibitions in Holland next summer and profiting by the opening of the Peace Palace, will attract a large number of visitors, especially from the United States and Canada.

Florists and nurserymen of the United States, Boskoop will welcome you in 1913. Your presence will be greatly appreciated. J. Dykhuis.

GLORY OF CINCINNATI BEGONIA.

Will you kindly give me some information in regard to the growing of begonias, especially Glory of Cincinnati? Tell me about the kind of soil and the heat, light and moisture. I have never grown any and should like to have a little information. Do they need lots of sun and water? A. Z.

These begonias like a light, not too fine, and fairly rich compost. Use plenty of flaky leaf-mold. One-half of the compost may consist of leaf-mold, and the other half may comprise equal parts of old, dry cow manure and loam, with plenty of sand added. A temperature of 60 degrees at night and full sunlight can be given from now on. When in flower, a temperature 10 degrees lower will keep the plants in better condition and give the flowers more substance. A good water supply is needed, but never to the extent of getting the soil soggy. Use some light green stakes to support the shoots now, or they may get broken. C. W.

CARNATIONS

TREATMENT FOR WEAK STEMS.

In The Review of October 10, in the last paragraph of an article under the title "Removing the Flower Stems," you gave instructions about the treatment of weak-stemmed carnations, advising the use of wood ashes at the rate of a handful to a row in a bench three feet wide. Please let me know how often this is done. All my carnations are so weak-stemmed that they bend down to the ground, though I have my house open day and night, except when the temperature falls below 48 degrees, and then I have the ventilators partly open and a little fire on. It may be that I water too heavily. On cool, dark days they seem to be straight, but just as soon as the sun comes out they droop over.

W. A. & C.

Your carnations are undoubtedly too soft, perhaps on account of a light soil and excessive watering. There should not be much danger of overwatering at this time of the year, after the plants become pretty well established, and so I am inclined to the opinion that your soil may be at fault. About two applications of wood ashes, four weeks apart, should remedy matters. Be sure you give lots of ventilation when the weather will permit, and keep your night temperature down close to 50 degrees.

WEAK GROWTH OF BEACONS.

Kindly advise me what to do with a bench of Beacons which suffered a bad attack of what I thought was thrips. I now have the insects under control, but the shoots look weak and spindly. I have no other reds to replace them with. Is my trouble thrips or something else? The pest is a tiny black fly; could it be a fly from the manure? Cow manure was used. What is the best way to get rid of this pest? I cannot see that it does much harm.

I have thought of clearing out this bench of Beacons and planting lettuce instead. Could I grow lettuce and Enchantress carnations in the same house without bad effect on the carnations, and how would a temperature of 50 degrees suit both? If the planting of lettuce is advisable, kindly mention the names of one or two good varieties. I am located in northwestern Oregon.

A. A. G.

I hardly think that the insect you describe can be thrips. You need make no mistake about this, however, because the presence of this pest is invariably detected by the disfiguring of the blooms. Red varieties will show white spots around the edges of the petals, while other colors will show dead brown spots. These flies were most likely brought in with the manure and I imagine they are quite harmless.

I do not know much about your market for red carnations, but it is generally considered that unless a red carnation will give at least a fairly good account of itself by the holidays, it is not worth growing. There is no question about the midwinter months being the best for the sale of all kinds of red flowers, though we sell a fair quantity of red carnations here, right up to the close of the season.

Should you decide to throw out that bench of Beacons, you need not hesitate to plant it with lettuce. It will thrive in the same house with Enchantress and not harm the carnations in the least. As to the best varieties of lettuce, I can give you no advice. Consult the seedsman from whom you procure your seed. He will advise you correctly.

A BRANCHED HARRISII.

I am sending herewith a photograph of a lily that happened out of a batch of Harrisii with us last winter. You will notice that it is branched. There were five branches on this plant, and every branch bore buds, but only two of them matured or developed perfect flowers. There were twenty-three buds in all at the time they were large enough to count. At that stage of their growth I was taken sick and it was left in inexperienced hands, with the result that the buds all blasted except seven, which developed to perfect blooms. It is a question with me whether or not I could have developed all the buds if I had been able to grow it all the way through, but they were all good when I had to give up.

The following may not be of interest, but I give it to show the peculiar character of this bulb. It was planted along with the rest of the batch and was brought in at the same time. At that time it was about two inches above the soil. After that it grew about an inch and then stopped and looked much like a diseased lily, and it was set aside to be dumped out at least three times in as many weeks, but it seemed as though fate was with it and it was not to be dumped. Finally I noticed that it was beginning to grow again and looked peculiar, so I began to take care of it and nurse it along. At this time the rest of the batch were eight to twelve inches high, and the way this one grew after this time you can imagine when at Easter it was almost as tall as any of them and in bloom, too, with the rest.

HOUSING DUTCH BULBS.

September 17 we planted Paper Whites in flats and placed them in a coldframe, covering them with three inches of soil. The weather in this part of Iowa has not been cold, and they are up and showing a couple of inches above the covering; no glass has been put on. What will be the best course to follow in order to get a few in flower as soon as possible? Should they be left out there as long as the weather is so fine? The houses have a temperature of nearly 100 degrees at midday without any fire heat. Would that not be forcing them too hard? We intend to bring them all into the shed when we have steady cold weather.

After reading an article in The Review of September 26, page 10, on Dutch bulbs, we put some flats of bulbs in the dark end of the shed. Do these need any covering of any kind? The flats are level full of soil and the bulbs are almost or quite hidden, but they, too, are showing a little green.

P. G.

The Paper White narcissi can be taken in batches into a greenhouse with a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. Do not give them a warm house, or the flowers will lack substance. House a batch every week or ten days, to keep up a steady supply. As long as the weather remains so warm the plants should come along almost fast enough in frames, but they should not be exposed to any frost. A frostproof shed or cellar is a suitable place in which to store these and other bulbs.

Bulbs such as tulips, narcissi other than Paper Whites, and hyacinths do much better if covered with coal ashes, loam or sand until they are sprouted at least two inches. If left exposed to the light, they are pretty sure to be dwarf and lacking in stem. The early batches of Dutch bulbs should, after housing, be placed in a dark, warm case, to draw them up somewhat. This is not necessary, however, with the Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites.

SPIRÆAS FOR EASTER.

I have some spiræas planted out that were never forced. Kindly tell how the treatment should be for them.

Leave the spiræas outside until they have had one or two good freezings. Then lift and pot the clumps. If these are large they can be divided so as to fit 6-inch and 7-inch pots. Use a sharp spade for this work. After potting, keep cold until wanted for forcing. A little frost will be of benefit to them. You should start forcing these by the middle of January, if for Easter, in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night. Spiræas want an abundant water supply. Be careful of them when fumigating, as the foliage is easily scorched. Stand on the ground or cover with newspapers, if you must fumigate.

NOT A BULL MOOSE.

No, the animal shown in the illustration is not a bull moose; it is not a moose of any sort and has never mingled in politics, though its maker, Herbert Jarrett, of Kansas City, Mo., remarks that it might please the public better if it really were a representation of the quadruped chosen as the symbol of the Progressive party. It is a horse with a rather flimsy skeleton of wire and an outer covering of growing cypress vine. This imitation horse, the horse of wire and clinging vegetation, has stood all summer by the grave of a real horse, the owner of which is a great admirer of horses, especially of the one faithful horse that now lies under the sod. Or perhaps it lies under the star-shaped flower bed that is seen in the foreground of the picture.

"I have been complimented on the animal many times during the summer," says Mr. Jarrett, and then he adds the comment already referred to, as if his pleasure were tinged with just a shade of regret—"but it might please the public better if it were a bull moose."

A NEW FERN DISH.

Victor Schousboe, of Westerly, R. I., has invented and patented a fern dish which, he believes, has special merits that should attract favorable notice from his fellow florists, though he also says that he "invites any criticism that may be forthcoming."

"The ordinary fernery," he states, "is too crowded to properly display the fern foliage. Take an individual plant of any one of the different varieties of table ferns and see if its foliage is not of such beauty as to deserve a better setting than the common fern dish affords it."

With reference to his own fern dish, he claims that "it is a design of merit; it displays all kinds of table ferns to the best advantage; it lends itself readily to a variation in the display of ferns, and it is bound to attract attention and promote the sale of table ferns."

The fernery illustrated here measures 12x18x3½ inches. It accommodates two 3-inch ferns, four 2½-inch ferns and one 4-inch pot for the center, or a duck pond, as shown in the picture. The ferns, he says, are taken out of the pots, the ball wrapped in damp moss and then put in its proper place. The gravel walks are sunk one-fourth inch, so as to hold the sand and keep it from spreading over the surface.

THE BEST EVERGREEN VINE.

The trade will do well to work up stock of Euonymus radicans and especially of the variety vegetus. Such press work as the vine every now and then receives is sure to increase the call for it. For instance, in the November Garden Magazine Wilhelm Miller gives the "evergreen bittersweet," or climbing euonymus, a big boost, calling it the best evergreen vine for America. "In the first place," he said, "it is evergreen, and therefore has an obvious advantage over deciduous vines in being beautiful 365 days of the year, instead of two weeks or seven months.

"Secondly, it is accommodating as to soils, climate, exposures; is easy to grow; and will trail over the ground or climb to the noble height of thirty feet.

"Thirdly, it has an immense advantage over ivy in being much hardier, growing twenty feet high in New England, where ivy can be grown only as a ground-cover.

"Fourthly, its superb red fruits, which closely resemble those of our common wild bittersweet, seem divinely appointed to redeem our American winters from their bleak, ugly and cheerless moods.

"And fifthly, it promises to develop a strong American character, becoming as universal and as dear to the American heart as ivy is in Europe. For, although it is a foreign plant, it comes from the closely allied climate of Japan, and it likes our conditions so well that it has already started to run wild in America, sowing its own seeds and making great pictures of immortal beauty, as at Swan Point cemetery, Providence, R. I.

"As in England every home and every church is enriched, dignified and ennobled by ivy, so every American home will come to be connected so closely with the evergreen bittersweet that it will be impossible to think of one without the other.

"The plain Euonymus radicans is better than any variegated variety, because it bears fruit and is hardier. The finest variety of the climbing bittersweet that I have seen is the round-leaved form known as Euonymus radicans, var. vegetus. Some claim that it is only a fruiting form, and that if you plant the common E. radicans, it will eventually produce branches like vegetus. But it is certainly distinct from Carrieri, for the latter has elliptical leaves, and vegetus is said to produce heavy crops of showy berries even on small plants—a most desirable trait."

WISLEY'S WIGWAM.

The accompanying illustration shows the establishment of Claude Wisley, at Murphysboro, Ill. The two houses each are 28x150. They are of modern construction, the upper house being used for roses and the lower house for carnations. In the field below the houses the Skinner watering system has been installed, with a gasoline engine and pump in the boiler house as the means of operating the irrigation. In the foreground of the picture Mr. Wisely stands at the right. At the left is Peter Eriksen, his grower.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lorraine Begonias.

The winter-flowering begonias have now arrived at their season of most rapid growth, and plants which seem to stand still during the hot summer months are now growing apace. Unless these are wanted for hanging plants, staking must be attended to, or the plants will soon become bent and twisted. Use thin stakes and they should always be painted green, not only for begonias, but all other flowering plants. Nothing so much disfigures an otherwise attractive plant as stakes which in size and color are out of all proportion to the needs of the plant and depreciate rather than appreciate its value.

Lorraines and Cincinnati begonias are now to be seen in the markets as early as the middle of September, but it is at Thanksgiving and Christmas that they are in the greatest demand. No shade should now be given them, and the night temperature should not exceed 60 degrees. When in flower, 10 degrees lower is better in every way. When the pots are well filled with roots, feed regularly, but only give mild doses. Liquid cow or sheep manure in which some soot has been diluted makes an excellent food, and one which will keep the foliage a beautiful dark green color.

Azalea Indica.

The imported azaleas have now been coming to hand for some weeks and are this season of a good color and well budded. As they always come with good balls of earth, they can be kept for some weeks, if necessary, in a cold greenhouse or frostproof shed before potting, but the sooner they can be potted the better they will do. Always soak the balls thoroughly after unpacking and when potting remember that it is hardly possible to firm the soil too hard about these or any other hard-wooded plants. While they are grown in sandy peat in Belgium, they grow well here in a mixture of loam, leaf-mold and sand. Such varieties as Deutsche Perle, Hexe or Firefly and Mme. Petrick, which are wanted in bloom from Thanksgiving to Christmas, should go into a warm, moist house at once and be kept freely syringed. All others should be kept as cool as possible. Anything short of actual freezing will suit them.

Stevias.

While stevias are tender and easily injured by frost, they, on the other hand, cannot tolerate a warm greenhouse, and flowers grown in a high temperature are vastly inferior to such as are opened in a cold house. This flower, while common and cheap, is almost indispensable to the country florist in bouquets, wreaths and in fact all work, and it is best to move a batch of plants into a temperature of 50 degrees every week, moving to cooler quarters when opening, in order to keep up a regular supply until February.

Erica Melanthera.

There are few more valuable hard-wooded plants than Erica melanthera. While it may be had in flower at Thanksgiving, or even earlier, it may easily be held until Easter unless the latter festival comes unusually late. Plants kept in pots all summer will flower a little earlier than such as were planted out and potted up before the advent of frost, although a few degrees of frost do not harm these ericas at all. Ericas, like acacias, dislike a warm house and are best grown cool, but in order to forward plants a little some of the more advanced can be given a sunny, airy house with a minimum temperature of 50 degrees. Do not spray them overhead, as suggested for azaleas, and be sure that they are never allowed to become dry at the root.

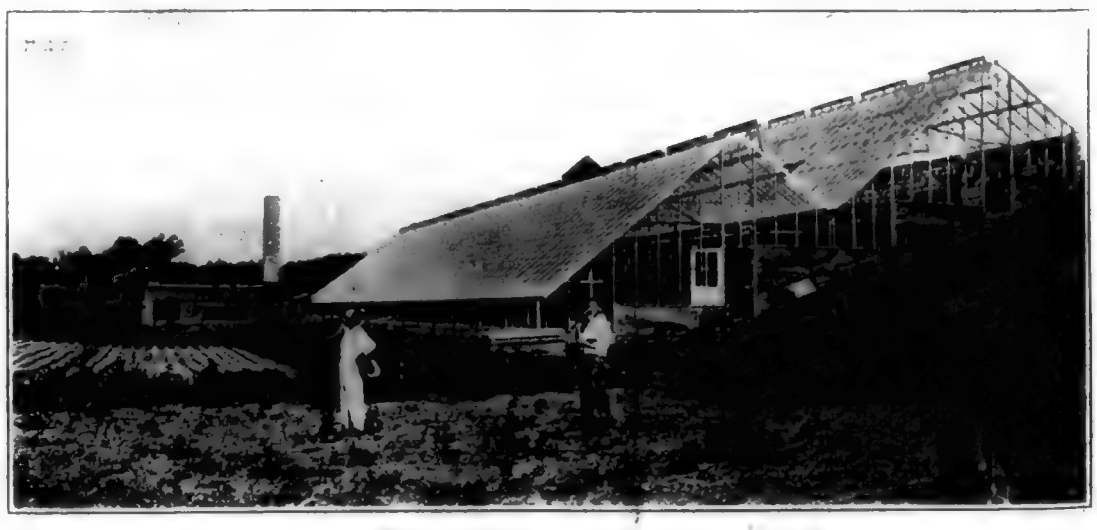
Berried Plants.

It is always easy to color up the berries on the Jerusalem cherries, Solanum Capsicastrum, by the middle of November, and by keeping the plants cool they will be in fine shape for Christmas. Christmas peppers, if not yet well colored, should be given a warm, sunny house, and the same applies to the slow growing but beautiful and popular ardisias. These latter plants, unless they have the berries well ripened, will never sell at the holidays, and of course at any other season they are little in demand. Therefore, if they seem backward, give them more heat now rather than try to force them just prior to the time they are needed.

Small Ferns.

It hardly pays the average small grower to raise his ferns from spores, as they can be bought so cheaply from a number of large specialists, and if a good stock for the winter has not yet been purchased, order the same now before cold weather arrives, so that you will have an ample supply when your customers want their fern dishes replenished. A few good ferns for dishes are: Aspidium Tsussimense, Cyrtomium falcatum, Pteris Mayii, P. magnifica, P. Wimsetti, P. serrulata cristata, P. Wilsoni, Adiantum cuneatum, A. Croweanum and some of the small davallias.

Calceolarias.



More rapid growth will now be noticed on those popular spring flowering plants, the calceolarias. You can scarcely grow them too cool; 40 to 45 degrees at night is quite warm enough, and nothing beats a coldframe for some time yet, if the necessary mats, etc., are convenient for using on frosty nights. Never attempt to grow these in a warm house, or they will speedily become weak and sickly and the prey of their arch enemy, green aphis. Use a light compost when potting. One containing half loam and flaky leaf-mold, with a little old cow manure and sand added, will suit young plants. The leaf-mold can be reduced and more cow manure used at the final potting. Spray the plants over on the mornings of clear days and let them have the full sun from this time on. For green aphis spray or fumigate once a week. I like spraying the best.

Coreopsis.

For spring flowering, particularly for use at Memorial day, Coreopsis grandiflora is useful. Plants which can be dug up and potted now, or placed several together in deep boxes, grown cool until after Christmas and then placed in a temperature of 50 degrees and treated about the same as Canterbury bells, will give a surprising quantity of good, long-stemmed flowers, which will be found useful in bouquet work. Use fairly large pots, nothing less than 8-inch, and 9-inch or 10-inch are better if the plants are large. They are strong growers and feeders, and small pots, while they may support them, dry out too quickly and give shorter stems.

Schizanthus Wisetonensis.

In the rush of other duties, do not overlook the schizanthus. The earliest batch should now be in 4-inch or 5-inch pots and should have had one pinching to keep the plants stocky. Never allow the plants to become potbound while growing on. Always grow as cool and airy as possible and avoid the use of hydrocyanic acid gas where they are being grown, as the foliage is a little tender and if at all scorched the plants are unsalable. This is a suitable time to make an additional sowing for early spring flowering. Sow thinly in pans or flats and transplant just as soon as they can be handled. Always grow as near glass as possible, or they will get badly drawn.

Hydrangeas.

Keep hydrangeas fully exposed to the sun and only give glass protection to ward off sharp frost. Reduce the water supply gradually to assist in maturing the wood. As we may now get quite sharp frosts at any time, be careful not to expose the hydrangeas to it, especially if the wood and foliage are soft and green. Pot-grown plants always have harder and better matured wood than such as are lifted from the field.

AT LE ROY IN ILLINOIS.

The accompanying illustration of the greenhouses and residence of L. L. Fry, of Le Roy, Ill., will be considered by many as typical of the old-time florists' establishments. It is in such places as this that men grow plants and flowers as much for the love of the work as for the commercial possibilities that are in it. And if one be not possessed of the spirit of unrest, there is no finer situation or occupation.

LILIES FOR FALL FLOWERING.

In 1913 I should like to grow two benches of Easter lilies and should like to plant them in the beds of my greenhouse. When must I plant them to have them in bloom for August or September? I take my sweet peas out of the beds June 15. Can I plant the lilies right in or must I wait a week or two?

J. G.

Your lilies would do better grown in pots rather than benches. The trouble in having them planted out is that they will all come in together, practically when it is often difficult to sell them. If grown in 5-inch or 6-inch pots you can easily retard a part and have them come on in succession. For flowering in August and September you must use cold storage bulbs and these should be potted or planted not later than the middle of May. June 15 is rather late. If started then they would not be in flower before the latter part of September.

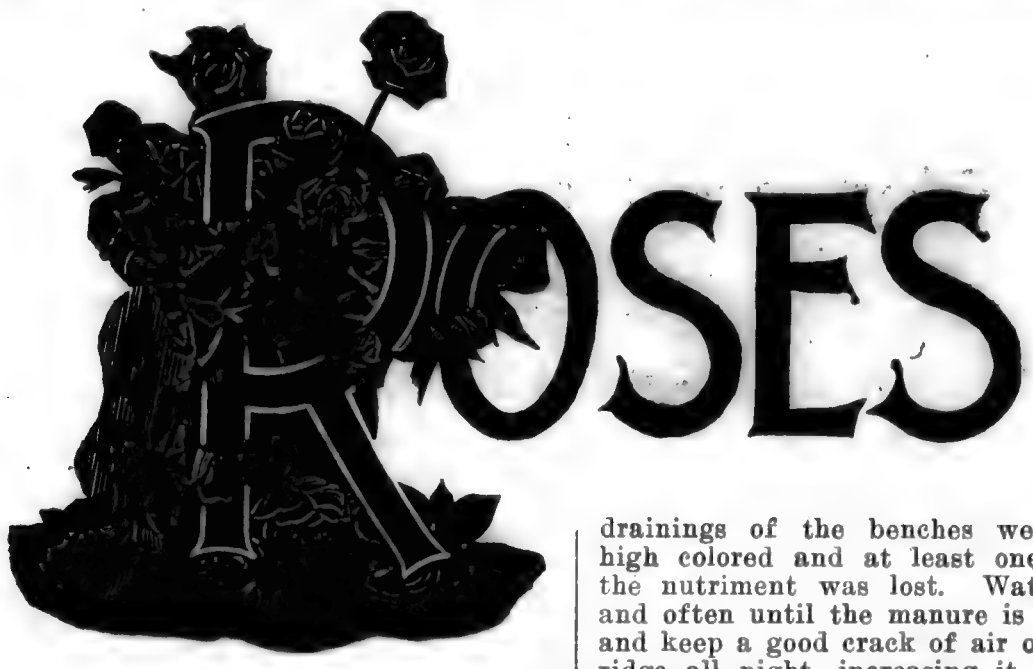
AGAPANTHUS UMBELLATUS.

As Used for Cut Flowers.

Probably one of the last things that would have occurred to an old-time florist would be the use of the old African lily, Agapanthus umbellatus, for cutting. When one thinks of this grand old herbaceous plant, it is usually in connection with large tubs or pots standing on a lawn or in a conservatory, and many will remember the back-breaking job of taking them in for the winter and outside for the summer.

At the H. N. Gage Co.'s place at Signal Hill, near Long Beach, Cal., about 20,000 of this old plant and its varieties are grown for cutting and the large umbels of white or blue flowers sell well during July and August. The plant is a native of the Cape of Good Hope and so is perfectly hardy in southern California. It is a strong grower and needs rich soil, plenty of water and full exposure to sunlight, and that is about all. It is of the easiest possible culture and not at all fastidious as to what it is fed on, provided the larder is always kept well supplied. It has practically no insect enemies. Where the flowers have been tried commercially they are always in demand. While it may not pay in the north and east, where fire heat or storage for the bulbs in winter would have to be given, it surely does pay where it thrives outdoors.

Some Leading Varieties.



There are several varieties of this plant, including the following: A. umbellatus is the typical form, which has been known to gardeners for over two centuries; the flowers are produced in loose umbels on tall spikes from the center of the young growth and are bright blue in color. A. umbellatus albidus has flowers slightly smaller than those of the type, and pure white. A. umbellatus flore pleno is a double flowered form, in which the flowers are blue and last longer than those of the type. Occasionally a white double is seen, but it is rare. A. umbellatus Leichtlinii has more compact spikes and does not grow so tall as the type, but the flowers are a deeper blue; it is a desirable kind. A. u. maximus is larger in all its parts than the type and also has an albino form. A. u. minor is a dwarf variety, with slender spikes of deep blue flowers. A. u. Mooreanus is also dwarf and of upright habit, while A. u. variegatus is a form with white leaves, streaked with green; an elegant border plant in warm localities.

Englewood, N. J.—T. W. Lydecker has added a handsome auto delivery car to use in his business. Mr. Lydecker has this year gone into the pot plant branch, having previously grown only carnations and roses. He has also a fine bench of Bonnaffon mums and a bed of single violets, all of which are doing nicely in spite of the warm weather.

THE EVERY-DAY WORK.

A Test of the Grower's Skill.

The grower who had foresight enough during the hot summer days to keep the foliage of his young Beauty plants hard and substantial by admitting ample air and avoiding too heavy watering and spraying is in a decidedly better position now than he who kept his houses close and moist, encouraging the plants in every way to make a soft growth. Anyone of any experience in rose growing likes to start the winter with the foliage robust and thick, even if the plants are small. The pale green, anemic looking leaves, on long, slender stems, do not give promise of any great things in regard to bloom and they are likely to get worse as the dark winter days come on.

Fortunate, indeed, are the southern growers who can depend on sunny days right up to and after Christmas, for, no matter what variety of rose is handled, there is a natural awakening after the turn of the year and the plants thrive with little or no care much better than during the last two months of the year. It has been truly said that the best test of a grower of roses is the condition of his plants during these two months, and those plants will always look best that have been carefully grown earlier in the season.

The High Cost of Rose Food.

Plants in the healthy condition just described are now hungry for food of a manurial character. They have in a great measure used up that contained in the soil provided at benching time; this will be run through with roots and each root will have live, feeding tips, ready to make use of the food provided. Good cow manure is more and more difficult to procure each year in most places, but there is nothing that can take its place as a food for roses. It is cool, yet full of nutriment, and, although some folks talk glibly of analyzing it and applying the chemical constituents, no chemical concoction can ever equal it. No matter what it costs, then, if within reason, the price must be paid, for it is sure to come back in an increased cut of fine, high grade roses.

As soon as the manure is applied to a bench, it should be watered; it should not be washed away, as is done in so many places. Frequently, in walking through neighboring plants, I have seen the section men soaking the water through the fresh-laid manure until the drainings of the benches were quite high colored and at least one-half of the nutriment was lost. Water little and often until the manure is all gone and keep a good crack of air on at the ridge all night, increasing it early in the morning and using sufficient steam to maintain the temperature.

Rational Ventilation.

It would be a good thing were more attention paid to instructing young men in the art of rational ventilation. In my young days we grew considerable fruit under glass and it was frequently a close race between the early morning sun and the man on duty to get to the house first. Modern methods of heating and the employment of night firemen have done away with a good deal of this kind of drudgery, and there is danger now of the men going to the other extreme and neglecting the ventilation until the cutting is done, then rushing on full air to lower the temperature.

A natural and slow rise of temperature should be the aim of the grower, and this cannot be attained without a good deal of care on his part. Never wait for the temperature to reach a certain point before opening the vents. This has been the cause of more burned foliage and more insect attacks than any other item of mismanagement. Put the air on gradually in the morning at this season and take it off the same way in the afternoon. Never wait until a chill in the air warns you that the sun has left the house, but take a little of the air off before the sun has lost its power and let the temperature decline as gradually in the afternoon as it rises in the morning.

The Night Temperature.

As to the night temperature, a good deal of misconception exists. Some men pin their faith to an exact degree of heat every night, regardless of outside temperature or other conditions. It is much better to be too precise in this way than too careless, but we often have mild nights at this time of year when the outside temperature is actually higher than that essential to success in rose growing, and it is folly to think that the temperature should be exactly the same on such a night as on one when a high wind and sharp frost combine to thwart the efforts of the night fireman.

Again, what is right in New York or Maine may not be right in California or Florida. Hard and fast rules are the signs of incompetency; the experienced man knows to the full the truth of the old saw that "circumstances alter cases."

ROSE CROPS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Will you kindly inform me through The Review when Beauties and Killarneys ought to be pinched in order to have them in for Christmas? Also what is the proper night temperature for Killarneys in cold weather?

J. C. S.

Allow two clear months for the Killarneys from the time of pinching until they are wanted in flower. For Beauties allow eight or ten days longer. Of course, weather conditions may affect these spaces of time to some extent. A temperature of 56 to 58 degrees at night suits Killarney in cold weather, the lower temperature for cold nights.

C. W.

HOW'S THIS FOR HIGH?

The following is scissored from the Horticultural Trade Journal (English):

"Killarney, as a forcing rose, has for years held pride of place among pink shades in U. S. A. It is the beau ideal, and every new variety that comes into American hands is measured up against Killarney, which for cropping, outdistances anything sent out.

"Killarney's position in America is, however, threatened, and by another Irish variety. McGredy & Son, it will be remembered, exhibited Colleen last summer, and to the casual eye it looked like Killarney. When, however, E. G. Hill said that Colleen was great, I took it for granted that he knew more about it than I did. E. G. Hill is not the man to buy a pig in a poke and now that we know he has secured the American rights of Colleen, and that it will not be distributed here until his firm is ready to do likewise in U. S. A., one must take it as gospel that Colleen is a winner. It has been tested thoroughly in America, and it has proved to be the finest forcer ever sent to the States. By some Americans it is considered the rose of the century, from the bread and butter point of view, of course.

"Colleen has proved a stronger grower than Killarney; it is practically mildewproof, flowers larger, deeper and almost twice as full, while the color is brighter and petals more massive. It will be interesting to see whether Colleen will do here, what Killarney never could, and that is shake up Mme. A. Chatenay. It is a curious fact that whereas Killarney is a trump in U. S. A., Chatenay is useless, coming bad in color, and long and weak-necked. Over here, Chatenay is premier pink, and of a color that makes American visitors sigh for its like in U. S. A. Killarney, on the other hand, is thin and poor in color, while it has an open invitation to mildew."

BRIDES AND MAIDS.

I am sending you two rose buds, Bride and Maid, which appear to be diseased. Will you please let me know what the disease is, and a remedy for it? We are growing in the same house Killarney and White Killarney, My Maryland and Richmond. All, including the Brides and Maids, have made splendid growth since being benched, and only the Brides and Maids are affected. W. C. M.

Given similar treatment to the other roses named, there is no good reason why the Brides and Maids should not be equally healthy. Few growers now handle these two erstwhile favorites, and their condition is most probably due to a natural running out of your stock. Probably a change of stock would effect an improvement, but Killarney and White Killarney are so much superior in every way that you would do well to drop the older sorts. In the wholesale markets they are now almost unsalable since the advent of the various Killarneys, My Maryland and other sorts.

A PROFITABLE CROP.

Sweet peas have proved one of the most successful crops with John Garofano, proprietor of the Metropolitan Greenhouses, at Hackensack, N. J., and he is now starting for another season with every anticipation of continued good results. The accompanying illustration shows one of his sweet pea houses photographed on St. Patrick's day of this year. The seeds were planted in 2-inch pots October 1, 1911, and the plants were moved to the solid beds in the greenhouse November 15. He picked his first flowers January 15 and had a large and profitable crop until the end of the season.

TEMPERATURE FOR SNAPDRAGON.

Please tell me what temperature I should have in my greenhouse to succeed with snapdragons. Last year I planted some in a house held at a temperature of 40 to 65 degrees. They grew five feet high, but bore no flowers.

J. M.

Snapdragons require a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. It should not go above the latter figure on any account, and the cooler they are grown the sturdier will the spikes be. However, I find that for winter flowering, if kept between 48 and 50 degrees, they do well. Give the plants a light, sunny house, use good soil and ventilate freely. Avoid heavy fumigation, as snapdragons are a little delicate and the tops are rather easily scorched. In this way you should be able to grow first-class snapdragons, no matter whether the plants are raised from seeds or cuttings. C. W.

The Market.

Continued warm weather and heavy shipments of all kinds of flowers with but a moderate demand were features of last week's market. Only on one day, October 26, was the demand at all good. The present week opens with an overstocked market and no special relief would seem to be in sight, at least before the chrysanthemum avalanche somewhat subsides.

Mums are now at their flood tide. Early varieties are over, but the supply of midseason and late ones is excessive. Good Bonnaffon sells well, as does Ivory. Eaton is not popular. Chrysolora is an excellent yellow. Elise Papworth, a grand white, makes as high as $4 per dozen, the top price here this season. Carnations are selling low and are now overplentiful, although the quality is much improved. Roses are fine, but many have to be cleared at low rates. Mme. Charles Russell still holds the center of the stage, but Richmond, Bulgarie, Beauty and Killarney of good quality are in demand, also the yellow varieties.

Violets are in heavy supply and low prices have prevailed, in some cases as low as $1 and $1.50 per thousand. For the best flowers 35 cents and 50 cents per hundred is secured. Valley sold fairly well the last week, also Cosmos Lady Lenox, indoor grown. Cattleya labiata is abundant; so is Oncidium Rogersii. Cypripediums are coming in more freely, as are gardenias. Miscellaneous flowers are hard to move, but there is a fair call for green stock.

Flower Market Annual Meetings.

The annual meeting and dinner of the Boston Flower Exchange was held at the Quincy House October 26. About 100 stockholders and invited guests were present and the dinner was the best yet served. An efficient orchestra furnished music.

At the business session W. E. Stickel presided in his usual happy manner. The treasurer's report showed receipts for the past year and cash on hand totaling $17,757.60; running expenses, $9,622.40, and, after payment of a ten per cent dividend and purchase of over $6,000 worth of stock, the sum of $1,007.14 remained on hand. The net gain in 1910, 1911 and 1912 is $8,671.83.

A. S. Parker, of Stoneham, was elected a director in place of Thomas Pegler. Others elected were Wm. Nicholson, S. J. Goddard, E. A. Peirce, Alex. Montgomery, W. C. Stickel, L. H. Mann and Geo. Cartwright. It was unanimously voted to send an invitation to the Boston Coöperative Market to join in making one big wholesale market at Winthrop Square. This was forwarded by special messenger.

The directors were empowered to issue 100 additional shares of treasury stock. A. S. Parker made a neat and humorous speech in acceptance of his election as director. A straw vote was taken to show the presidential preferences of the members in the coming national election and when the vote showed Roosevelt leading all other candidates combined there was great applause. Fine yellow chrysanthemums from S. J. Goddard decorated the tables.

The Boston Coöperative Market held its annual meeting the same evening at the American, serving a first-class dinner as an innovation. There was a full attendance, including several ladies The treasurer's receipts showed a cash balance of $1,395.51 for the year and total assets now are $4,843.06. John McFarland presided at the business session and appointed W. H. Elliott toastmaster. Addresses were made by Messrs. Robert Cameron and W. N. Craig for the press. Julius H. Zinn spoke ably for the retailers and Edward Wood, James Wheeler and others for the growers.

The Boston Co-operative Flower Market Dinner, October 26, 1912.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, John McFarland; clerk, W. W. Tailby; treasurer, D. Carmichael; directors, J. McFarland, D. Carmichael, W. W. Tailby, L. E. Small, Robert Montgomery, W. H. Elliott, James Wheeler, Edward Wood, N. F. Comley.

The communication from the Boston Flower Exchange, asking the market to come in with them at Winthrop Square, was read and discussed, being referred to the directors. An orchestra from J. Breck & Sons', consisting of Messrs. J. L. Russell, R. Montgomery and Lester Glenn, furnished excellent music. The tables were well decorated by the members.

Various Notes.

S. J. Goddard is cutting some handsome Elise Papworth chrysanthemums. This is a splendid white. Chrysolora is also a great favorite with him.

J. T. Butterworth's crop of Cattleya labiata is late this season, as usual, and he says he will have a heavy cut when other growers' crops are over. He has a fine crop of Oncidium Rogersii.

Frank P. Putnam, of Lowell and North Tewksbury, has a fine selection of white, pink and yellow pompon chrysanthemums in addition to high grade carnations.

P. & W. O. Jahn, of Bridgewater, are strong on Pink Delight and White Wonder carnations. Their Bonnaffon mums are extra fine, as are those of H. Waldecker, of Braintree.

There will be a notable array of speakers at the silver jubilee banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club November 11. Tickets are selling fast and early application should be made for what are left. Mayor Fitzgerald and Governor Foss will both be present.

Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, grows yellow marguerites well. Among his carnations he has batches of two seedlings. One of these, a light pink Winona sport, is fine and will be exhibited at one of the club meetings soon.

Nelson & Johnson, of South Framingham, in addition to their usual high grade carnations are this season sending splendid Princess of Wales violets to W. A. Hastings.

John Barr, of South Natick, has this season White Wonder, White Enchantress, White Perfection and Queen as white carnations. He has great success with Pink Delight and Beacon. His new variegated seedling, Mrs. B. P. Cheney, is planted heavily and doing better than ever. St. Nicholas is the only novelty he is trying this season.

E. K. Mandy, of Reading, is a leader with both pink and white greenhouse-grown cosmos.

Boiler Drops in Meinhart's Greenhouse.

The Hamburg-American S. S. Co. will put two 16,000-ton steamers on the Hamburg-Southampton-Boston service, commencing early in May, 1913, and vessels of 22,000 and 25,000 tons are promised for the following year. A Swedish-American line is arranging for a service, as are several other steamship lines. A new $3,000,000 drydock will soon be built and Boston will then be able to dock the biggest vessels afloat. This boom will all spell more business for Boston florists.

W. N. Craig.

Martin F. Lally states that the report that he had engaged with Zinn is an error.

WRECKED BY A FLYING BOILER.

J. E. Meinhart, of Webb City, Mo., had a narrow escape from a horrible death a few days ago, when a boiler exploded at the Joe Lewis mine, on South Liberty street, about 800 feet from Mr. Meinhart's greenhouses. The force of the explosion carried the main body of the boiler, which weighed about 4,000 pounds, to the greenhouses, where the huge flying cylinder crashed through a carnation house and fell only a few feet from where Mr. Meinhart was working. Two men employed about the boiler room at the mines were instantly killed, and another man, Joe Lewis, was knocked down and badly bruised.

Mr. Meinhart knew nothing of the explosion until the boiler struck the house, falling near him, enveloped in a sheet of steam and heat. The hot metal ignited the framework of the benches, and it was necessary to use the hose to extinguish the flames. A considerable part of the house, of course, was completely wrecked, and a large area of surrounding glass was broken. The loss was estimated at $600. The necessary repairs were promptly attended to and Mr. Meinhart reports that the houses are in good shape again.

NEW ENGLANDERS PROTEST.

Quarantine Unnecessary and Word Objectionable.

Before the Federal Horticultural Board, at Washington, D. C., Wednesday, October 30, the nurserymen of New England not only objected to the proposed quarantine of certain parts of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut to prevent the spread of gypsy moth, but protested against the use of the word "quarantine" in connection with the regulation of the nursery trade. President W. H. Wyman, of the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association, put it succinctly when he said that to the ear of the buyer the word quarantine sounds like "smallpox." Mr. Wyman said that it was greatly to be deplored that so much publicity had been given the present hearing and to the talk of quarantine. He said it puts a quietus on business. Reports are current of instances where buyers have been advised by misinformed or prejudiced parties that no nursery stock should be bought in eastern Massachusetts because of the possibilities of infection. Mr. Wyman stated that his firm formerly sold each year several thousand dollars' worth of stock at Lenox, Mass., but that it now sells nothing there on account of the scare.

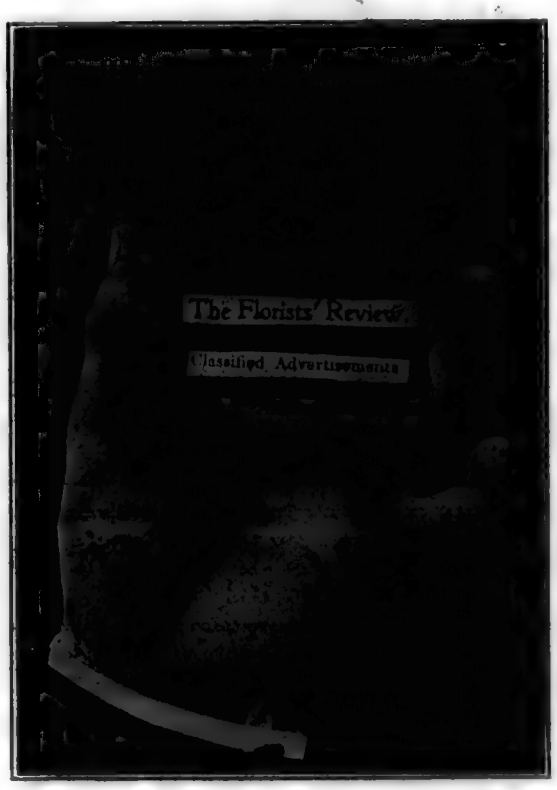
There were in all about forty present at the hearing, which was before the full board, consisting of W. A. Orton, Peter Bisset, A. F. Burgess and George B. Sudworth. Among those who spoke either for or against the proposed quarantine of certain sections of New England against the gypsy moth and the brown-tail moth were J. K. M. L. Farquhar, A. C. Burnham, Alton Briggs, W. H. Wyman, Curtis Nye Smith and W. J. Stewart, all of Boston; W. A. Vanicek, of the Rhode Island Nurseries, Newport, R. I.; W. E. Britton, State Entomologist, New Haven, Conn.; C. R. Pettis, Superintendent of State Forests, Albany, N. Y.; George Atwood, Chief of the Bureau of Horticulture, Albany, N. Y.; J. P. Buckley, Commissioner of Agriculture, Maine; W. C. Okane, of New Hampshire, and A. T. Fernald, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass.

The nurserymen strongly opposed the quarantine, producing evidence to show that the gypsy moth is not distributed by the shipment of nursery stock from Massachusetts. The nurserymen also object to the interference of the federal government in the matter of combating these pests for fear that the state of Massachusetts will withdraw its support, arguing that the state work is superior to what the federal government could do. It was argued that the government should restrict other shipments, such as railroad ties, telegraph poles, old boxes and the movement of lumber trains, automobiles and other conveyances which have been proven to carry the eggs of the pests. Dr. L. O. Howard, of the Department of Agriculture, paid tribute to the efficient work of the Massachusetts department toward eliminating the pests and said he believed the state inspection certificates are sufficient. The members of the board asked numerous questions, from which it appears that the board will probably accept the Massachusetts inspections as final.

Discussion of the scope of what the quarantine may cover included absolute quarantine within the gypsy moth territory of Christmas trees and decorative evergreens, with no restrictions of movement of trees and greens not going beyond the restricted territory; the inspection and certification of all nursery stock within the territory infested with either the gypsy moth or brown-tail moth. It was maintained that it has proven practically impossible to inspect Christmas trees and evergreens, so the quarantine against parts of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine will stand with respect to Christmas greens. The Briggs Fruit and Produce Exchange, Boston, tried to avoid this, claiming eggs are not carried on coniferous stock. The entomologists disproved this.



The New York delegation favored a strong quarantine against the infested points and admitted the presence of white pine rust. Mr. Fernald, of Massachusetts, said the state board could authorize additional regulation and a quarantine may result against New York pine, because of the New Yorkers' activity and efforts for stringent regulations.

Dr. Britton showed that no gypsy moth was found in Connecticut this year and asserted that the pest is decreasing everywhere.

The Horticultural Board will issue its decisions in the form of a quarantine order within the next few days.

NAME OF VIOLET.

I am sending some violets, flowers and leaves, of a variety I purchased for Princess of Wales. They are not fragrant and I decided they were Dorsett. The plants are outdoors and are thrifty.

Will you please enlighten me in the next number of The Review, for I want the best variety? M. T.

The flowers were much withered. They seem to be small compared with Princess of Wales and are probably the Dorsett variety. You cannot plant any single variety which is so good as the ever reliable Princess of Wales. None of the singles are so fragrant as such doubles as Campbell and Marie Louise, but they have still quite a good perfume. C. W.

DOUBLE HOLLYHOCKS.

Could I sow double hollyhocks now and have them in bloom next year?
R. C. W.

It is now much too late to sow hollyhocks for flowering next season. The plants should now be quite strong. Sow in July another season. There is a good annual strain of hollyhocks, however, which you can grow. Start these under glass in February and they will flower the same season. C. W.

OBITUARY.

W. F. A. Kendel.

After a lingering illness, extending over many months, William F. A. Kendel, younger son of the late A. C. Kendel, and brother of C. E. Kendel, secretary of the American Seed Trade Association, passed away October 22, at his home in Cleveland, O. He entered the seed business at 16 years of age and had completed a period of over twenty-four years in the trade when death cut short his activities in the prime of life. He had many friends in Cleveland and elsewhere, being amiable and of an attractive personality, and his untimely end has been a great shock. He numbered among his friends many of the most prominent and influential people of his city.

He particularly had the management of the financial end of the business and his rigid honesty and prompt dealings placed the firm on a high financial basis. His equal will be hard to find. The business, known as A. C. Kendel's Seed Store, will be continued by the surviving partner, C. E. Kendel, without change of the firm name.

Joshua I. Maxwell.

Joshua Irving Maxwell, aged 88 years, who with the Smiths founded the nursery industry about Geneva, N. Y., died October 23. He was born in Onondaga county in 1824. He was educated at the Auburn academy and in 1849 secured a position as bookkeeper with Adsit & Davis, leading merchants of Hammondsport, which at the time was the head of navigation and a leading market for this section. Mr. Maxwell shipped the first barrel of grapes to New York by canal, but could find no market for them. In 1852 Mr. Maxwell removed to Geneva and with his brother began the planting of nursery stock. The first planting amounted to less than ten acres. Before the firm retired from the nursery business and entered the fruit growing business it was planting over 1,000 acres of nursery stock each season. Besides his nursery and fruit growing business, Mr. Maxwell was interested in practically every corporation in Geneva, and was a director in a majority of them. He was one of the oldest directors of the First National Bank.

John Ross.

The Review's Los Angeles correspondent reports the death of John Ross, the veteran florist and nurseryman of Vermont avenue, Los Angeles, who passed away October 23, at the age of 82. Further particulars will be found in the Los Angeles news letter.

Joseph N. Hodgin.

At Richmond, Ind., Joseph N. Hodgin died October 27 as the result of paralysis. He was known to the trade in Indiana and Ohio as a capable greenhouse builder, having erected a large number of houses in that section.

St. Paul, Minn.—Munich & Wahler, who several months ago bought the greenhouses of Leo Hermes, on Gorman avenue, have made good progress in renovating the houses, but the work is not yet completed and they are exceedingly busy. They find business quite satisfactory.

The Boston Co-operative Flower Market Dinner, October 26, 1912.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, John McFarland; clerk, W. W. Tailby; treasurer, D. Carmichael; directors, J. McFarland, D. Carmichael, W. W. Tailby, L. E. Small, Robert Montgomery, W. H. Elliott, James Wheeler, Edward Wood, N. F. Comley.

The communication from the Boston Flower Exchange, asking the market to come in with them at Winthrop Square, was read and discussed, being referred to the directors. An orchestra from J. Breck & Sons', consisting of Messrs. J. L. Russell, R. Montgomery and Lester Glenn, furnished excellent music. The tables were well decorated by the members.

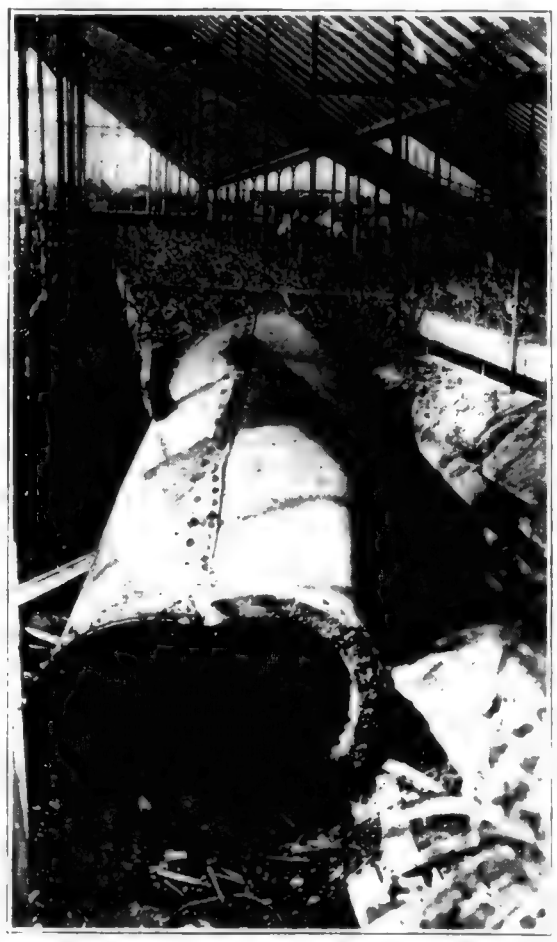
Various Notes.

S. J. Goddard is cutting some handsome Elise Papworth chrysanthemums. This is a splendid white. Chrysolora is also a great favorite with him.

J. T. Butterworth's crop of Cattleya labiata is late this season, as usual, and he says he will have a heavy cut when other growers' crops are over. He has a fine crop of Oncidium Rogersii.

Frank P. Putnam, of Lowell and North Tewksbury, has a fine selection of white, pink and yellow pompon chrysanthemums in addition to high grade carnations.

P. & W. O. Jahn, of Bridgewater, are strong on Pink Delight and White Wonder carnations. Their Bonnaffon mums are extra fine, as are those of H. Waldecker, of Braintree.



There will be a notable array of speakers at the silver jubilee banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club November 11. Tickets are selling fast and early application should be made for what are left. Mayor Fitzgerald and Governor Foss will both be present.

Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, grows yellow marguerites well. Among his carnations he has batches of two seedlings. One of these, a light pink Winona sport, is fine and will be exhibited at one of the club meetings soon.

Nelson & Johnson, of South Framingham, in addition to their usual high grade carnations are this season sending splendid Princess of Wales violets to W. A. Hastings.

John Barr, of South Natick, has this season White Wonder, White Enchantress, White Perfection and Queen as white carnations. He has great success with Pink Delight and Beacon. His new variegated seedling, Mrs. B. P. Cheney, is planted heavily and doing better than ever. St. Nicholas is the only novelty he is trying this season.

E. K. Mandy, of Reading, is a leader with both pink and white greenhouse-grown cosmos.

Boiler Drops in Meinhart's Greenhouse.

The Hamburg-American S. S. Co. will put two 16,000-ton steamers on the Hamburg-Southampton-Boston service, commencing early in May, 1913, and vessels of 22,000 and 25,000 tons are promised for the following year. A Swedish-American line is arranging for a service, as are several other steamship lines. A new $3,000,000 drydock will soon be built and Boston will then be able to dock the biggest vessels afloat. This boom will all spell more business for Boston florists.

W. N. Craig.

Martin F. Lally states that the report that he had engaged with Zinn is an error.

WRECKED BY A FLYING BOILER.

J. E. Meinhart, of Webb City, Mo had a narrow escape from a horrible death a few days ago, when a boiler exploded at the Joe Lewis mine, on South Liberty street, about 800 feet from Mr. Meinhart's greenhouses. The force of the explosion carried the main body of the boiler, which weighed about 4,000 pounds, to the greenhouses, where the huge flying cylinder crashed through a carnation house and fell only a few feet from where Mr. Meinhart was working. Two men employed about the boiler room at the mines were instantly killed, and another man, Joe Lewis, was knocked down and badly bruised.

Mr. Meinhart knew nothing of the explosion until the boiler struck the house, falling near him, enveloped in a sheet of steam and heat. The hot metal ignited the framework of the benches, and it was necessary to use the hose to extinguish the flames. A considerable part of the house, of course, was completely wrecked, and a large area of surrounding glass was broken. The loss was estimated at $600. The necessary repairs were promptly attended to and Mr. Meinhart reports that the houses are in good shape again.

NEW ENGLANDERS PROTEST.

Quarantine Unnecessary and Word Objectionable.

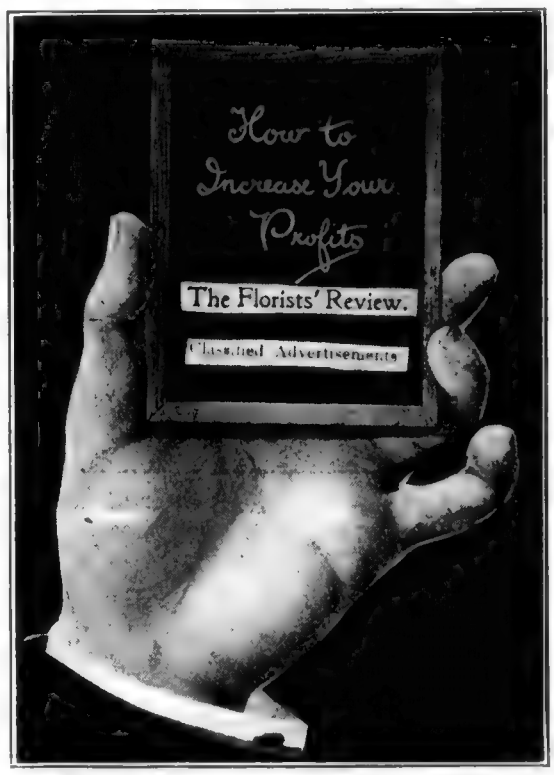
Before the Federal Horticultural Board, at Washington, D. C., Wednesday, October 30, the nurserymen of New England not only objected to the proposed quarantine of certain parts of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut to prevent the spread of gypsy moth, but protested against the use of the word "quarantine" in connection with the regulation of the nursery trade. President W. H. Wyman, of the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association, put it succinctly when he said that to the ear of the buyer the word quarantine sounds like "smallpox." Mr Wyman said that it was greatly to be deplored that so much publicity had been given the present hearing and to the talk of quarantine. He said it puts a quietus on business. Reports are current of instances where buyers have

...e advised by misinformed or prejudiced parties that no nursery stock should be bought in eastern Massachusetts because of the possibilities of infection. Mr. Wyman stated that his ... formerly sold each year several ...sand dollars' worth of stock at ...ox, Mass., but that it now sells nothing there on account of the scare.

...here were in all about forty present at the hearing, which was before the ... board, consisting of W. A. Orton, ...er Bisset, A. F. Burgess and George ... Sudworth. Among those who spoke either for or against the proposed quarantine of certain sections of New England against the gypsy moth and the brown-tail moth were J. K. M. L. Farnar, A. C. Burnham, Alton Briggs, ... H. Wyman, Curtis Nye Smith and ... J. Stewart, all of Boston; W. A. ...anicek, of the Rhode Island Nurseries, Newport, R. I.; W. E. Britton, State Entomologist, New Haven, Conn.; C. R. Pettis, Superintendent of State Forests, Albany, N. Y.; George Atwood, Chief of the Bureau of Horticulture, Albany, N. Y.; J. P. Buckley, Commissioner of Agriculture, Maine; W. C. Okane, of New Hampshire, and A. T. Fernald, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass.

The nurserymen strongly opposed the quarantine, producing evidence to show that the gypsy moth is not distributed by the shipment of nursery stock from Massachusetts. The nurserymen also object to the interference of the federal government in the matter of combating these pests for fear that the state of Massachusetts will withdraw its support, arguing that the state work is superior to what the federal government could do. It was argued that the government should restrict other shipments, such as railroad ties, telegraph poles, old boxes and the movement of lumber trains, automobiles and other conveyances which have been proven to carry the eggs of the pests. Dr. L. O. Howard, of the Department of Agriculture, paid tribute to the efficient work of the Massachusetts department toward eliminating the pests and said he believed the state inspection certificates are sufficient. The members of the board asked numerous questions, from which it appears that the board will probably accept the Massachusetts inspections as final.

Discussion of the scope of what the quarantine may cover included absolute quarantine within the gypsy moth territory of Christmas trees and decorative evergreens, with no restrictions of movement of trees and greens not going beyond the restricted territory; the inspection and certification of all nursery stock within the territory infested with either the gypsy moth or brown-tail moth. It was maintained that it has proven practically impossible to inspect Christmas trees and evergreens, so the quarantine against parts of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine will stand with respect to Christmas greens. The Briggs Fruit and Produce Exchange, Boston, tried to avoid this, claiming eggs are not carried on coniferous stock. The entomologists disproved this.



The New York delegation favored a strong quarantine against the infested points and admitted the presence of white pine rust. Mr. Fernald, of Massachusetts, said the state board could authorize additional regulation and a quarantine may result against New York pine, because of the New Yorkers' activity and efforts for stringent regulations.

Dr. Britton showed that no gypsy moth was found in Connecticut this year and asserted that the pest is decreasing everywhere.

The Horticultural Board will issue its decisions in the form of a quarantine order within the next few days.

NAME OF VIOLET.

I am sending some violets, flowers and leaves, of a variety I purchased for Princess of Wales. They are not fragrant and I decided they were Dorsett. The plants are outdoors and are thrifty.

Will you please enlighten me in the next number of The Review, for I want the best variety? M. T.

The flowers were much withered. They seem to be small compared with Princess of Wales and are probably the Dorsett variety. You cannot plant any single variety which is so good as the ever reliable Princess of Wales. None of the singles are so fragrant as such doubles as Campbell and Marie Louise, but they have still quite a good perfume. C. W.

DOUBLE HOLLYHOCKS.

Could I sow double hollyhocks now and have them in bloom next year?
R. C. W.

It is now much too late to sow hollyhocks for flowering next season. The plants should now be quite strong. Sow in July another season. There is a good annual strain of hollyhocks, however, which you can grow. Start these under glass in February and they will flower the same season. C. W.

Results bring advertising. The Review brings results.

Don't pay money to traveling subscription agents. Review representatives all are well known in their respective communities.

Don't speak to your customers of the "dirt" in which plants grow. Dirt is what some florists have under the benches; soil is what is on them.

Secretary Hammond, of the American Rose Society, has just mailed the third quarterly issue of The Rose Journal, the eight-page paper published by the society.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

This is the time of year that Boston ferns usually are pressing for a market. That there is no particular surplus this season seems to indicate that there will be a scarcity toward spring.

This is the "brass tack" age in business. The grower, jobber or retailer who doesn't dig into the hard facts of his business is likely to find himself up against the sharp end of the tack. It isn't enough merely to sell—the sales must be at a profit.

Some florists give an order to every salesman who comes along, others only to the salesman whom they happen to like, regardless of his merchandise or the strength of his house. Now and then there is a buyer who considers only what he is to get for his money—who really informs himself on comparative qualities, prices and service; he may not be the popular person, but he is apt to be the man who discounts his bills.

Now is the time to put up a fine, big compost pile for next season's needs.

One of the interesting features of the trade is the increasing number of women who are going into the business. Almost always they make satisfying and frequently conspicuous successes.

The surpluses of field-grown carnation plants have cleaned up in excellent shape. Almost always there is, somewhere, someone who reads The Review who needs just the stock the other man would like to turn into cash

There is only one way in which a florist can make a permanent success: Charge fair prices, collect the money, pay bills and lay away enough so that when rebuilding time comes the work can be done with cash instead of credit.

Have the wholesale florists, the growers, been more progressive than the retailers? Has production been increased faster than the retail outlet has been broadened? There may be some interesting developments between now and spring.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will be held at the American Institute, 19 to 21 West Forty-fourth street, New York city, Wednesday afternoon, November 6, 1912, at 3 o'clock. This is the opening day of the exhibition and a large attendance of the members is desired.

Chas. W. Johnson, Sec'y.

WHY ADVERTISING PAYS.

Those who have made a study of advertising know that the value of a publication as an advertising medium depends upon the position the paper holds in the confidence of its readers. In other words, do they buy the paper for itself, to read, or is the subscription list maintained only by selling the paper in combination with some other article—a premium, a gift, a bait?

Why The Review is unapproached as an advertising medium for all who sell to florists is shown by the following letters, both written the same day:

We are very much pleased with The Review and trust it will always be up to its present standard.—West View Floral Co., Atlanta, Ga., October 22, 1912.

The Review is getting better every year and is a necessity in my business.—M. W. Walters, Bettsville, O., October 22, 1912.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

In spite of the fact that stock is coming in much more freely than at any time in the last six weeks, there has not been any serious disturbance of prices. The extra figures recently commanded by chrysanthemums and roses no longer are available, for the supply at last has become equal to the demand but carnations are off crop and anything that can be classed as really good is bringing an excellent price.

Beauties are in much heavier general supply than at any time in the period since the first autumn crop went off. Some of the largest growers of Beauties now are in full crop and the quality of the stock generally is all that could be asked. There are few short Beauties; most of the stock is in the long-stemmed class. Color is fine and the buds now have size.

A SPECIALLY FINE CROP NOW ON, OF

BEAUTIES

STOCK ANY FLORIST WILL BE PROUD TO HANDLE

The cut is the heaviest of the season to date, so that it is possible for us to offer this extra fine stock at a lower price than the best Beauties have recently been commanding. Now is the time to push Beauties—there is no other flower the public likes so well or will buy so freely. Show these Beauties—they will sell on sight. Mostly long and medium stems. Order direct.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Our Mums are grown by specialists—and that makes a very important difference. The stock is of quite a different character from that grown simply as a catch crop—a space filler. It means uniform stock in quantity—the ability to supply 500 all of the same grade and variety instead of mixed. The good mid-season varieties now are ready in quantity. All colors. Order direct.

FANCY ROSES

There are three strong reasons why the thinking buyers are ordering their Roses of us this season: In the first place, it is well known that better Roses cannot be grown; in the second place, we have a full line, the largest in the market, and, thirdly, we have this year fully doubled our supply—from new glass. A fine full crop is on. Order direct:

KILLARNEY WHITE KILLARNEY RICHMOND
RADIANCE BULGARIE (Taft) SUNBURST
MRS. AARON WARD MY MARYLAND

ORCHIDS

We offer the finest quality of Cattleyas at prices that make it possible for every retail store to do a nice business with them, and at a good profit. The best trade everywhere calls for Orchids. Don't let the flower buyers go elsewhere because you have no Orchids. We can keep you supplied. A fine large crop is on.

CARNATIONS

Carnations show marked improvement in quality. The flowers have been clean and good; now they are of increased size and the stems have lengthened out. At the same time the supply has increased. You will like our Carnations.

VIOLETS

We now have large daily supplies of Violets that are excellent for so early in the season. Let your orders come. Don't you want a daily shipment?

Fancy Valley always on hand.

Killarney is much more plentiful than any other rose, though the supply of white has now become adequate, especially of the longer grades. The prices for the selected shipping grades still are holding fairly steady, but it has become necessary to make an occasional concession to some city buyer who can clean up the partly open stock. The weather is a little too warm for roses, though some improvement in the color of Killarney is noted. The newer roses are selling well; no difficulty at all to dispose of anything of worth-while quality.

At the beginning of the present week there was an unexpectedly heavy All Saints' day demand from the south, principally for chrysanthemums. While these were in much larger supply than at any previous date this season, it was necessary to call in everything the growers could cut and some stock went out which really should not have come on the market until the end of the week. The demand did not call for mums at fancy prices but at the same time nothing but first-class stock will stand the trip, and there were a good many flowers that were not in condition to use for this trade. It seems to be a quite general opinion that fewer mums are on the market than at this time last year. Some say this is because the mid-season and late varieties are behind their usual blooming time, but others think it is because chrysanthemums are not being grown so extensively as in former years. The pompons are much more abundant than heretofore. They are selling well.

Violets are now assuming a more prominent position and shipments of both singles and doubles are increasing. The quality is good in spite of rather warm weather, but sales are not so brisk as many would like to see them. Easter lilies are not in heavy supply, but many small lots are reaching the market. Valley is abundant. Apparently the demand has slackened at a time when growers were increasing their output. Orchids are plentiful, not only cattleyas but many of the less widely used varieties.

The only notable change in the green goods situation is a somewhat increased supply of smilax.

Various Notes.

Gus Balluff, one of the well known characters in the market these many years, died at the County hospital October 25 of pneumonia. He was 36 years of age and left a widow with two attractive children. He had one brother, Charles, who recently went to Indianapolis to take a position with the Hill-Heller Co., but who returned for the funeral, which was held October 26, interment being beside Mr. Balluff's mother in Oakwoods cemetery. The funeral services were held at the rooms of the Western Casket Co., which are located in the wholesale cut flower district. There was a large attendance and many handsome designs. The pallbearers were Robert Northam, C. L. Shearer, John Kruchten, Henry Klunder, Arthur Weatherwax and G. L. Gannon.

August Poehlmann, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., left Chicago October 24 for Washington, where his company has filed a suit with the Interstate Commerce Commission against the railroad freight rates charged between Chicago

If the case should be decided in their favor Mr. Poehlmann believes it will result in the lowering of rates to an equal scale all around the Great Central Market's suburban points.

President P. J. Foley, of the Chicago Florists' Club, October 28 sent out a notice that Thursday, November 7, the club will hold the meeting at which nomination of officers for the ensuing year is to take place in accordance with the new by-laws. Guy French, chairman of the committee, has arranged with Irwin Bertermann, of Indianapolis, for a paper on retail store management. This is not ladies' night. The St. Paul flower show opens the next day and it is expected that quite a party of club members will take the train at the close of the club meeting to attend the show, although exhibitors must go earlier.

Guy French, chairman of the committee of the Chicago Florists' Club, announces that arrangements have been made for a ladies' night, including banquet and dance, at the Hotel Sherman, on the evening of November 14, beginning at 7:30 sharp. Each member of the club whose dues are paid will be mailed a ticket for himself and lady. Those wishing additional tickets can procure them at $2 each. This is the first time the club has entertained its members so elaborately, and it is expected that the affair will bring out the largest attendance on record.

John Evert cut his first Touset chrysanthemums of the current season October 28.

Tim Matchen says this season thus far has been better than any recent one for Peter Reinberg. More stock has been cut and better average prices have been obtained than last year.

John P. Degnan, of Winterson's Seed Store, comments on the way tulips are cleaning up and especially on the increased demand for Darwins. He says a large number of growers will try forcing them this season.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., notes that the continued mild weather in the fern districts is adding largely to the quantity of stock available for storage.

A. T. Pyfer, of the Chicago Carnation Co., says he does not recall a year when the All Saints' day demand from the south called for such early shipments. Large quantities of chrysanthemums went out as early as October 28.

H. C. Wendland and his brother have returned from their hunting expedition in New Brunswick, on which they were accompanied by W. R. Pierson. They bagged a quantity of big game.

C. W. McKellar notes that baskets filled with variously colored ruscus are selling well for decorative purposes.

The E. C. Amling Co. says it is becoming more apparent every day that not so many chrysanthemums were planted for this season as in recent years.

Frank McCabe, who has gone on the road for the A. L. Randall Co., reports that he is enjoying the trip to the fullest extent.

A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., left this week to call on out-of-town trade.

Erne & Klingel report that two additional rose growers have joined their staff this week and add that the increased business secured by taking over E. H. Hunt's cut flower department is keeping them on the jump.

John F. Kidwell, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says he does not remember the time when mums were being cut in as small quantities as this year and be believes that many growers have cut down on their mum plantings this season.

Phil Schupp, of J. A. Budlong's, says that the orders for southern points for shipment October 28 made it necessary for all hands to work that night until 1 a. m. in order to get them all on the way.

Harry Manheim, store manager for Hoerber Bros., asserts that the recent weather has been just the best kind for growing roses.

R. A. McPheron, of the Cottage Greenhouses, Litchfield, Ill., spent Sunday with his son, who lives here. He says the only trouble at Litchfield is scarcity of water. William Hild, Milesville, S. This week, because of All Saints' and All Souls' day, should show an increase in the same ratio as that of last week.

In chrysanthemums, many of the midseason and later varieties are now to be had in quantity. Even some fine Bonnaffon came in in limited quantities the early days of the week. The medium blooms are the best sellers. The pompons are now here and so far have moved well. Roses are again selling nicely; no trouble is experienced in cleaning up all good stock. Carnations, too, are going fairly well. There is still a good demand for flowers adapted to

The Hill-Heller store proved quite an attraction to the public October 24 to 26, when a flower show was given and advertised. Chrysanthemums naturally were featured, but Sunburst roses and Commodore carnations came in for their share of attention. The E. G. Hill trophies, cups won at many displays, were also on exhibition. NASHVILLE, TENN.

The nursery inspections of this state for this year are just about completed, and, according to G. M. Bentley, the state entomologist, the growing nursery stock, both fruit and ornamental, has been found in better condition than heretofore. There has been a noticeable increase both in the number of nurseries and greenhouses, as well as an increase in acreage and surface covered by glass. Much greater care is being taken by way of keeping in check the San Jose scale, as well as the woolly aphis, crown gall and hairy root. Fumigation, which is performed by all Tennessee nurserymen, has been standardized and the practicability of this requirement is conceded by all. The importation of bulbs into this state are larger this year than ever before. During the last year careful inspection has been made of these bulbs, and while in many cases the bulb mite has been found, the stock as a rule has been free from disease or insect pests. The number of nursery inspections in Tennessee to date is 405, making Tennessee rank foremost among the nursery growing states of the south. There is a heavy demand for Tennessee-grown peach trees throughout the north and northwest, and in the provinces of Canada.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The arrival of the main army of chrysanthemums, the mid-season varieties, nearly ten days ahead of schedule, has changed market conditions. Yellow is the dominant color, while average quality is high, making it difficult to dispose of late blooms of the early varieties, not generally up to the mark. Pink chrysanthemums are not so plentiful as yellow or even white, an exact reversal of the supremacy of the Pacifics. There are half a dozen nice varieties of pink chrysanthemums, with only a moderate supply of any one of them. Pompons and singles are abundant, both from outdoors and under glass, the latter commanding a much better price. The demand has shown an improvement, though in face of the weak market the buyers had everything their own way, prices ruling low.

Roses and carnations are neglected for chrysanthemums. Beauties, fine Maryland and novelties receive fair support. Killarney is off color. The medium and short grades of all varieties sell at low figures or not at all. Carnations have not kept well in such warm weather. Unless particularly well grown, the buyers have been rather shy with them. Violets came forward a little on fine days. They have no equal for the corsage. Quite a demand has sprung up for cattleyas. Dendrobium Phalænopsis and a few fancy cypripediums have been added to the orchid list. Gardenias of really fine quality are not equal to the demand. Valley continues active, with a good supply to draw upon. A few callas have appeared. With Easter lilies, they suffer from the competition of white queen of autumn. Dahlias are gradually disappearing. There is plenty of good cosmos.

A Plant Sale.

It has long been recognized by the active minds that control the destinies of the department stores that plants are necessary for house adornment. The home, the flat, the cafe, the hotel, the theater, the store, each and all are made more attractive by growing plants. The keen business sense of the department store buyers made them aim to secure the largest number of plants for their money, regardless of their quality. The growers who met these buyers were usually burdened with a few blocks of stock that had gone wrong; plants that no florist wanted, that as florists they wanted off the place. The result was natural; more, it was unvarying; the department stores offered at a ridiculously low price plants that would have been expensive at almost any price at all had the purchasers known it. Luckily, they did not. The result of these sales, which have been going on for many years, is a more or less strained relation between the growers whose plants have figured in the sales and their florist customers who buy the good stock. A material result is, of course, a large quantity of unmarketable stock marketed at a good round sum. The effect on the public was somewhat mixed. Plant buyers were created who soon wanted better things; others were so disgusted they never wanted to see a plant again while still others felt that you could not reasonably expect more for 25 cents, which was undoubtedly true.

Today a change has come over the scene; the plant industry has taken a step forward in its relation to the department store. The greatest department store in the world—there is nothing to compare with it in Paris, in New York, or in London—has been carrying on a plant sale in the heart of this city. A plant sale of the finest kind of decorative stock, in variety and at prices that would not tempt a customer from our smartest shops. A successful sale, too, judging by the number of plants that have moved in and out of that spacious building. Its effect will be to broaden the field for well grown stock.

Various Notes.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will resume classes for commercially grown roses and carnations at the fall show, November 5 to 8. Entries should be made at once to David Rust, secretary, Horticultural hall, Broad and Locust streets. They are to be staged in the hall by noon, November 6.

The prodigal has returned.

A select party, consisting of John Burton, Alfred Burton, George Burton, Edwin J. Fancourt, Charles E. Meehan, Stephen Mortensen, Samuel S. Pennock and Alexander B. Scott, motored out to Reelofs in two cars to see the model rose growing plant of the Joseph Heacock Co. They also visited the new rose house of Malcolm Franklin, at Yardley.

Recent visitors include William F. Kasting and J. Benson Stafford, of Buffalo, N. Y.; John L. Ratcliffe, Richmond, Va.; R. G. Wilson, Brooklyn, N. Y., and A. Primrose, of the Loudon Park Cemetery, Baltimore, Md.

Christie Mathewson is the name of the new white chrysanthemum sent by William Swayne to W. J. Baker. No baseball lover need know more.

Cornelius Vanderbreggen had a narrow escape October 28, when a cut flower delivery wagon of the Robert Craig Co. was smashed by a runaway team belonging to the Pennsylvania Laundry Co., at Eighteenth and Chestnut streets. One of the laundry horses was killed, while the Craig horse was so badly injured it had to be taken home in an ambulance. Luckily, Mr. Vanderbreggen was in the London Flower Shop at the moment the accident occurred.

B. Eschner reports a great run of business for October for M. Rice & Co. Unaffected by the election, florists are working hard.

The leading chrysanthemums of the day are Charles Razer, Alice Byron, Ivory, Appleton, Bonnaffon, Halliday and a few Chadwick and Roman Gold.

William Duckham as sent in by Zieger & Son, to the Leo Niessen Co., is thought to be the best pink mum in town.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is receiving fine pompons.

The Market.

There is little doing in the social line requiring extensive decorations, with the result that there is no way of disposing of the output of the local houses, to say nothing of the incoming shipments from other cities. The present political activity gives little time for social functions.

Saturday, October 26, there was a good demand for large chrysanthemums, due to the Carlisle-Georgetown football game, but this was insufficient to overcome the dullness experienced during the rest of the week. With the possible exception of the better grades, flowers of all varieties can be had at almost the purchaser's offer. There is plenty of stock of all kinds, and, sad to say, much of this went to the refuse pile.

The weather has been far too warm for violets and this condition is also affecting chrysanthemums. Eastern roses are fine and valley is as good as could be desired. Locally grown roses are continuing to improve. Orchids greatly exceed the demand and the same may be said of gardenias. Potted plants are beginning to be shown in many of the stores for the Thanksgiving day trade.

Various Notes.

Gude Bros. Co. has secured 85,000 square feet of land adjoining its property at Bladensburg and Mt. Olivet roads at an estimated cost of about $12,000. Here they will erect a number of houses to be devoted to roses, especially American Beauties. The property is improved by a large power house and a residence, which will be the home of the superintendent. The other property contains some 400,000 square feet and was formerly owned by the American Rose Co. These pieces are, of course, in addition to their large property in Anacostia, D. C.

Fred H. Kramer spent several days last week in New York.

A decision will shortly be rendered in Circuit Court No. 2, in the suit of Samuel Lucas, of Anacostia, D. C., against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., for damages in the sum of $7,500, to cover his loss on greenhouse equipment caused by fire from sparks from a passing freight engine. Alexander Garden, Adolphus Gude and Alexander Davidson, all of Anacostia, who were engaged by the railroad company to appraise the damages, were witnesses in the suit.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held Tuesday mums have been quite scarce and it has been a hard proposition to get large yellow mums, but before long the market will be oversupplied with yellow Bonnaffon. Carnations remain well cleaned up. The Trip to Adrian.

Everyone had a delightful time, there being about 100 visitors, and much to see at the Smith establishment. The return to Detroit was late in the evening.

Various Notes.

J. F. Sullivan has been spending a week in New York and the east. Norman reports business as having opened up nicely in their new store.

All the downtown stores have attractive Hallowe'en window displays. Pumpkins and corn, of course, play an important part in these decorations.

Charles Plumb is busy unpacking large shipments of azaleas.

Hugo Schroeter will soon move into his new bungalow, which is nearly finished.

Wm. Hielscher says the tendency is more and more towards the use of wreaths and pillows. Hearts, lyres, gates and other once popular designs are dropping from favor.

Mike Sullivan has taken the place vacated by J. Davidson at the establishment of Mrs. Helen Newberry, at Grosse Pointe Farms.

We spent one entire season in looking around in the South for the best Boxwood that we could buy. We visited the plantations where Boxwood was planted and made our selection. We possibly spent more time making this selection than most buyers and experienced dealers can afford. You will agree that Boxwood Sprays at 8c and 10c per pound are expensive when you only receive 6 to 8 ounces of material that you can use out of a pound. We recommend to the purchaser our Boxwood Sprays for good value, full weight and little waste. Our price for this quality is $7.50 for a 50-lb. case. ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Flower Show.

The flower show, to be held November 5 to 9, is at present the prominent issue of the local flower interests. The Rochester Florists' Association is promoting the show and it promises to far surpass their two previous shows.

Though this is claiming a great deal, the last meeting of the general committee, held Wednesday night, October 23, seemed to bear out the claim. Charles H. Vick, chairman of the general committee, called upon the different committee chairmen for a report of the work they had done up to date and of what they proposed to do. Secretary Roland B. Woodward, of the Chamber of Commerce, then gave a short talk, in which he assured the association of the hearty support of the city. He complimented the members on the work they were doing and upon the influence exerted.

Important among the reports was that of Ferdinand Keller, chairman of the decoration committee. He has promised to give something new and effective in the line of hall decorations. The decorations, with the aid of Mr. Parker, of the Railway & Light Co., will be combined with a unique lighting scheme, that should, to say the least, be elaborate and harmonious.

The local exhibitors have, with two or three exceptions, arranged to exhibit again this year. These few vacancies were soon filled.

In the work of advertising, the association has, among other mediums, enlisted the aid of many of the large commercial establishments.

The committees have, by hard work and skillful management, succeeded in keeping the cost below their previous figures. This allows them to keep the price of admission the same as in previous years—25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. Invitations are extended to the orphan homes and similar institutions of the city for two mornings.

The ladies of the Auxiliary Society have been active in their help, and to them goes no small share of the credit for the hoped-for success.

Various Notes.

The wholesale market for cut flowers seems to be about normal and everything is arriving in good shape and in good season, except the mums. They are a little later than usual.

The rains this fall have not interfered with the florists as much as with the seed growers. The harvesting of seed is being much upset by the rainy weather, which has not only lengthened the season, but has made the results in many crops decidedly uncertain.

The retailers feel that business is about normal. "Of course," they say, "this is presidential fall."

Schuyler Arnold.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Business continued good all through last week. Stock of all kinds was also more plentiful, with the exception of the lighter grades of carnations, which for some reason seem to have been short of the demand ever since the new season opened.

It gives us great pleasure to report that the five members of the G. Baerman family, who were injured by an electric car October 20, are progressing nicely. The father, Gustav Baerman, was able to go home from the hospital October 28. The son, Helmuth, was unconscious forty-eight hours after the accident. An operation October 22 appears to have saved his life. E. O.

BOTTOM HEAT FOR PALM SEED.

As I live in southern California, in a locality that is almost frostless, I need only a small inside space, about 12 x 15 feet, where I want to have some bottom heat. I use it for germinating palm seeds. I intend to use one of those portable coal-oil stoves, called Perfection smokeless heaters. Although it is called smokeless, it emits some fumes and I am afraid they may prove injurious to the seeds. For this reason, instead of using a wire screen, I intend to put tin sheets on the bottom of the bench. Of course, if I could get along with a wire screen, the heat would reach the seeds much more easily. What would you advise me to use? R. S.

The most satisfactory arrangement for bottom heat for the germination of palm seeds would be to run three or four 1½-inch pipes under the bench, and to connect them to a small boiler. But if the oil stove is decided upon, then the tin bottom would be preferable to using a wire screen for the bottom of the bench, and would not cause much loss of heat. W. H. T.

Washington, Kan.—Mrs. M. L. Penwell, of the Penwell Greenhouses, reports that all outside stock was killed by frost on the night of September 29, and flowers, as a consequence, were scarce for a time, though the demand was good.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business has been changeable the last few weeks, but is increasing with the times. Mums have arrived and have been welcomed. Outdoor stock, including the dahlias, is over; the variety of indoor stock is increasing. Pompons are more in evidence this season, and while the price is considerably less than for the gorgeous sized flower, the quantity is considerably larger, so we are gainers in the end. Roses have sold well, especially the shorter stemmed stock of the Killarneys.

Various Notes.

The coming flower show is the one big event now on the calendar for the local florists. Even the great political questions have been thrown aside to make room for the show which is to be held in Convention hall, November 6 to 10. Through the efforts of George McClure we shall be able to transform the spacious hall into a beautiful Italian garden. Nothing will be left undone in any way to make this the most beautiful show ever staged in Buffalo. It will be done by the coöperative efforts of all the florists, just to show the Buffalo people what the florists' industry of Buffalo means. Our slogan is, "Buffalo Means Business," and as florists we are going to hold up our end. Mr. Kasting is the general chairman and the several committees which he has appointed are all working hard to carry out the plans he has so carefully mapped out. Never before has such interest been shown in the club and this assures us and is also an incentive for the boys to work harder.

Foreign stock has for some reason or other been delayed this season, as some of the growers are still waiting for the azalea shipments. On the other hand, one grower showed Mme. Petrick in flower last week. Azaleas are good in their season, but with the abundance of flowering stock just at present it is the general opinion that mums are more profitable for the month of October.

Joe Toben and Robert A. Scott were the last members of the club to take unto themselves wives. Happiness reigns supreme in both cases.

Henry Basler has had one of the best seasons of his career and reports that, with Buffalo growing the way it has in his district, he, too, will keep on growing.

On account of the alterations to the market Jacob B. Wiese has been forced to vacate for a few months. Mr. Wiese states that he will have the finest place in the market when the changes are completed. He has made a reputation for himself at his store and has elevated the flower business on the market. Good prices and fresh stock are always in evidence.

Jerome Deutscher, for some years with Wm. F. Kasting Co., has resigned, owing to ill health.

The Elmwood Floral Depot has built additional greenhouses and installed a new Kroeschell boiler.

The Wm. Scott Co. has just completed a new house, 180 feet long, to be devoted to begonia stock. R. A. S.

Clinton, Mass.—F. P. Sawyer has had a good season's trade, with considerable shipping business, including a recent shipment of 20,000 pansy plants to Jacksonville, Fla.

Eight Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The chrysanthemum has again come into its own and is rightly not only queen of the autumn, but queen of the market. Quantities are coming into the retail stores, of good quality, and every show window and available display corner is filled with choice blooms, which bring from 10 cents to 50 cents apiece at retail. Prices at wholesale range about normal.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held at the rooms of the association, 98 Westminster street, October 21, with a fair attendance. In the absence of President Eugene Appleton, Vice-president Cornelius Hartstra occupied the chair. It had been expected that William Hill would read a paper on orchids, but in his absence a general discussion ensued regarding the Workingmen's Compensation Act, passed by the last General Assembly.

The monthly meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, held October 22, with President Andrew S. Meikle in the chair, was one of the best in a long time. A fine exhibition of chrysanthemums was made by Andrew J. Dorward, gardener for Mrs. T. J. Emery. The plants had been grown in pots in the open and moved inside after the buds had developed, and were considered worthy of the society's certificate of merit. It was voted to adopt resolutions in opposition to the new nursery quarantine laws, which, if enforced, will work great detriment to growers. A public hearing on the matter was held October 30.

Mrs. Louis Chandler gave a lecture on "Home Gardens," October 21, under

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The market was in good condition all through last week and business was somewhat better in all lines. There were several large weddings, the horse show and an increased demand for funeral work, which used up a lot of stock. The wholesale houses all had a good run of business. The weather has been warm and clear and this rushed in all kinds of stock in large quantities. Cooler weather is needed to put the business right. These conditions, of course, filled the wholesale houses with plenty of stock and especially so with roses, the great bulk of them being Killarneys and Richmonds of excellent quality, especially those classed as home-grown stock. Prices were low.

Mums, of course, are the flowers that are much looked after now and there are plenty of them to be had. Extra fancy blooms are held at $3 per dozen, but these are as yet quite limited. On the lower grades, though, the market is in splendid shape this season, with the great bulk of them to come yet. A great deal more white than yellow are in this market.

California violets are coming better each day, with prices ranging from 25 to 35 cents per hundred. Easter lilies, too, were more plentiful than during the previous week, with the price clinging to $12.50 per hundred. Carnations are as abundant as ever; that is, of the short-stemmed grades. Nearly all the outdoor stock is about over. The market has a big supply of greens.

Various Notes.

Miss Hale, formerly with the Ellison Floral Co., and later with Ed Loyet, opened a store at Page and Kings Highway October 26, to be known as the Kings Highway Floral Co. This makes her a close neighbor to Otto Sander, Fred Foster and Ed Loyet.

The Retail Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting October 21, at the Washington hotel, transacting a great deal of business. The entertainment committee has decided on a banquet for next month, at this hotel. President C. C. Sanders presided, with all the other officers present. The lack of interest by some of the members has caused talk of disbanding the association, but those who attend regularly say the association has done a lot of good for the local retailers and that it will be kept alive if only by a few.

The Market.

Trade has been good for the last week, with a steady increase. Mums are coming in large quantities, which is helping the great demand for these flowers. Carnations are improving in quantity and quality. Roses are in a good crop and are especially fine. Last week we had a heavy frost, which helped business to a great extent, as all outdoor plants have vanished. The prices on cut flowers are holding up well.

Various Notes.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports business a little stronger on most lines, especially mums.

E. H. Frandsen, of Independence, is at the hospital, having passed through an operation October 24. We expect him out within a week.

D. Freudenthal reports fine business on out-of-town funeral work.

provements are already planned and the business in future will be directed from the Main street and Armour boulevard place.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a busy day October 23. They had five large weddings, with more than a usual run of funeral work. They are cutting heavily into their chrysanthemums and have also begun cutting violets and bouvardia.

Charlie Hyatt has returned from a trip taken on account of his health. He has improved wonderfully.

Samuel Murray is cutting some nice orchids. He reports weddings as being plentiful last week.

Henry Kusik & Co. have recently made some extra heavy shipments to Oklahoma and Texas. They report Beauties and chrysanthemums much better than last week.

Sydney Cotgrave, who has been with some of the leading firms of the city, is now connected with the Rosary.

W. J. Barnes is much pleased with his new store and has added many convenient ways to handle business.

Nelson Jarrett reports the largest fall business in his career. W. J. B.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

VISITED CHICAGO: Marshall H. Duryea, New York.

RALPH M. WARD, of New York, made a flying trip to Chicago October 21.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH has returned to Cincinnati after his annual hunting and fishing trip in Florida.

THE cheaper varieties of popular bedding tulips in wholesale hands already are well cleaned up.

THERE has been a marked increase this season in the calls for the Darwin and May-flowering tulips.

BIRDS and goldfish are being taken up as profitable side lines by large numbers of seed stores and flower stores.

J. CHARLES MCCULLOUGH, of Cincinnati, was shot by an unknown assailant in front of his office October 28.

TULIP bulbs at Chicago are unusually well cleaned up for so early a date. It amounts to a shortage, as retail sales are scarcely more than beginning and reorders from the trade are coming in quite freely.

THE Younkerman Seed Co., of Council Bluffs, Ia., is remodeling its building, a two-story brick structure at the corner of Broadway and Second street. The entire store front is being replaced with a modern display window and entrance.

IT is estimated that fully fifty per cent of the auratum bulbs of the early shipments arrived in unsound condition this year. The importers think the trouble is due to early digging and it is likely early shipments will be decidedly light next year.

THERE is a big demand for Darwin tulips. Not only are increased quantities wanted for bedding, but hundreds of cut flower growers who have noted in The Review the items with regard to forcing the Darwins are trying a few of several varieties to see how it goes.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of Wm. F. A. Kendel, of A. C. Kendel's Seed Store, Cleveland, O. The deceased was a brother and partner of C. E. Kendel, secretary-treasurer of the American Seed Trade Association, who will continue the business without change of the firm name.

THE Department of Agriculture has sought to enforce the potato quarantine with great rigor, even going so far as to exclude shipments that were on the ocean at the time the quarantine was declared. The consignees have suffered heavy losses and naturally have made strenuous protest, but it has been without avail. Therefore Meyer & Lange, of New York, have begun a test suit, alleging the insufficiency of the notice under the Plant Quarantine Act.

SEEDSMAN USES FISTS.

[From the Portland, Ore., Oregonian.]

"Roosevelt deserved all he got. He should have had it long ago!"

"Bang."

And the fist of a righteously indignant man made an excellent reply full in the face of the speaker.

Such was the outcome of a very few words exchanged between J. J. Butzer, a seedsman of 188 Front street, and the man who was discussing the situation with him.

In reply to a query as to whether the report was true that he really had dealt out summary justice in this way, Mr. Butzer said:

"Why, certainly, I hit him, but what do you want to make all the fuss about it for? You'd have done the same yourself."

"I think any man would," he added, "or at least any man with a drop of red blood in his veins.

"I am an ardent Bull Mooser, you bet your life, but, sir, that would not prevent me from doing the same if a man came up to me and said that it was a good thing Taft or Wilson had got shot. I'd have done the same. So would you."

And Mr. Butzer evidently was still nursing tender recollections of the affray, just as his opponent must have been doing, though in a more material way.

"Did he go down, sir?" and his listeners waited breathlessly for the answer.

"Yes, sir, down Second street. And that's all there is to it. I hit him because I cannot see how any man with a trace of a thought for his country could condone such an act as that, whether to a political friend or to a political foe."

Vegetable Forcing.

RADISHES AND LETTUCE.

I have two houses 28 x 200 and two houses 28 x 75, all planted in tomatoes. I expect to plant them all in lettuce and radishes when the tomatoes have finished bearing, which will be in the last part of February. I have also a house, now in chrysanthemums, which I have been planning to use for starting my lettuce in. I am thinking of starting the seed in pans and transplanting into flats, and from the flats into benches. Do you think that would be a good idea? I cannot renew the soil in the houses, but will have to use the same soil. I have some good compost which I could spread on the top and spade it in. Do you think that would be satisfactory? What kind of lettuce and radish would you advise me to plant? I intend to ship them to New York or Washington. Can you give me the names of some good commission men in Washington? C. H. H.

I would advise you to use the Grand Rapids lettuce and the select stock Scarlet Globe short top forcing radish, and be careful to specify that select stock is wanted for forcing. There is a great difference in Scarlet Globe radish seed. I had some one year that produced radishes with tops on them like turnip tops, and they were nearer pink than red. All seedsmen have or can get for a customer the select forcing stock.

The Grand Rapids lettuce is more profitable and matures more quickly than the head lettuce. Some eastern markets, however, do not like leaf lettuce. In case the market demands a head lettuce, I would advise the Boston Hothouse Forcing, but, as I have already said, it is not as profitable as the leaf lettuce if the latter can be marketed.

It will not be necessary to change the soil in the tomato or mum house, but it will be necessary to add fertilizer. I would advise pulling all the old roots and stumps out and scraping off a little of the top soil. Do not try to spade it when too wet. It would be better to turn it over twice, to get it thoroughly pulverized. Put on the compost after it has been turned once; then, if you are careful the second time not to turn it too deep, you can keep this rich soil near the top. A little manure water, or some nitrate of soda diluted into a weak solution, would be beneficial to the radishes and lettuce and might be put on before they are planted.

Your idea of starting the lettuce and transplanting it is good. The radishes should be planted in rows about four

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Now that a killing frost is needed, it fails to arrive. Dahlias, cosmos, chrysanthemums, salvia and all the outdoor flowers continue to bloom and lend their share of surplus to the overcrowded cut flower market.

Mums are selling at from $1 per hundred up, some of the gems even touching 50 cents apiece. Most of the stock that may honestly be classed as extra fine finds a top at $3 to $4 per dozen. In any quantity purchases are shaded to a much lower level, and beautiful stock can be had often as low as $1 for twelve. Any surplus of flowers of any variety finds its way to the department stores, where distribution at less than reasonable wholesale values continues.

There are many chrysanthemum plants displayed in the wholesale cut flower market and they have sold rapidly.

Roses have been selling from 25 cents per hundred up to 25 cents each for selected American Beauties. The public takes to the novelties like a duck to water. They seldom come under the head of leftovers. The old kinds are at the mercy of the big buyers, and the price depends on quantity.

There are now plenty of carnations, fine stock selling below its rightful value. Of the reds Wm. Eccles seems to be highly regarded.

There is little demand for violets. After the regular demand for the best is satisfied there is no limit to the rest of the quarter million now arriving daily. The street merchants are a memory. The waste barrel is the only available outlet for those not given away to the big buyer of a general line, who makes a present of a bunch to his retail customers with every 45-cent box of roses and carnations.

There is no shortage of orchids of any seasonable variety. Cypripediums are here again. A few choice cattleyas have touched 50 cents. In quantity splendid stock has moved slowly at $40 per hundred. Gardenias have been in limited supply, but more are now arriving; $3 per dozen was top last week for the selects. Valley remains stationary and lilies do not advance above last week's quotations.

500% Profit on Lily Bulbs

Any retail florist who has selling ability and can market a few lilies every month can make a larger per cent of gross profit on Horseshoe Brand Cold Storage Giganteum than on any other article connected with his business. They cost no more to produce than other things netting much less profit. The average cost of Horseshoe Brand Gigs, for delivery throughout 1913, does not exceed $20 per case, if ordered now. This means an investment of about $250 per annum. Based on the general average of flowering results it means about 8000 flowers per annum. These flowers, retailed at 20c each, would bring $1600, which would make the gross profit about 540%—call it 500%—or even sell them at half price and cut down the percentage—where can you invest money to give such profits? The wholesaler at from 6c to 10c per flower can make more than on anything he can grow, at the same risk, in the same space and time consumed.

A $225 INVESTMENT

will cover the cost of a sufficient amount of first-class Horseshoe Brand Giganteum to last throughout the year, if you order now. This leaves a margin of $25 or over 10% from above figured cost, for freight and potting expense. The price of $225 is made special, and applies to the list as given below. It includes storage charges and everything up to the time of delivery f. o. b. cars New York.

Case.
1	400 Giganteum, 6x8", planted about Feb 1, 1913, will flower in May.
1	400 Giganteum, 6x8", planted about March 1, 1913, will flower in June.
1	400 Giganteum, 6x8", planted about April 1, 1913, will flower in July.
1	400 Giganteum, 6x8", planted about May 1, 1913, will flower in August.
1	300 Giganteum, 7x9", planted about June 1, 1913, will flower in September.
1	300 Giganteum, 7x9", planted about July 1, 1913, will flower in October.
2	300 each, Giganteum, 7x9", planted about Aug. 1, 1913, will flower in November.
2	300 each, Giganteum, 7x9", planted about Sept. 1, 1913, will flower in December.
1	250 Giganteum, 8x10", planted about Oct. 1, 1913, will flower in January.
1	250 Giganteum, 8x10", planted about Nov. 1, 1913, will flower in February.

As an investment, this is one of the best a florist could possibly make. Besides this, it will be a business-booster, for all live florists should have lilies on hand the year around. Some can use 24, 36, 48, or even 100 or more cases per annum—we have customers who consume from 500 to 1500 cases annually. Their profits are of course large, owing to the quantity marketed. The only limit to your profit is that limit marked by your ability to sell and market the flowers on a business basis, and it's a big country we live in. If this list does not appeal to you, ascertain how many flowers you can dispose of during a year's time, and let us figure on the lot, giving you desirable shipping dates, flowering time and other information. Don't wait—those who wait generally get left—now is the time to order—right now. Then it won't be forgotten, and deliveries will be made automatically, relieving you of the bother. Write us.

Various Notes.

Hallowe'en is anticipated with interest as demonstrating the practical value of the club's publicity work.

W. P. Craig, of Philadelphia; W. F. Kasting and Mr. Donaldson, of Buffalo, were recent visitors.

The fall show days have come again. The Yonkers Society opened its exhibition October 30, to run three days. The Poughkeepsie show begins October 31 and the same day the Morris County Society opens at Madison, N. J. The Nassau County show begins October 29, at Glen Cove, L. I. The Mt. Madison avenue and vicinity is fast becoming a retail florists' center. Commencing just around the corner, on Forty-second street, with John D. Nicholas, who is close to the new Grand Central depot, two blocks away comes the old established headquarters of Dards, one of the landmarks of the trade. Across the street is the new store of Kottmiller. Two blocks north is Ralph Armstrong's place, with the largest show windows in the city, and on the next corner is the Bunyard Co., also the new departure of the Briercliff Rose Co., in retail experience. At Fifty-second and Madison another flower store is to be opened next week, and Hauser, Myer and Warendorff cover the rest of the avenue as far as Fifty-ninth street. It is only a block over to Max Schling's and George Stumpp's, on Fifth avenue, and down the avenue to Forty-second street again we pass the splendid stores of Alex McConnell, Thorley, Young and Wadley & Smythe. So in a territory a block wide and fifteen blocks long are grouped this wonderful aggregation, catering only to the best families of the metropolis.

Wm. Kessler is shipping many kentias to out-of-town florists. A big order for a Detroit nabob left New York October 25.

John T. Lovett, of Little Silver, N. J., and Miss Gwendolyn Towt, of Nyack, N. Y., were married October 24. Mr. Lovett is associated with his father in the nursery business at Little Silver.

H. A. Bunyard says the bulb sales to date this season beat all records at Arthur T. Boddington's.

J. K. Allen is handling large quantities of mums in pots.

L. B. Nason reports an encouraging patronage in his new wholesale venture.

W. G. Badgley, of Chatham, will be among the first to feature Mrs. Shawyer rose in 1913.

J. F. Sullivan, of Detroit, after several days in Philadelphia, is spending the balance of this week in New York and will return home in time to vote for the Moose November 5.

A visit to F. R. Pierson's "sea of glass" at Scarboro, and his "fern factory" at Tarrytown, is always most interesting. The fern trade was never so good, the houses being now emptied for the third time this year. Seven immense houses are devoted to Killarney of various kinds. The cut averages from 5,000 to 15,000 a day.

BODDINGTON'S QUALITY Decoration Day or May-Flowering TULIPS

It is surprising that these grand Tulips have not been more largely planted. As an early display, they are magnificent in their beauty and coloring, coming into flower, as they do, from May 15 to the first week in June, according to the season, and are most useful from a decorative point of view, after the early-flowering Tulips are past. The colors are various, as described in the following varieties, and their height, after being well established, reaches nearly three feet in some types.

Bouton d'Or. Has deep clear yellow, globular medium-sized blossoms, with curious black-anthered stamens	$1.25	$11.50
Gesneriana spathulata, or major. This variety has long been in cultivation. The beautifully curved flowers are brilliant scarlet, with a bluish-black center, on tall stems. A large group of this Tulip massed by itself looks very striking	1.25	11.50
Gesneriana macrospila. Crimson-scarlet, black and yellow center	1.00	8.75
Gesneriana lutea. Beautiful, yellow, tall and handsome	1.75	16.00
Inglescombe Scarlet. Very brilliant scarlet, black base	2.00	18.00
Inglescombe Yellow. A large canary-yellow, perfect form	4.50	42.00
Inglescombe Pink. One of the best pinks	1.50	14.00
Isabella, or Shandon Bells. The petals are a rose color, flushed or flaked with white when they first open, and after two or three days it changes to a suffused deep rose and red color. Remains longer in bloom than many others; stands well when cut	$1.00	$ 9.00
La Merveille. A magnificent variety with very large, sweet-scented blossoms. Salmon-rose, overlaid with orange-red. A grand border variety .....25 cts. per doz.	1.00	8.50
Mrs. Moon. The finest late yellow; beautifully reflexed petals. A charming variety .....50 cts. per doz.	3.50
Maiden's Blush, or Picotee. Clear white, margined on the edge with pink. The flower is beautifully curved, but it is somewhat difficult to give a correct idea of the color. When it opens the petals are white and margined or penciled with pink to cerise. After two or three days the flowers change to a deep rose, and, unless one is acquainted with it, it would not be recognized as the same Tulip. It stands remarkably well when cut	1.25	10.00

An account of the Pasadena flower show appears under the general exhibition heading on page 10 of this issue.

The California Association of Nurserymen will hold its annual convention at Oakland November 7 to 9. The complete program appears on page 70 of this issue.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Too much stock is the only trouble the wholesalers have now. The weather is so good that outdoor flowers of every kind are almost as plentiful as in May, while the chrysanthemums continue to arrive in battalions. In spite of all this, good stock cleans up fairly well and it is a matter for congratulation that there is not any glut. Funeral work helps out the retailers when transient business is dull, but the latter would be much improved if retailers could only see the possibilities of a quick turn at small profits. I have no wish to teach anyone his business, but surely everyone in the trade who reads the trade papers ought to be able to see the trend of the times for himself. Happenings in the middle west along this line are an indication of what will occur here later, and that retailer will be wise who gets in line.

Indoor roses are not quite so good, as the heat of last week was too much for them. Outdoor roses are truly beautiful for the season. Orchids are plentiful; so is valley, except on certain days, when a rush cleans it up. Greens of all kinds are plentiful and good.

The Show at Pasadena.

The fifth annual flower show of the Pasadena Horticultural Society was held October 24 to 26, at the Hotel Maryland. It was an unqualified success and everyone connected with it deserves the highest praise. It says a good deal for the excellent spirit prevailing among the members when they will stick together and are able to produce such results. The private gardeners' exhibits were better than ever seen before at a Pasadena show. The cut flowers were perhaps hardly as good as the plants, but both were creditable. An elegant showing of vegetables and fruit was also made in the competitive classes.

Miss Sadie Thomas put up a varied and interesting chrysanthemum group, many of the best Japanese varieties being grown on single, dwarf stems, and tastefully arranged with the pretty single, pompon and anemone-flowered kinds, grown in bush form. This energetic little lady deserves the thanks of all for keeping up to date and showing of her best. Close by were a dozen or so of blooms from C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., which had carried splendidly over the long journey. The finest flower, perhaps, was Annie L. Angus, though Beatrice May and a fine yellow seedling were not far behind.

The Germain Seed Co., Los Angeles, put up an exhibit of seeds, bulbs and others of its specialties, well arranged with palms, ferns and other plants. Theodore Payne also showed bulbs and native plants. Howard & Smith had showy dahlias, zinnias and dwarf lantanas, arranged between a number of large bay trees and palms. Ed. Rust showed a bank of fine, rare plants and ferns, in the best possible condition. The Clemence Nursery put up an elegant display of showy small plants, principally begonias, a background of showy varieties of the modern tuberous-rooted kinds being extra good. Exhibits from Campbell's Seed Store, Montariosa Nurseries, Laurie's and others, including rare plants, bulbs and seeds, were all admired, as well as the beautiful group of rare palms and orchids from the Huntington place at Oak Knoll.

Rare fruits are always well to the fore at Pasadena, and the exhibits of the West India Gardens and Coolidge came in for much attention. The former contained good avocados, cherimoyas, white sapota, dates and mangos. Coolidge made a specialty of feijoas, but the beauty of his group lay in the magnificent varieties of ferns.

The attendance on the first day was good.

The Orchid, of Pasadena, has opened a new store, almost opposite the Hotel Maryland, and it took some tall hustling on the part of Jaeger & Wolfskill to get it ready in time for the opening of the flower show. Only a hurried glance was taken and it was still in an unfinished condition, but enough could be seen to indicate a light, roomy store, excellently arranged. Mr. Jaeger has a large collection of dried orchid flowers, mounted, framed and correctly labeled, a most interesting feature.

Various Notes.

The news of the sudden death of the veteran John Ross, of Vermont avenue, October 23, came as a shock to all who had seen the aged gentleman around his place in his usual health only a few days before. Mr. Ross was 82 years of age and had lived in Los Angeles thirty-two years, having come here from Toronto, Canada. He was a well informed man on all gardening and kindred subjects and until almost the day of his death was around his nursery and greenhouses. Mr. Ross was never better pleased than when anyone who was interested and had a knowledge of plant life would stop for a "crack" with him, and he had much of interest to tell of early days. Several sons and grandsons are in the business, the best known, perhaps, being W. Ross, Ed. Rust's capable greenhouse foreman.

J. Dieterich has ordered a new automobile, which he will doubtless find useful. Mr. Dieterich is a busy man; his Wall street place, his interest in the Dieterich & Turner and other properties at Montebello, and his many interests outside the nursery business, keep him always on the jump, and after a long adherence to horse-flesh he has had to give this up and take to the time-saving auto.

A. Baur, of the Baur Floral Co., Erie, Pa., was calling on the trade here and at Pasadena October 22. Mr. Baur has had an extensive trip through the middle west and south and intended, when here, to go to San Francisco and other northern points.

H. E. Huntington, railroad magnate and patron of horticulture, has purchased the Hotel Wentworth, at Oak Knoll, and the extensive grounds will all be landscaped and improved in the same manner as those of his private residence, close by. A big amount of first-class nursery stock will be needed and doubtless William Hertrich will be as successful in this as in the Huntington grounds. The two will make a superb piece of planting, probably unrivaled in the whole of the great southwest.

A new service building is to be erected at the Dieterich & Turner plant at Montebello. This will include spacious packing and potting sheds, a kitchen, living-room and a number of bedrooms for the help, a garage and other conveniences.

The Scotch heather at Morris Goldenson's has proved an excellent seller. John Gordon says there are lots of Scotchmen in Los Angeles and that they are quite patriotic.

Tassano Bros. have taken new premises at 121 East Fourth street and the name of the firm will be changed to the Los Angeles Evergreen & Flower Supply Co. The Hill street store will be continued, at least until Christmas and probably longer. The new place will give much needed facilities for carrying on the increasing business.

The Los Angeles Flower Market reports a good business. Mr. Morton moves around quite a little in his Buick and the personal touch helps out in increased business. Shipping to out-of-town points has increased considerably of late.

A. F. Borden says that the Redondo Floral Co. is doing more business now at the Spring street store than the Second street and Spring street stores combined did at this time last year.

The Pasadena flower show called for a lot of decorative material and the H. N. Gage Co. had a large share of this. The firm was entirely sold out of valley, orchids and Cecil Brunner roses for Society night, October 25.

Frank Lichtenberg is back from his hunting and shooting trip, looking much better for the change. He reports an excellent time motoring over the fine roads around Elsinore and nearby points, and he brought back evidences of his skill as a hunter. Business keeps up well at the store.

J. J. Broomall, the dahlia specialist of Eagle Rock, is sending in choice cuts of cactus and decorative dahlias. He grows 600 varieties, all showy, good ones, fine for cutting.

S. Murata ships large quantities of stock to Texas and says his consignees are well pleased with the way his flowers arrive. Outside of the shipping trade, he keeps two automobiles busy delivering around the city.

The Chandler funeral made a lot of work for J. W. Wolters, October 22, and this and several weddings have kept the staff busy.

Norris & Son are busy on their new ranch at Montebello, new lath, new glass and a new dwelling house being among the improvements under way.

O. C. Saakes left October 21 for the San Francisco show. Business at the store is keeping up well. Some of the finest Gladiolus America seen this season are now being shown in the windows here; the spikes are large and the color is elegant for so late in the year.

A. I. Wing is changing the name of his store at 201 West Fifth street from Jack's Flower Shop to The Violet. Business is good here.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues to be warmer than is usual at this season. As a consequence, flowers of all kinds are plentiful. The nights are not yet cool, and until they become so there will be quantities of outside stock. Mums are now at their best. Of the inside varieties, the earlier sorts are over, but the outside stock is in full bloom. Prices seem to be a little lower than they were a year ago, but with the advent of colder weather these prices may be changed somewhat. Inside roses are plentiful, but not of fancy quality. There is plenty of short-stemmed stock and this can be purchased cheaply. Carnations are good, but cheap. Violets are daily growing better. Orchids and valley are somewhat more plentiful. Japanese lilies are completely out of the market. Business is rather quiet, though the signs are for an early improvement.

Various Notes.

A visit to the houses of G. W. Simmons, at Elmhurst, shows a splendid stock of roses coming on in good shape for the holiday trade.

The Quality Floral Co., recently started on Telegraph avenue, Oakland, has closed its doors.

Hayashi & Co., of Oakland, are showing a magnificent house of cyclamens. This firm is making a specialty of these plants and their stock is probably the finest ever shown here.

Fred Werner, formerly of Los Angeles, is in town on a short visit. He will make a trip to Portland, Ore., and the northwest in a few days.

The fall exhibition of the San Francisco Floral Societies will be held in the Fairmount hotel during the last of the present week. From the number of entries it is evident that it will even surpass that of one year ago. G.

back seat for anyone. Returns from field plants this year have been flattering—the kind that mean bigger business in the succeeding years. A visiting florist who has a large holding in the east could hardly believe it possible, when shown a house of Asparagus plumosus grown by the Loomis Carnation Co., that they were grown from seed planted this spring.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

A hard frost has cut down all the outside stock and has been beneficial to the retail trade. All the local stock offered is cleaned up each day and, with the cooler and brighter weather, the stock is of much better quality. Carnations are quite plentiful and of good quality. Good chrysanthemums are scarce and most of the best grades are still shipped in, but in a week or two local stock will be plentiful in all grades.

The growers have all received their importations of azaleas and are putting them in the houses for early forcing. The stock arrived in splendid condition and promises good plants well bloomed for the holiday trade.

Various Notes.

A. Donart, of Coeur d'Alene, paid us a hurried visit October 20. He has contracted with A. J. Burt to handle all his surplus stock this season.

F. L. Zeigler has opened again in his old stand on Lincoln street and reports a good business, especially in the potted plants.

Henry Reimers is showing some fine valley and his crop of My Maryland roses is at its best.

Hoyt Bros. are busy painting and cleaning up their store in order to have it at its best before the holidays come along. They have installed a pretty mirror decoration in the window, which shows off the flowers to good advantage. They are cutting some fine Richmonds and Killarneys and finding a good market for them.

The Spokane Greenhouses are booking a great many orders for the holiday trade and have orders for all their poinsettia pans and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Their poinsettias for cutting have stems from four to six feet and will be the finest ever shown in this city.

Miss Burns, of the Burns Floral Co., of Seattle, was a recent visitor.

C. T. K.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Business of late has shown a decided improvement, and, since the frost of last week has destroyed all outdoor stock, there are prospects of good fall trade. Carnations are arriving in greater quantity and are of good quality, but the better grades are soon cleaned up. Mums are selling well, with a marked shortage of white and light colors. There seem to be plenty of the yellows and the poorer grades of all colors. The crop is showing the effect of the ravages of the tarnished bug and some of the growers lost the entire crop of early buds on certain varieties.

Various Notes.

The florists' bowling teams met in their first practice games on Wednesday evening, October 23. Some good scores were rolled, each side winning two games.

The next regular club meeting will be held in the Maccabees' hall, at Eleventh street and Pacific avenue, November 7.

J. L. S.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business conditions are gradually improving. With the passing of the outside stock, the demand for choice flowers has become more brisk. The recent heavy rains have helped materially. Mums are plentiful and of unusual quality. Tousets have produced exceptionally large heads. Ivory in its various colors proved a good seller. American Beauties are about equal to demand and the prices range from $2.50 to $6 per dozen. Maids, Richmonds, Hillingdons and Killarneys have produced a good crop of flowers, with a daily clean-up.

Carnations are improving in quality, but there is hardly enough available stock to supply the demand. Valley and orchids are scarce, with a steady demand. Ferns and palms move well; there is never a surplus of choice ferns. Lorraine begonias and cyclamens find ready sales.

Various Notes.

C. Tonseth met with a serious accident last week. The auto in which he was riding was struck by a street car, and his collar bone and several ribs were broken. It will be several weeks before he will be able to attend to business.

E. R. C.

PROPAGATING VINCAS.

I would like to ask through The Review about rooting variegated vincas. I have seen by the paper that it is the easiest of all vines to root, but I have trouble with them. I have tried them all ways, and none of them are satisfactory. I have some fine stock and would like to get a lot of young stock on hand. I have cut the vine just below the joint, and have cut halfway between the joints, but they all wilt when in the sand a day or two. I will be thankful for the information that will put me on Easy street.

E. H. M.

Short-jointed cuttings of soft wood, rubbed off with a heel, root readily if given a little bottom heat, either now or later in the season. You can also use well ripened wood. Cut the same in lengths, allowing two eyes to each, and cut directly below the lower one. Firm the sand well and water before inserting the cuttings. Once they are in the sand you must be sure that they are shaded from sun, protected from air currents and regularly watered. The sand must never be allowed to even approach dryness. Provided drainage is good and the sand sufficiently porous, the cuttings should need one watering a day. With careful treatment you should have little trouble in rooting a large majority of your cuttings.

DENVER.

The Market.

It is with regret that we report a great glut in this market. The city is flooded with flowers of all kinds, with the possible exception of carnations, and there is almost no demand. The bottom has dropped out of prices, and little is being realized for the fine quality of stock now on the market. Killarneys, both pink and white, were seldom better, the buds being extra large and the stems and foliage extra good, but there is practically no demand. Richmonds are not so plentiful, but it is just as well they are not, for the demand amounts to nothing. Long and medium Beauties sell fairly well, but not well enough to dispose of them all. Short-stemmed ones are scarce, and it is not always possible to supply them.

In chrysanthemums there is a great supply of all grades, from the choicest varieties down to the little ones. The best mums are selling for less than one-half what they usually bring, owing to the fact that there is such a quantity ready to cut. The violet business picked up in the latter part of the week and all that came in were sold, but during the first few days there was no call for them and a great many were lost. Valley of good grade can be had at any time now. This will be welcome news to some who have not been able to depend on getting it when they wanted it. Carnations are still a little slow, but, with so many chrysanthemums in competition, the demand is not likely to increase any faster than the supply.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club will be held November 4, at T. M. A. hall. Officers for the coming year will be elected.

William Speth, who, in addition to having a sprained ankle, was confined to the hospital for two weeks with a bad attack of pleurisy and pneumonia, has been removed to his home and is rapidly on the road to recovery.

The Park Floral Co. seems to be the only flower house to report any increase

NEW SCARLET CARNATION

The Herald

We ask you to kindly take into consideration the many strong points of this new Scarlet Carnation which we offer for January, 1913, delivery. Three strong, perfect points of The Herald: Large, 3½-inch perfectly formed flowers on long, strong stems. Perfect calyx; never bursts. Free and continuous bloomer, giving a heavy, continuous crop of perfect flowers the entire season. No Waiting until the end of the season to get flowers with long stems, but have plenty of them all the time. The plants are strong and vigorous, free from disease, easy to propagate. Cuttings struck in March make large plants for benching in July. Habit somewhat on the order of Enchantress, more vigorous and productive.

The Herald is one of our own originations. Have grown it the past four years, and have not only convinced ourselves of its sterling worth, but have booked orders the past two years from conservative carnation growers, who have watched the variety and wanted their order placed for early delivery no matter when disseminated.

Stock will be ready January 1, 1913.
$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

The Davison & Western Floral Co. has purchased the W. C. Walter place, at 482 Josephine street, the consideration being given as $23,000. Both men have been connected with the Iowa Seed Co., of Des Moines, Ia., and are practical florists. William Western is now in charge of the place. C. W. Davison will come in a few weeks, with his family, and will occupy the residence on the property, where Mr. Walter is now living. Mr. Walter's future plans are not known. Under his agreement with the purchasers, he cannot engage in the florists' business in this city for five years.

C. Lengenfelder was married about six weeks ago, but the news did not travel fast, and it was only learned a short time ago that he had been passing cigars around to the boys.

The Gross Floral Co. received second prize for a decorated Ford delivery car entered in the automobile parade during the recent carnival. Prepared oak foliage and yellow chrysanthemums were effectively used.

ADRIAN, MICH.

Adrian was the gathering place, October 29, for the florists of Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit and neighboring cities. The hosts were Elmer D. Smith & Co., and the guests numbered nearly 100, including thirty-four from Cleveland, thirty-five from Detroit and fifteen from Toledo, with five from Defiance and a number from other places. E. G. Hill came from Richmond and Richard Witterstaetter from Cincinnati. The visitors had been specially invited to inspect the Smith chrysanthemums, and the date had been fixed at a time when the newer early varieties would be at their best. Mr. Smith entertained his guests most hospitably and gave them opportunity to make copious notes, for the collection of chrysanthemums growing at Adrian is one of the largest in the country, including all the older sorts and a number of novelties which the majority of the visitors never before had seen growing.

After the tour of inspection, Adam Graham, of Cleveland, called for a vote of thanks for Mr. Smith and, after laudatory remarks, called on E. G. Hill for a speech. Mr. Hill referred to the friendly rivalry which has existed between the Smith and Hill establishments and said that Mr. Smith was entitled to much credit for the work he has done with the chrysanthemum. He spoke in special praise of the Smith variety, Chrysolora, which is this season winning high favor. Elmer D. Smith responded briefly, stating that he was not only pleased to have the visitors at his place, but was delighted that the attendance should have proved so large. Each of the guests was provided with a badge, and the delegation on the street made an imposing appearance. H. S.

Joliet, Ill.—Albert C. Rott had the decorations for the Folk-Rich wedding October 23, the largest of the season here.

Butte, Mont.—It is reported that a recent fire in the M. & B. block, next door to the store of the Butte Floral Co., caused considerable damage to the store and its stock, chiefly through the soaking by water from the fire engines.

The Market.

Business last week was rather quiet. Roses are almost a glut. Carnations are in fair demand, with a short supply. Chrysanthemums are plentiful and are used almost to the exclusion of other flowers. We have not had a killing frost as yet, but a temperature of 34 degrees a few mornings has made outdoor stuff look sick. Last year a killing frost occurred October 24.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are cutting lots of chrysanthemums. They have more this year than ever. The new residence was open for inspection recently and everyone declared it to be a beauty in construction and arrangement.

Jack Niednagel has taken up motorcycle racing, and won first place in the amateur class at the auto races a short time ago.

C. L. Niednagel has been cutting some nice Beauties. His roses in general are looking good.

Wm. Blackman Floral Co. is having a good business in mums, of which they are cutting lots of good, large ones.

Ben Kramer seems to have considerable to do right along. He keeps on hand a good supply of mums of good quality.

J. C. Elspermann is cutting mums in plenty and of course uses them in all the work he can. He has been busy in getting inside, all outside stock that a killing frost would damage.

Henry Seymour has been cutting some fine large carnations, though the stems are a little short as yet. His carnations were given a severe check, by a fertilizer he used in the soil, when planting. At least this is thought to have been the trouble. The plants are now recovering and promise to do well in the future.

Royston & Fenton have been cutting lots of roses this month. The demand, however, has been poor.

Louis Fritsch's carnations are in excellent shape.

Miss Nellie Goodge is getting along nicely and is able to get over to the greenhouses occasionally. E. L. F.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The Market.

Last week the autumn weather nearly attained perfection and could not possibly have been more in harmony with the spirit of entertaining. There were a great many weddings, and fall entertaining is at its height. Most of the decorations have been made doubly effective with autumn leaves and with flowers in keeping with the natural foliage.

Mums are good now, especially the larger varieties, but the prices are high. Roses are great, especially My Maryland. The new Lady Hillingdon is good, has excellent keeping qualities and is becoming quite a favorite. Paper White narcissi have made their appearance. Violets are fast reaching their regular place as the most popular flower for the corsage, and are good. Flowering plants are gaining in popularity and will for a time help to fill the wants of the flower buyer.

Various Notes.

Hans Rosacker is building a boiler room and installing a 100 horse-power boiler, which will more than heat the houses he now has, and there is plenty of room for two more boilers of the same size, which he expects to install when required by the enlargement of his range.

Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York, called on customers here last week.

Miss Whitted had a most effective decoration, in her Nicollet avenue and Tenth street store, for the "Made in Minneapolis" week. It was a Japanese garden, with beautiful flowering plants in profusion and excellent lighting effects.

The Hiawatha Gardens Co. has opened a retail store at the University avenue and Bedford street place, and is adding extensively to the greenhouses, building and equipping in the most up-to-date method. The firm is doing away with the old houses near the street, the absence of which will add greatly to the appearance of the place. The new storage room for bulbs, which is cooled by outside air, is about completed, and the company believes that this is going to be a much more satisfactory way of handling the bulbs, eliminating the necessity of digging the flats out of the frozen ground. W. F. H.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Fred Folden, formerly in business at 1501 Sixth avenue, north, has removed to 3403 Chicago avenue.

NO ARGUMENTS NEEDED TO SELL OUR GOODS

25 years' experience in importing, growing and shipping his specialty, that so well-known novelty,

THE ARAUCARIA EXCELSA

WHEN YOU BUY, IT PAYS TO BUY GOOD STUFF

Look and see what Mr. Fred J. Michell, of the so well-known firm, Henry F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, has to say about our plant, Sept. 14, 1912:

"I have just visited the greenhouses of Godfrey Aschmann, and must say that it was indeed a great surprise to me. I have never seen a better lot of Araucarias, Ferns of all sizes and varieties and prices, Rubbers, Palms, Azaleas and all other seasonable plants ready for shipment, as are at present at Mr. Godfrey Aschmann's."

"Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 7, 1912—Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia. Dear sir: Find P. O. payment for the following order. Your last shipment of plants has been so satisfactory, I must add a word of praise and appreciation. Very truly yours, S. B. SENSEMAN, 2 So. Suffolk Pl., Atlantic City, N. J."

Araucaria Excelsa, raised from top cuttings, spring importation, 1911. 6 to 7-in. pots, 4 to 5-year-old, 5, 6, 7, 8 to 9 tiers, 25, 28, 30, 35 to 40 inches high, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, raised in Belgium, from top cuttings, spring importation, 1912, 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 2 to 3-year-old, 3, 4 to 5 tiers, 14, 16, 18, 20 to 25 inches high, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca and Excelsa specimen plants, 28, 30, 35 to 40 inches high, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

AZALEA INDICA

New importation, unpacked and in first-class condition, full of buds. I must say that they stood the sea voyage well, and I do not say too much when I say that ever since I began the Azalea importing I never received such a fine lot as this time. If you want to force Azaleas for Christmas successfully, do not wait long, but start right away, giving at first 50°, then 55°, and gradually raise the temperature to 60°-65°, when they show color then slowly cool off again. We have Petrick, the best early pink, Deutsche Perle, double white, Simon Mardner, double pink, Vervaeneana, double rose variegated (one of the best old standard varieties), Pharailde Mathilde, resembles Vervaeneana, but much lighter in color, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. For later and for Easter blooming we only imported the well known American varieties, such as Mme. Vander Cruyssen, Paul Weber, Niobe, John Llewellyn, Apollo, DeSchryveriana and a few others (the Christmas varieties also can be kept for Easter very easily), 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.80 to $2.00 and $2.50. We only ship out good stock, all are worth the money charged for them—but look, Brother, the importing of Azaleas is no more profitable; when they arrive in America we have to pay 50 to 60% on duty, freight and other charges; in Europe we have to pay $2.50 for every box for packing, and have to pay duty on the packing also. Therefore we must have the CASH WITH THE ORDER, and nothing else.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green.

These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When In Philadelphia be sure to Look Us Up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

CARNATIONS.

The following entirely unsolicited testimonial came to me with an order under date of Sept. 5, 1912:—"I want to say for the good of the trade and for your benefit, also, that your plants last year were the best I ever handled. I bought 2,200 plants and did not lose one in the whole lot. You may use these few words above as you see fit, if of any benefit to you."—Wm. E. Mosher, New Bedford, Mass.

This man was pleased with his stock and is only one of a great number of satisfied customers. I still have a large number of plants and stock left after Oct. 26 will be protected from frost. I guarantee satisfaction at the following low prices: No 2 stock is bright, thrifty and has been topped carefully, serviceable stock, good as No. 1 in every way but size.

It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers up to date. Special attention to long distance orders. Greenhouse Heating.

FUEL OIL BECOMING SCARCE.

From the western headquarters of the Standard Oil Co., at Chicago, comes the announcement that it will cease the sale of fuel oil after December 1. The phenomenal increase in the use of gasoline for engines propelling automobiles and other machinery is given as the cause for abandoning the fuel oil branch of the business. It has been found more profitable to keep the oil and refine it rather than sell it for fuel purposes.

There are quite a number of greenhouses that burn oil, but a majority of these are located outside what the oil interests consider as the Chicago territory. How these oil burners will be affected is not yet apparent, except that unquestionably the cost will be higher. At present the western independent oil companies are somewhat at sea over the course to pursue. Their capacities in the middle west territory are far too small to take care of the entire demand.

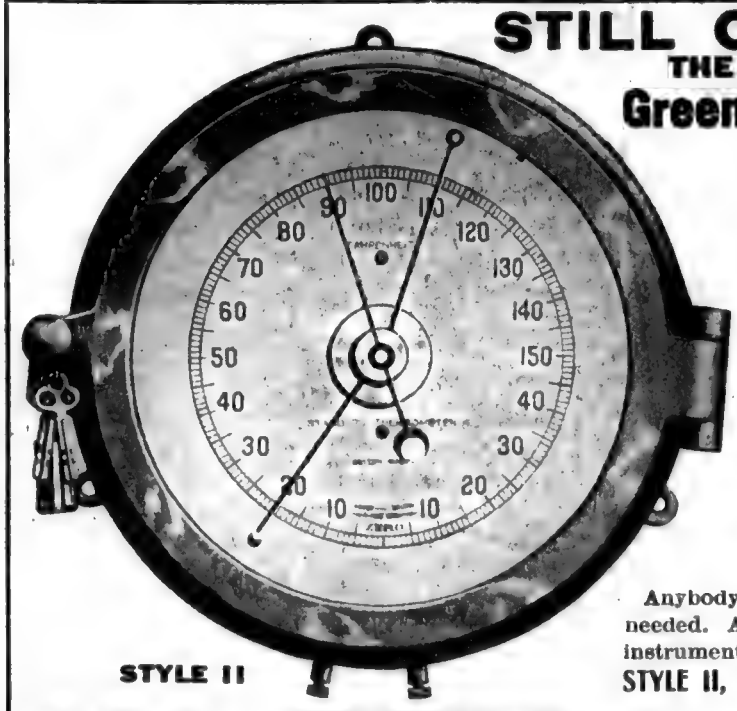
TO PREVENT BOILING OVER.

I noticed in The Review of October 24, page 94, an inquiry under the title of "Expansion Tank Boils Over," by H. H. K. I had the same trouble last winter, two or three times. It was caused by the water getting hot enough to begin running out of the expansion tank, and this action, when once started, kept siphoning the water out of the system, because the expansion tank could get no air. I put on a check air-valve at the top of the tank, which was a little higher than the pipe which carried the overflow. This remedied my trouble. I also put a water gauge on the expansion tank, and as soon as I saw water in the gauge I prevented it from getting any higher, which gave me ample room for expansion, as the gauge was at the lower edge of the expansion tank.

It goes without saying, that if water, when it has started to run, does not have air or some means of relieving the pressure, it will continue to siphon itself till it has run out too much or more than is convenient. Perhaps if H. H. K. will put an air check-valve on his tank, it will be as beneficial as mine was to me. P. Waterer.

ILLINOIS HOUSE FOR CUKES.

How many 2-inch pipes would I require for a house 32 x 100 and seven feet to the eaves, with four feet of glass in the walls, one side exposed to weather, to grow cucumbers, with a temperature at times of 20 below zero? The house runs north and south and the north end is boarded up. We use hot water.



E. C. S.

To heat the house described use five 2½-inch flow pipes and twenty 2-inch returns. One flow can be upon each plate and the others under the ridge and two of the purlins. Place four returns on each wall and, if solid beds are used, run two pipes on each side of three of the walks, or place them under-

GREENHOUSE AND RESIDENCE.

Will you please give me a plan for the heating of my greenhouse? It is 35x100 and fourteen feet to the ridge, with no glass in the sides. The walls are concrete. The house is built against the dwelling house, with half of the gable exposed. A coal shed at the west also protects half of the west gable. I should like to know how to pipe the house and what size of boiler to use to heat it with hot water to a temperature of 60 degrees in this Ohio climate. I also want to heat three rooms on the first floor of the dwelling. The greenhouse is new. M. M. T.

As nearly as can be determined from the description given, it will be possible to heat the greenhouse 35x100 feet by using five 2½-inch flow pipes and fifteen 2-inch returns. Run one flow under the ridge, one on each wall plate and the others under the purlins. Three or four of the returns can be under each side bench or on the walls, and the others under the other benches,

Where There Is Condensation

—there is need for a Morehead Steam Trap. Condensation in steam lines is akin to matter out of place—means wasted energy.

If your lines are sluggish—if your houses are not of uniform temperature, write us. We guarantee to drain your lines perfectly—return the pure, hot condensation to your boiler without pump or injector or make no charge for the trial. Obey that impulse—write now.

or in the walks if solid beds are used. Run the flow pipes downhill. A boiler rated for 2,000 square feet should answer.

FROM STEAM TO HOT WATER.

I have two houses, each 30 x 65 feet, fourteen feet to the ridge and five feet to the eaves, with four feet of glass in the south sides, none in the north and all ends glass to the sills. A thirty horse-power boiler, return tubular type, is located between the houses at the west end, and the top of the boiler is below the returns. These houses are now piped for steam, but I intend to change to hot water. What plan would you suggest in order to obtain a temperature of 50 degrees, with an outside temperature of 15 degrees below zero? There are no benches. My location is central Connecticut. H. A. N.

For the main flow and return use 4-inch pipes; from the main flow one 3-inch pipe can be carried to each of the houses. If more convenient, the 3-inch flow and return for each house may connect directly with the boiler. In each house use three 2½-inch flow pipes. Run one under the ridge and one on each wall plate. In addition there should be three coils of four 2-inch pipes each, in each house, as returns.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

There is not much change in business since last report. Chrysanthemums are coming in quantities and are realizing fair prices. The wholesalers complain that the cost of packing boxes for chrysanthemums is so great that there is not much profit in handling them. There seems to be plenty of everything seasonable coming in. We have not had a real killing frost to date.

Various Notes.

The retailers are all making beautiful window displays of chrysanthemums and autumn foliage, the prepared oak sprays coming in just right.

The show at Schenley park is attracting great crowds. The attendance October 27 was 20,000. The display keeps getting better every day.

Randolph & McClements report trade as good. Their window of yellow chrysanthemums, dahlias and autumn foliage was beautiful. They are busy preparing for the annual Hallowe'en ball of the Pittsburgh Athletic Club.

Mrs. A. W. Smith, wife of the president of the A. W. Smith Co., met with a serious accident October 23. She was struck by an automobile and suffered a fractured arm and many bruises.

T. Malbranc, of Johnstown, recently made the run to Pittsburgh in his automobile.

I. V. Kinder, of Charleroi, Pa., is completing a new house 40x300, of Lord & Burnham construction. He will grow carnations.

The Walton Floral Co., Rice's Landing, Pa., is putting up a show house across the end of several of the houses. It will be about 30x100 feet.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is receiving and shipping large quantities of fine boxwood sprays. This evergreen seems to get more popular each year.

Mrs. E. A. Williams is using a specially heavy basket, which, when filled with chrysanthemums and tied with the

The Market.

Business was exceptionally good last week. Funeral work was plentiful and a number of receptions and other social affairs helped the flower business. Stock is more plentiful and some fine flowers of all kinds are coming in.

Show Preparations.

The flower show is the talk of the town at this time and a number of new committees were appointed at a recent meeting: Committee to handle passes —Messrs. May, Dysinger and Eckhardt. Committee to take charge of ticket office and doors—Messrs. Eckhardt and Hermes. Committee to take charge of flower booths—Messrs. Bingham, Hansen and Holm. Music committee—Messrs. Reid, Lauritzen and Hansen. Information committee of ten, C. E. Schaffer, of La Crosse, Wis., chairman, the members to be named later. Mrs. Ruff was appointed to look after the photographic contest. One novel feature of this is to be a set of pictures illustrating tree surgery. Season tickets in lots of ten will be distributed this week by a committee from the Association of Commerce. The program will carry no advertising, and it is thought this will commend itself to our merchants, as they are being constantly solicited for advertising for various programs. In place of this advertising, they will be asked to buy tickets to distribute to their employees, friends and customers, and it is hoped in this manner to sell several thousand tickets in advance of the opening of the show. Season tickets will be sold for $2, good for the four days of the show and the symphony concert on Sunday. A number of special features have been prepared to interest the general public, like Governor's day, Elks' day, etc., and the newspapers are boosting the show.

The premium committee has received a trophy from J. F. Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, Ia., suitably engraved, which will be awarded in place of one of the cash premiums.

Various Notes.

Miss O'Keefe, who a year ago purchased the Swanson store in the Endicott arcade, was married October 19. The lucky man is A. E. Spencer, an expert chemist. Mrs. Spencer will continue her store.

A. F. Longren, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, spent a few days in the city last week, also Julius Dilloff, of Schloss Bros., New York. C. R. F.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Trade last week ran along quite smoothly throughout the entire week. Indian summer weather still prevails and stock continues to be in generous supply. Roses seem to be the only variety of flowers on which the florist does not clean house. Carnations are a little off crop at present, especially the white, but they are equal to the demand. Chrysanthemums are coming in abundantly now, and other stock is taking a back seat. There will be a good supply of yellow in for the Hallowe'en demand, and all sizes and colors for All Saints' day. Good business for this day greatly depends on the weather. All the florists ask is a good, hard frost to knock out the outdoor mums. Primroses and potted pompon chrysanthemums are selling well. Several of our prominent citizens died last week and this has brought an unusually big demand for funeral work.

Various Notes.

Chas. Schwake, representing Chas. F. Meyer, New York, made his regular autumn call on the trade October 28.

Saturday of last week was a big day for funeral work at John Boehner's plant.

E. Schieble, Miamisburg, O., was in town last week buying supplies.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. Elizabeth Young is in a precarious condition. Early Saturday morning, October 26, she was stricken with paralysis.

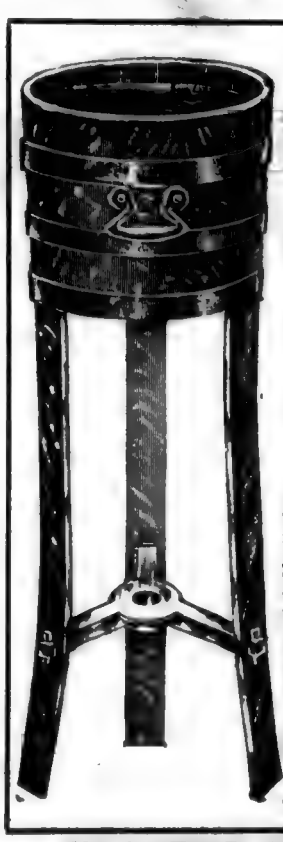
Fred Lembke, representing W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, spent a few days with the trade last week.

Ira Clark, of Greensburg, Ind., stopped over in Dayton last week.

News has just been received of the death of Jos. N. Hodgin, a well known greenhouse builder of Richmond, Ind., at his home October 27. Mr. Hodgin has built many greenhouses in Dayton and is well known to the trade. Funeral services will be held October 31. His many friends extend their sympathy to his bereaved family.

Louis Schellhaas, of Miamisburg, O., was in town on business October 22.

George Lampert, of Xenia, was in the city last week buying stock for a large reception in Xenia.



The Miami Floral Co. is cutting some fine chrysanthemums of all sizes and colors. Trade with them has been fine and they, too, have been busy with funeral work. R. A. L.

Mitchell, S. D.—The Davison County Greenhouse started in business in October, 1910. It consisted of 1,600 square feet under glass. In 1911 the house was enlarged to cover 2,500 square feet of space. This year other improvements have been made, which make the space now under glass 5,000 square feet. A new boiler will be installed in the near future. This will make it possible to heat 8,300 square feet, which the company hopes to have by another year.

Owning Your Greenhouse --What It Means

This is the U-Bar —the Bar that makes U-Bar Greenhouses the famous greenhouses they are.

You can talk about the things cold frames will do for you "until the cows come home," but if you want real flowers, real bedding plants that you can count on being top-notch year in and year out—then a greenhouse is the only thing. The only thing, because it is the sure thing. With a greenhouse your frames become doubly valuable, as then one helps the other, greatly to the advantage of both. With a greenhouse you can control temperatures and conditions and can have what you want when you want it. But don't allow anyone ever to persuade you that any other curved-eave house is just as good as the U-Bar. It's not so. We want to show you exactly why. Send for the catalogue as a starter.

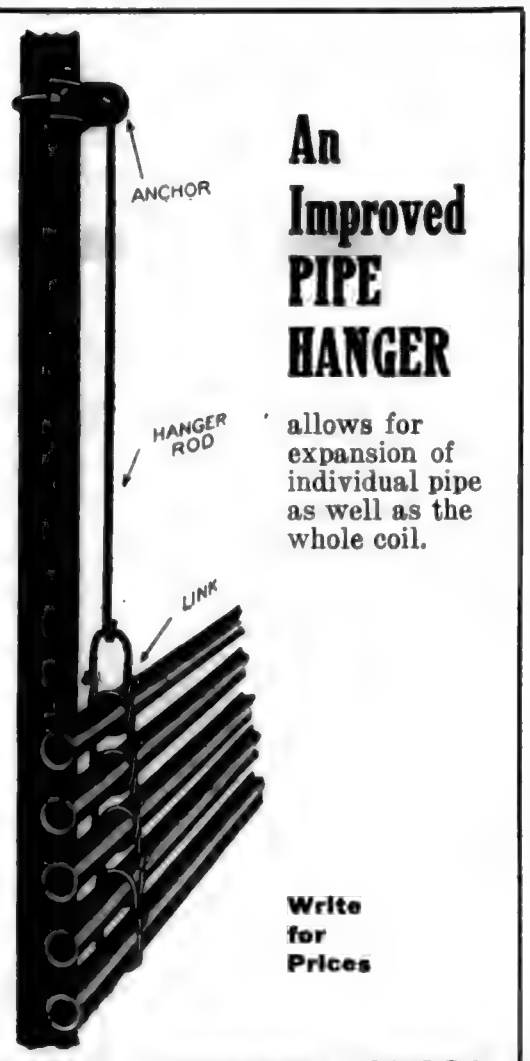
MONTGOMERY on Grafted Roses, sent by The Review for 25 cents.



Here's Progress

THE first house Mr. Mabie, of Maywood, N. J., built, he bought the materials of half a dozen different concerns. The next was our Half Iron Frame construction. The last, a Full Iron Frame one with all the materials for the complete house bought of and erected by the one concern. We were that one.

In that new Commercial Greenhouse Catalogue of ours, you will get the story in detail, as well as both constructions, fully described and illustrated. Send for it.

No scarcity of Chiffons for our customers

Popular priced Chiffons are said to be scarce, very scarce, owing to the mills being very busy making higher priced dress goods.

There is no scarcity here for our customers. Months ago we made ample preparations to protect our trade, and we have today, we think, the largest general stock of Chiffons in America, at prices beyond reach of competition.

Gauze Shower Ribbons Satin Ribbons

Taffeta Ribbons

We offer values in the above, astonishing to those who are not familiar with our policy of "More goods for the same money, or the same goods for less money."

THE NEW CLEAR SCARLET BEDDING GERANIUM "HELEN MICHELL."

The best commercial novelty for 1913 (name registered with S. A. F. & O. H.). Seedling cross Jean Viaud and Alphonse Ricard. This sterling novelty will be introduced jointly by Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and ourselves and the plants will all be grown by us at our place at Norwood, where we will be pleased to have you call. You will find that this Geranium has all the good points claimed for it. "Helen Michell" is semidouble, of the clearest possible shade of scarlet, is early in bloom and produces these continuously during the season. It grows compact medium dwarf, with lustrous green foliage, and throws up gigantic flower heads continuously; we claim it to have the largest flower heads of any of the bedding geraniums. The individual blooms measure 2½ inches across. It is a common occurrence that a single 4-inch pot plant shows 4 fully open gigantic flower heads, several half open, and more in bud. We are booking orders that will be filled in rotation from January, 1913.

2¼-inch pots.....$2.50 per dozen; $15 per 100; $125 per 1000

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A TRUE STORY.

Once upon a time, as all such narratives begin, there lived in a certain town two florists. They each did a fair business at fair prices and lived happy, normal lives.

Then one of them died and the widow sold the place.

The new man lost some trade, to be sure, but he also gained some, though not enough to satisfy him. He wanted to do a bigger business. So he began cutting prices.

Both places had been selling carnations at 50 cents and 75 cents a dozen. The new man got down to 35 cents and 50 cents, other things in proportion. And he certainly did make trouble for the fellow who was sticking to his old prices. Looked for a time as though he would be put out of business. It was only his wife's sound counsel that caused him to hang on when he got a chance to sell.

"Just you wait, John," she said. "This thing will work out all right, just as it did that time the minister wanted to cut out the flowers at funerals; he's gone and we're still here."

"Yes, we're here, all right," said John; "but that confounded price-cutter is getting all the trade."

"Now, you listen to me," argued the wife, who also is the maker-up. "When that fellow bought those houses they weren't in any too good shape; old man sick too long. Then he didn't spend a cent on repairs last summer. Not cutting much this season. Couldn't make much at our prices, nothing at all at what he's getting. 'What's going to happen?' Why, just this: Before he gets the mortgage paid the houses will have to be rebuilt. And he won't have the money. Can't borrow it, with a mortgage already on the place. Either the widow gets the place back or he sells the lots to somebody that wants to build some cottages. Anyway, I see his finish in this business."

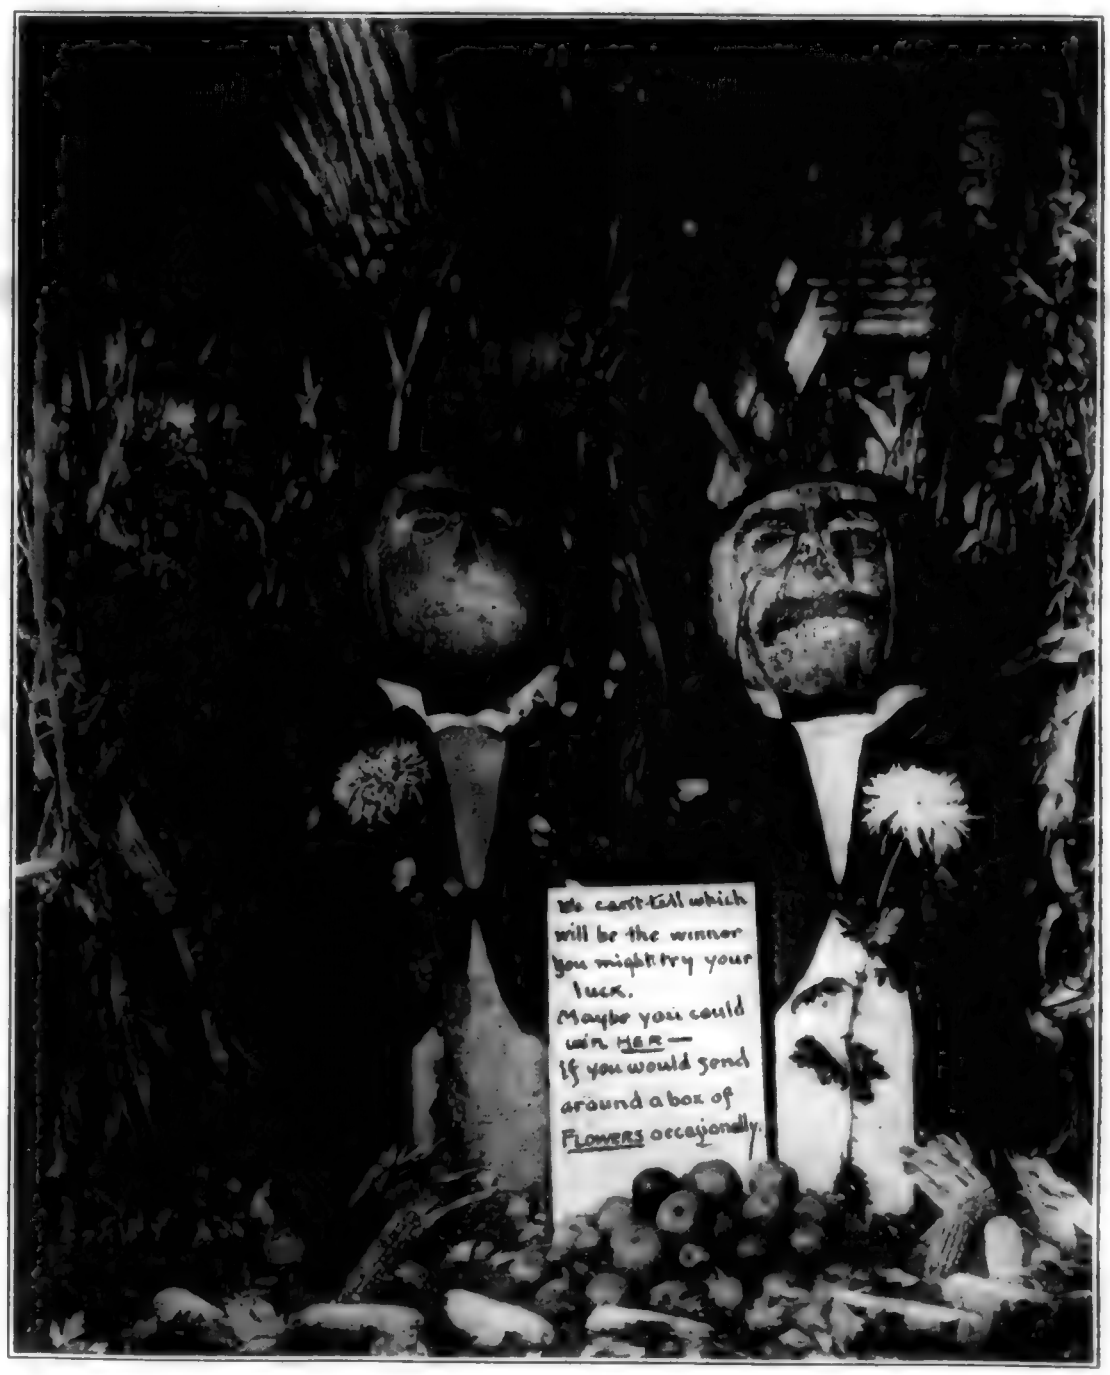
HALLOWE'EN WINDOWS.



The Southwestern Seed Co., which does a general florists' business at Fayetteville, Ark., made a big hit last week with the combination Hallowe'en and political windows shown in the accompanying illustrations. In one window they placed pumpkin-head images of Col. Roosevelt and Governor Wilson. These images were constructed in the following manner: The heads were fashioned from large pumpkins, into which the eyes, nose and mouth were cut. An opening was made in the bottom and the pumpkin was then placed on a pedestal over an electric light, which shone through the openings, bringing out the features of each image. The pedestal upon which the head representing Mr. Roosevelt was mounted was covered with white crepe paper over which red crepe paper was draped and fashioned into a cutaway coat, cut with the lapels rolling back, showing a white shirt front to which was attached a white collar and red bow tie. The image of Mr. Wilson was likewise dressed, black and gold crepe paper being used for coat and trousers, with white collar and black bow tie. An endeavor was made, in the selection of pumpkins, to get specimens that would represent in shape as nearly as possible the individuality of the gentlemen. A rather short, thick pumpkin was used to represent Mr. Roosevelt, the mouth being cut in such manner as to expose the teeth, over which a heavy mustache of sphagnum moss was attached with greening pins. The top of the head was also covered with sphagnum moss to represent the hair. Sphagnum moss over the eyes represented eyebrows, and the ever-present nose glasses, constructed of wire frames covered with isinglass, were placed in position, completing the face of the image. To represent Mr. Wilson a long pumpkin was used, which was fashioned in the same manner as that used for Mr. Roosevelt, with the omission of mustache and of exposed teeth. A large yellow chrysanthemum decorated the lapel of Mr. Wilson's coat, while Mr. Roosevelt was similarly decorated with a large white mum, the stems of each resting in glasses filled with water which were hidden by the covering of autumn leaves on the floor of the window. In the foreground between the two images was placed a huge pile of red and yellow apples and on either side of this red, white and yellow corn in the ear, with husks partly removed. Ears of white corn with the husk entirely removed were placed along the front of the window, and at the back and sides the window was lined with cornstalks as they are cut from the field.

Between Roosevelt and Wilson there was a card with the following in free-hand lettering:

"We can't tell which will be the winner; you might try your luck.

"Maybe you could win her if you would send around a box of our flowers occasionally."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Poinsettias.

The flower bracts will now be showing on the poinsettias, and now is the time when some additional heat can be applied with benefit. Of course the plants will still come along well in a temperature of 50 degrees at night, but if you want first-class bracts well developed before Christmas, give them 10 degrees more heat. This also is the period of all others in their development when feeding tells. For this purpose liquid cow or sheep manure once in four or five days is excellent. Be careful not to give it too strong, or the leaves will suffer. A pinch of Clay's fertilizer, a tablespoonful to an 8-inch pan, will also be found an excellent stimulant. If leaves show at all pale in color all over the plant, tone them up by weak doses of soot water, which will make the foliage a rich, dark green color.

The making up into pans, if still unfinished, should be completed at once. Water with care, remembering that either too much or too little will cause yellow leaves, and poinsettias with bare stems are not salable. Avoid heavy fumigations, as these also are bad for the foliage. If any shoots are still unsupported, see to it that they are staked at once. You can have some poinsettias well developed for Thanksgiving if required. To secure these, give the plants 65 to 70 degrees at night. As a rule, however, the sale for them at that festival is not active as compared with Christmas.

Lilies for Christmas.

Cold storage lilies which are coming along for Christmas should show their buds by the middle of November, and a house kept at 65 degrees at night will suit them. Lilium speciosum wanted for the same holiday is better grown 5 degrees cooler. Keep all lilies freely sprayed and do not neglect either to fumigate regularly or else spray with nicotine or some other insecticide, to keep aphis in check.

Gardenias.

Anyone can grow and flower gardenias successfully during the spring months, but from the early part of November until the end of January is the time when they net the most money, as this is the period when the fewest appear on the market. Plants which are budded freely will, with proper care, prove profitable. When these are grown in pots there is less danger of the buds dropping, provided sufficient heat can be given them. Gardenias, to be grown successfully, need a warm house; a temperature of 65 to 68 degrees at night in winter is not too high, and 60 to 62 degrees on severe nights should be the absolute minimum. They also enjoy a little bottom heat, and plants in benches with a flow and return steam or hot water pipe below them dry out better and are far less liable to have the yellows or dropping buds than those without this aid.

The weather has been so warm this season that plants are flowering freely thus early, and a sudden sharp drop in temperature may cause disaster; hence the temperature, watering and ventilating must be looked after with care. The ventilators should never be opened with a rush, but a little at a time. Close them down fairly early in the afternoon and bottle up a nice, moist heat. Any spraying, which will be necessary at least twice a week, should be done early in the morning, so that the foliage will be well dried before night. Plants well rooted in pots will appreciate weak manure water, but in benches it will be safer to apply a light mulch of soot and old cow manure and omit liquid applications until the end of January, when the sun will be increasing in power.

Cyclamens.

There is a comparatively long season for cyclamen plants in the markets. They appear as early as September and, on the other hand, many will next year be sold for Easter. This means that there is a sale for them during half the year. It is important to have a good batch in as fine shape as possible for both Thanksgiving and Christmas, and in order to have them nicely in bloom the plants must have a temperature of 52 to 55 degrees at night. These early flowered plants will not be so stocky as the later ones, but there is a great advantage in moving them before the end of the year and having the bench space they have been occupying for some other crop, instead of carrying the same plants three months longer.

Do not let the plants stand too closely; each should stand quite clear of its fellow. Remove any bad foliage, weeds or surface scum which may appear, and give them the fullest possible sunlight and a position well up to the glass. Feed regularly when the pots are well filled with roots, and continue to give moderate stimulants until they are nicely in flower. Do not give the same food right along. Plants, like human beings, thrive better with a little change. Avoid strong chemicals, such as nitrate of soda, which would make the plants soft and cause wilting under bright sunshine. A pinch of fine bone or Clay's fertilizer on the surface can be followed by a dose of soot water and then cow or sheep manure, but always avoid heavy doses.

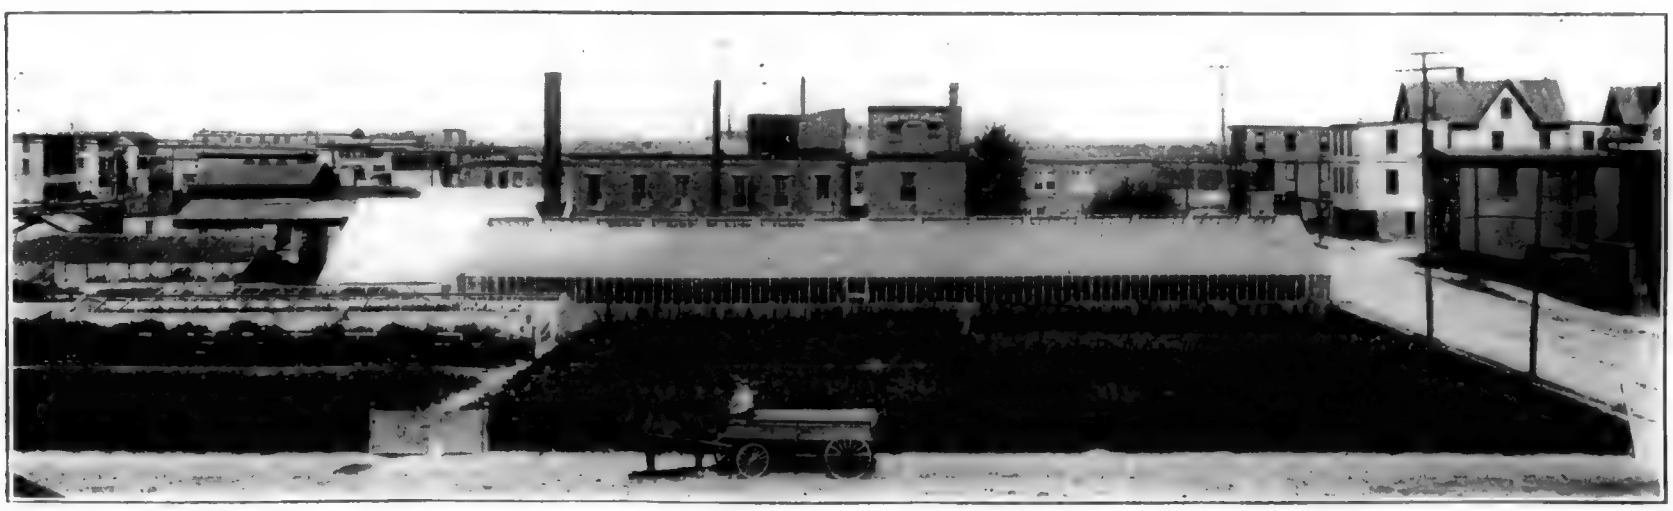
How are the early fall-sown seedlings coming on? If not yet transplanted, get them out into shallow flats of light compost, for which one-half each of loam and leaf-mold, with plenty of sand, will be found suitable. Stand the flats on shelves in a house kept at 55 to 60 degrees at night, and any later seedlings too small for handling should have a similar location. Keep the surface soil frequently scratched to keep the little plants growing.

Tuberous Begonias and Gloxinias.

The flowering season for tuberous begonias and gloxinias is now over, and plants which have been resting for some time and are thoroughly dried off should be laid away on their sides. Do not let this be under the greenhouse benches, where sow bugs will have a picnic with the tubers, but in a dry shed or frost-proof cellar. The gloxinias are better kept in a temperature of 50 degrees, as are achimenes, tydæas and gesneras, but tuberous begonias will carry well 10 to 15 degrees lower. Where pots or pans are needed, shake out the tubers and pack in dry sand or cocoanut fiber. They will keep much better thus and be less likely to go off with dry rot. In the case of the fancy-leaved caladiums the plants can be laid on their sides as the foliage passes. I like to carry these over winter in their pots, and to carry them over successfully they should have a temperature of 60 degrees.



Hardy Herbaceous Plants.

Where any hardy herbaceous plants have not been transplanted, owing to the pressure of other work, there is still time to attend to it before the ground freezes. With a few exceptions, hardy perennials are better planted in fall than spring, and November is not too late to move many of these. The ground is now moist and in excellent condition for work of this kind. Do not be afraid to cut up the clumps of any varieties which have become unwieldy. They give far better results thus divided. If your ground has been well prepared you can reasonably expect a first-class show from any perennial beds planted even as late as November.

REFRIGERATION FOR GROWERS

MODERN COOLING FACILITIES.

Cold an Essential for Best Results.

The ultimate consumer, in referring to the establishment of a grower of cut flowers, almost always refers to the glass structures as "hothouses," and the idea of heat is so associated in the mind of the outsider with the production of plants and flowers that the need for refrigeration never is thought of in connection with the business. Indeed, it is only in the last few years that those whose occupation it is have come to realize the importance of adequate cooling facilities in the preparation of flowers for market. Attention has been concentrated on the building and heating of greenhouses, the propagation and growing of stock, its cutting in quantity—but there, in many instances, the scientific handling has ceased. When the flowers were cut the grower's duty was done. But experience has demonstrated that such is not the case.

The Earliest Cooling Facilities.

While there still are large and important cut flower establishments, the owners of which are content to cut the stock, put it in boxes and send it off to be sold for what it will bring, the development of the industry many years ago made it apparent that there is a stage between cutting and shipping that is as important as any in the turning of space into cash. Fresh-cut flowers need grading—and hardening.

Just as the dairyman cools his milk before shipping and the fruit grower cools his pick before packing, so should cut flowers be cooled as soon as they come from the "hothouse." It adds materially to the life of flowers to "give them a drink" and cool them down before handling.

In the beginning all cut flower growers used the only cooling facilities at hand, the cellar. But a cellar is inadequate for a big plant, and other means had to be found. Many large growers who are where they can harvest their own ice built ice-houses in which were storage rooms and cooled sorting rooms. A number are in use today.

The Iceless Age.

When the automobile was just breaking in, it was the fashion to refer to it as the dawn of the horseless age. The iceless age dawned at about the same time. One of the more progressive florists, in fact, had a refrigerating machine in the greenhouses several years before any money was spent for motor cars. Now the new greenhouse service buildings contain artificial refrigeration apparatus just as certainly as any other item of up-to-date equipment.

New Residence of W. J. Keimel.

Thus far the makers of refrigerating machines have been so busy with big jobs that florists have had to hunt suitable equipment. But that time is passing. There already are a number of suitable systems on the market. Soon the ice machine man will be cultivating the florists, just as the motor truck salesmen are doing. Doubtless the first in the field will get the cream of the business.

Along this line attention recently was called to the installation of a modern refrigerating plant by the firm of Wendland & Keimel, whose range at Elmhurst, Ill., cannot but excite the admiration of all who visit it.

The firm of Wendland & Keimel is comparatively young, starting some five years ago with a range of ten houses devoted exclusively to the growing of roses. With last season's addition they now have twenty-one houses, covering an area of 130,000 square feet and containing 70,000 plants. The output, which is sold in the Chicago market, averages about 6,000 blooms per day.

The Refrigerating Apparatus.

Up to the last few months Wendland & Keimel had cooled their stock in an ordinary ice-box such as is used in wholesale cut flower stores or for storage in retail establishments. Finding that increased facilities were necessary, they abandoned the old box and put in a new double box cooled artificially. The expense was in the neighborhood of only $1,500 and the equipment appears to be ideal. The doors of the boxes face the sorting tables, where the roses are graded. No steps are wasted. The brine tanks are in the top of the box, where the ice ordinarily goes. Either or both halves of the box can be cooled and used as needed. The motor and compressor are in a space behind the box, where the closing of a door shuts out all dust and the apparatus is out of sight and out of the way.

The electric motor drives the compressor, which vaporizes the ammonia.

Rose Growing Establishment of Wendland & Keimel, at Elmhurst, Ill.

The ammonia gas circulates above the storage boxes and through the tanks of brine, and back to the machine. "We start the motor when the temperature in the box has risen to 48 degrees," said H. E. Wendland, in speaking of the simplicity of operation. "The temperature at once begins to fall, and we shut off the power when 42 degrees is reached. The temperature keeps going down to about 38 degrees, and then it starts slowly to rise again. In from eighteen to twenty-two hours, depending on the weather and the number of times the doors are opened, the temperature of the boxes will be back to 48 degrees, and we start the motor for another short run."

The illustration of the Wendland & Keimel establishment, prepared from recent photographs, includes the refrigerating machine and the cut flower boxes. The following technical description of the apparatus was supplied by the manufacturer, the United Refrigerating & Ice Machinery Co., Kenosha, Wis., supplemented by some practical operating notes by Mr. Keimel.

Technical Description of Apparatus.

The apparatus is of what is known as 3-ton capacity. The first illustration is of the compressor, together with the motor, in this instance situated at the back of the box, which latter may be plainly seen at the right. The compressor is of the two-cylinder, vertical type, having a stroke of five and one-half inches. It weighs 1,700 pounds and is driven by a five horse-power motor, which is larger than is needed. The compressor is of the splash system type of self-lubrication, the oil being contained in the enclosed crank case, where it is agitated by the motion of the crank shaft and thrown on the various moving parts, keeping them constantly covered with a film of oil. A gauge shows the amount of oil in the crank case. A self-oiling ring distributes oil over the pillow-block or out-board bearing.

"On the rear wall of the box, to the extreme right of the illustration, can be seen the condenser. It is of the double pipe type and counter current construction, built of 1¼-inch and 2-inch selected wrought iron ammonia pipe. It consists of an outer tube, containing ammonia, and an inner tube through which the water is circulated, these pipes being arranged in a coil with fittings on the ends, with the inner water tube passing through the end fitting of the outer tube, and returning in a similar manner through the next pipe below. This gives a continuous passage from top to bottom for the ammonia gas, and a reverse continuous passage for the water from the bottom to the top. As the hot gas enters the condenser where the water leaves, and the cold water enters where the ammonia leaves the condenser, a perfect exchange of heat units is effected.

"To bring the temperature of the box down to the required degree it is necessary to operate the compressor only three hours a day in the winter and five hours in summer. An even temperature is maintained by means of two tanks containing calcium brine, placed inside the box.

"The second photograph is of the box taken from the shipping room and showing one of the doors open. The box measures 11x20 and is eleven feet high. It is divided into two chambers, either of which may be operated independent of the other by the mere opening or closing of a valve. Above the door can be seen a smaller one which gives access to the tanks mentioned above. These brine tanks are occupied and surrounded by a series of coils which carry the ammonia gas from the compressor.

Refrigerating Apparatus of Wendland & Keimel.

The Cooling Rooms that are Artificially Refrigerated.

"Under the old method of using ice, about 10,000 pounds per week would have been needed, at a cost of $20. Taking into consideration the time and inconvenience incidental to putting in the ice, the cost of operation would be greatly increased. The depreciation of a modern refrigerating plant is not so great as the depreciation on a building into which it is necessary to carry five tons of ice every week, and the cost of operation is practically only that of the power required to drive the motor. According to Mr. Keimel's figures, the power bill for the first month, the hot month of August, was $27. The conservative estimate of the cost of artificial refrigeration, however, is that the operating expense is about one-half that of using natural ice."

Where the Real Profit Comes.

While Wendland & Keimel are able to figure a saving of some hundreds of dollars a year by the use of the machine instead of ice, the real profit comes in the selling end. Their stock is marketed by the E. C. Amling Co., in Chicago. "There has been a distinct improvement in the condition of their roses since they abandoned ice," says John Michelsen, of the Amling Co. "Of course the advantage is greatest in summer, but it probably will be more or less apparent all winter. In the hot weather, if ice ran low and was not promptly replenished, that day's cut came in popped open and reduced by more than half in value. After the refrigerating machine was started there was no more running out of ice, and the stock began coming in tight and salable every day. The percentage of flowers too open to ship has been appreciably reduced and the average value of the stock correspondingly increased. The grower's duty isn't done until he puts his flowers into the wholesaler's hands in the best possible condition."

In this issue there also is the reproduction of a photograph of the Wendland & Keimel range of houses, which shows in the foreground the latest addition of eleven houses. In the distance can be seen the original range, the building occupied by the employees and the stack of the boiler house. Another illustration is of the new residence of Mr. Keimel, just completed, showing that Mr. Keimel used the same thoughtfulness in building his home that in business has put Wendland & Keimel among the most successful growers in the country.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

PHILADELPHIA.

The fall show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society opened in Horticultural hall Tuesday evening, November 5. The society placed the decorations in the hands of a skilled artist, William Graham. The effect produced in the naturally beautiful hall was fine. Electric lights, plants, flowers and vines were used to produce a garden scene of rare beauty. The arrangement of plants throughout the hall and the introduction of balconies further heightened the general effect. The quality of the stock exhibited was of a high order in plants, in cut flowers and in ferns. The striking features of the main hall were the orchid case of Louis Burk and the Cattleya labiata picture of the Joseph Heacock Co. The former contained many choice cypripediums. The latter was a rare gem. The rose novelties were a feature. Mme. Charles Russell, from the Waban Conservatories, was superb. Milady, from A. N. Pierson Co., is a splendid red. Mrs. George Shawyer, from Charles H. Totty, is a pink of wonderful size and beauty. Mr. Totty shows two fine carnations, Northport, rose pink, and Commodore, scarlet, both exceedingly fine. Henry A. Dreer showed a fine group of foliage plants, including the variegated pineapple and some excellent Phœnix Roebelenii, also a general line of bulbs and requisites, including mat ware, a pleasing pottery. The exhibit was in charge of John S. Hay.

Henry F. Michell Co. had fifty varieties of fine pompons in charge of Charles A. Goudy, also one of Philip Freud's well executed scenes, showing how Michell bulbs come to this country, and a fine display of bulbs.

The Robert Craig Co. made a novel and telling exhibit of croton plants and croton wreaths. The Overbrook Gardens had twenty-five varieties of pompons and singles, including Mary Colladay. Lord & Burnham had a model greenhouse, which Michell filled with chrysanthemum plants in bloom. Hosea Waterer had a table of choice bulbs. The William H. Moon Co. had a group of fine evergreens.

These are a few hurried notes gathered while the judges were pinning the society's new blue rosette on the winners. Phil.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Rochester flower show opened November 5. It is generally conceded that the arrangement of the exhibits is even more pleasing than that of the two previous shows. The affair has taken on an official character, and the park commission is one of the largest exhibitors. In addition to the large chrysanthemums from the park greenhouses, an extensive collection of hardy chrysanthemums is shown. All of the displays made by the park board are beautifully arranged with brilliantly colored branches of shrubs. A large corner of one hall is filled with branches of shrubs and trees loaded with bright fruit, contrasting beautifully with pine boughs and brilliant autumn foliage. About twenty varieties of cratægus are included in the collection. All of this material is labeled. Highland park pinetum also contributed a number of magnificent specimen evergreens, which were used in the general scheme of decoration.

George Eastman, William Pirie, gardener, shows one of the largest collections of chrysanthemums, including some choice specimens. The collection was artistically arranged by Mr. Pitkin, on either side of the broad steps leading to the stage. The collection includes about a dozen specimens of various orchids.

George Eastman, William Pirie gardener, has a large display especially strong in hardy chrysanthemums. A striking feature in this display is a large block of Celosia Pride of Castle Gould. These celosias are splendidly grown and attract a great deal of attention. Several vases of Salvia leucantha are also much admired.

Salter Bros. have a large exhibit near the entrance, a miniature rustic garden attracting much attention. They make an extensive show of large chrysanthemums and several vases of fine roses. A fine effect is produced by intermingling bright-colored oak leaves with some of the chrysanthemums.

H. E. Wilson has the usual collection of varieties of chrysanthemums, with a background of large specimen plants of pandanus, palms and rubbers. Several large baskets were used in this display and the general effect is fine.

J. B. Keller's Sons are large exhibitors, the display containing a great variety of well-grown chrysanthemums, tastefully arranged. Beautiful specimens of cattleya and oncidium are included.

The exhibit of George T. Boucher contains two large cibotiums surrounded by dark-leaved plants. The effect is striking.

Jacob Thoman & Sons show a model about six feet in length of one of their greenhouses. It is given a pretty setting on a rockery foundation and is an artistic as well as an original bit of decoration. The house is filled with pansies, begonias and small ferns, and is lighted. The exhibit includes a large bank of ferns and palms.

Henry P. Neun, Felix Albert manager, shows some fine chrysanthemums. In one part of the exhibit the mums are strikingly set off by fine stove plants. A vase of Cardinal roses is shown to excellent advantage. A bank of rubrum lilies is a striking feature of this exhibit.

F. C. Schlegel's Sons show a fine collection of palms. Mingled with their vases of chrysanthemums are branches of brilliant shrubs. A small pool is surrounded by rock work, in the pockets of which are primroses, pansies and small ferns.

The exhibit of Crossman Bros. is enlivened with tanks of goldfish. A tall screen covered with prepared autumn leaves makes a brilliant background for the flowers and plants.

Vick & Hill Co. has used large masses of eulalia and barberry as a background for a collection of chrysanthemums. The effect is decidedly pleasing.

Charles Suhr shows some handsome cattleyas and the usual collection of chrysanthemums is varied by several vases of fine carnations.

George B. Hart shows a collection of vases of all of the varieties of roses obtainable at this time. The name appears on each v[illegible]ty. Mr. Hart also exhibits a large specimen of the "Bull Moose" fern.

E. R. Fry's collection includes a fine lot of hardy chrysanthemums and some fine specimens of holly were effectively used among the lighter greens of ferns and palms.

George Crook Co. shows some well-done palms, ferns and a collection of chrysanthemums.

H. C. Salmon also shows a collection of mixed chrysanthemums.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., shows a fine vase of Milady rose, which attracts a great deal of attention. Some fine Beauties and specimen ferns are also included in the exhibit. S. A.

NEW YORK.

The annual autumn exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York opened for a private view for the members on the evening of Friday, November 1, and on Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday attracted the largest attendance of the general public ever known at a flower show in New York. It was the largest exhibition thus far given by the society, and the quality of the exhibits excelled anything heretofore seen in New York, if not in the country. The show was staged in the American Museum of Natural History, at Central Park West and Seventy-seventh street, and was free. The exhibition occupied the lower floor of the great building, affording ample room for the exhibits and their comfortable examination by the crowds. The record of the attendance is as follows:

Saturday, November 2	15,800
Sunday, November 3	90,679
Monday, November 4	15,000
Tuesday, November 5	30,000
Total	151,479

The exhibitors in the classes for chrysanthemum plants were the gardeners on leading private estates. The quality of all the exhibits was of the best, but the three large plants, yellow, white and pink, shown by John Canning, gardener for A. Lewisohn, were notable. It is asserted by those whose opinions are of value that the quality of those three plants never has been excelled in this country. The pink specimen won the sweepstakes for the best plant in the exhibition. W. H. Waite, gardener for Samuel Untermyer, was Mr. Canning's principal competitor. Other good exhibits came from W. B. Thompson, Geo. Schlagle, C. Hathaway, Mrs. Borg and H. M. Tilford.

In the classes for cut chrysanthemums open to commercial growers, Traendly & Schenck were first for twelve white, twelve pink, twelve any other color and for twenty-five arranged for effect. C. H. Totty was second on twelve any other color. Mr. Totty captured the silver medal for six new varieties, one bloom of each. For collection of thirty varieties Scott Bros. were first and Mr. Totty second. For collection of pompons and also for collection of singles C. H. Totty was first and C. H. Rice second. The quality of all the cut blooms was excellent.

In the classes open only to non-commercial growers there was the keenest competition ever seen in a New York show. For six varieties, one bloom of each, there were fifteen entries. For collection of pompons there were nine entries and for collection of singles there were thirteen entries. The premiums were divided among the gardeners for Miss Cockcroft, Mrs. Griswold, W. B. Thompson, Miss Bliss, Mrs. Constable, Percy Chubb, H. L. Pratt, Miss Potter, C. Mallory and F. Sturges.

L. A. Noe was first for fifty American Beauties, F. R. Pierson Co. second. For White Killarney, F. R. Pierson Co. was first and L. B. Coddington second. For Richmond, Mr. Coddington was first. For fifty Killarney, Traendly & Schenck were first and L. A. Noe second. For yellow roses Traendly & Schenck were first and L. B. Coddington second. C. H. Totty secured the silver medal for new rose, with a splendid vase of Mrs. George Shawyer.

The premiums in the rose classes open only to non-commercial growers went to the gardeners for H. M. Tilford, Mrs. Constable, W. B. Thompson and Samuel Untermyer.

In the classes for carnations open to commercial growers Traendly & Schenck were first for fifty white, fifty Winsor shade, fifty Enchantress shade and fifty Lawson shade. The latter entry also captured the sweepstakes silver medal. They were second for fifty scarlet. Scott Bros. were first for fifty scarlet, with Wm. Eccles, and second for white and for Enchantress shade. Cottage Gardens Co. received a diploma for variety not in commerce. J. D. Cockcroft was second for fifty Lawson shade.

There also were some fine carnations among the numerous entries in the non-commercial classes. The premiums went to the gardeners for Miss Bliss, H. M. Tilford, F. R. Newbold, Mrs. Griswold, J. A. McDonald and W. W. Heroy.

The display of foliage and decorative plants was excellent, the prizes going to the same private gardeners who had been successful in the cut flower classes, except that Julius Roehrs Co. was first for display of bay trees and F. R. Pierson Co. was first for collection of nephrolepis.

Lager & Hurrell were the principal exhibitors in the orchid classes for commercial growers. In the eight classes they took seven firsts, there being no second. For six cypripediums, Julius Roehrs Co. was first and Lager & Hurrell second. In the orchid classes for non-commercial growers Samuel Untermyer, Miss Cockcroft and G. C. Graves exhibited.

In cut blooms of orchids J. A. Manda was first for collection arranged for effect, and Lager & Hurrell were first for cypripediums. The cut blooms for orchids from non-commercial growers came from Samuel Untermyer, Miss Cockcroft, Mrs. Constable, S. & A. Colgate and Mrs. Tuttle.

Among special prizes were a silver medal to Mrs. Tuttle for an odontoglossum, a special to Geo. Schlagel for standard chrysanthemum plants and to H. Darlington for dahlias.

J. A. Manda, president of the New York Florists' Club, was manager of the show. F. R. Pierson was chairman of the exhibition committee, which had among its members I. S. Hendrickson and John E. Lager.

Rockford, Ill.—Leake & Offord, of Belvidere, who purchased the greenhouse in the 1000 block on Corbin street some time ago, have sold out to W. C. Burroughs, of 2005 South Main street, who conducts a greenhouse at his home. Mr. Burroughs will take charge of the Corbin street greenhouse and will conduct both places.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The fall exhibition given by the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in the Fairmount hotel, October 23 to 26, was probably the most successful ever held in San Francisco. Both from the standpoint of quality of the individual exhibits and from the point of attendance by the public, it was second to none. The weather, except on the closing evening, was all in favor of the show and the interest shown by flower lovers from local and interior towns demonstrated the fact that the efforts of those having the affair in charge were greatly appreciated. Too much praise cannot be given to the officers and members of the society for the way the entire undertaking was handled.

Although it was primarily a chrysanthemum show, the exhibits of other classes of stock were large and complete. Of orchids in variety, interspersed with tree ferns and other stove and hardy plants, the MacRorie-McLaren Co. had the largest showing and received the silver cup. J. A. Carbone also had a fine display of over seventy varieties, which attracted much attention.

With chrysanthemums it is hard to tell where to start in describing them. Great mounds of Bonnaffon, Mrs. Jerome Jones and dozens of other sorts from all the principal growers made the hall a sight not soon to be forgotten. E. W. McLellan & Co., Henry Maier, Redwood City Nursery, Fred Agari, U. Yamaguchi, Shibuya & Ishuda and several other growers took the prizes on mums. There was a collection of varieties in pots from A. B. Spreckles, which was awarded first prize.

The display of roses was good. E. W. McLellan & Co., Domoto Bros. and J. A. Carbone all showed indoor stock to good advantage and the outdoor flowers, while not numerous, were good.

In carnations the showings made by Domoto Bros., E. W. McLellan & Co., Henry Maier, U. Yamaguchi, Z. Shibata and others all drew prizes.

H. Plath had a well arranged exhibit of ferns. It occupied a large space and he took many first prizes. On specimen nephrolepis his showing would be hard to equal and impossible to improve on. S. E. Slade also made a good showing of ferns and stove plants and captured several prizes. Golden Gate park had a good collection of palms, ferns, crotons, pandanus, etc., artistically arranged.

Of garden flowers Messrs. Crocker and De Sabla had several tables well arranged. H. Hayashi & Co. had the largest and finest cyclamens in the hall. Many new colors, all of the highest quality, were shown. E. De Sabla also had good exhibits of cyclamens. In dahlias, even with the lateness of the season, the blooms were beautiful. Thos. Munro, E. De Sabla and R. Lohrmann all took prizes. The tables devoted to tuberous begonias were much admired and were fully up to former standards. Henry E. Bothin and C. S. Crocker exhibited these and lifted the premiums.

The department devoted to table decorations, original designs, brides' and bridesmaids' bouquets, best arranged baskets of flowers and foliage plants was the center of attraction for many visitors. A large representation of a liberty bell, made by Pelicano, Rossi & Co., received first award, as did also their large basket of foliage plants. The Fairmount Floral Co. received first on an enormous basket of Bonnaffon mums, beautifully arranged. A. O. Stein received several first prizes. He showed some well-finished brides' and bridesmaids' bouquets of orchids and his table decoration received a first. He also was awarded a prize for a most original design of a figure of a woman in an evening costume. Bouquets of valley, orchids, roses and ferns in many combinations were shown by Pelicano, Rossi & Co., A. O. Stein, H. M. Sanborn Co., Fairmount Co. and others. Eppstein & Co. made a creditable showing in this department also.

On miniature gardens Geo. Theuergarten, for his Japanese design, received the first premium. On showings of specimen hardy trees in tubs the exhibits made by Domoto Bros. and the MacRorie-McLaren Co. were extensive and covered the outside promenade. They were both awarded prizes on these. Domoto Bros. also exhibited a model of a Japanese garden.

The showings of vegetables were large and varied. Messrs. Crocker and De Sabla took the premiums. Fred Henckel, of Burlingame, made a good exhibit of gerberas in several colors, which were much admired.

The press work was excellent, the daily papers giving the show many columns of illustrated stuff, and the attendance was large. Angelo J. Rossi was the manager of the show, assisted by H. Plath. The committee of arrangement was: H. Plath, Charles A. Cooke, V. Matraia, D. MacRorie, C. F. Shellgrain, V. Podesta, F. Seulberger, Eric James, W. Kittlewell, Donald McLaren, W. M. Brown, Miss M. Hannon, Henry Maier, Angelo J. Rossi, F. T. Schlotzhauer, William Munroe, Albert O. Stein, Frank D. Pelicano, L. A. German, P. Ferrari, William Hill, H. Goertzhain, Vic Holmes, J. A. Carbone, F. Jaeger, M. H. Sanborn and Thomas F. Taylor. G.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its eighth annual exhibition at Pembroke hall Tuesday and Wednesday, October 29 and 30. The two main floors of the hall were filled with large and fine exhibits of chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, vegetables and outside flowers and fruits. Chas. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., had on exhibition a vase of his new pink rose, Mrs. Geo. Shawyer, a beauty in every way, and was awarded a well deserved certificate of merit. Scott Bros., of Elmsford, N. Y., put up a nice vase of their new red carnation, Wm. Eccles, and were awarded a certificate of merit. A vase of Northport, a new pink carnation, exhibited by J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., received a certificate of merit. The Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., had a table of orchids in variety, which were greatly admired.

The chrysanthemums of course were the chief attraction and the following varieties were best in their respective colors: White, Wm. Turner and Naomah; pink, Lady Hopetoun and L. Rousseau; yellow, Cheltoni and Mary Donnellan; crimson, Woodmason and Pockett's Crimson; any other color, Mary Mason. Woodmason carried off the honor for the largest blooms in the show, being ten inches in diameter.

The principal exhibitors and prize winners were: H. Gaut, gardener to Mrs. H. L. Pratt; G. Barton, gardener to Mrs. H. W. Bucknall; J. Adler, gardener to H. Ladew; F. Petroccia, gardener to A. G. Hodenpyle; A. Mackenzie, gardener to Percy Chubb; W. D. Robertson, gardener to Mrs. B. Stern; J. Robinson, gardener to Colgate Hoyt; J. McCarthy, gardener to W. E. Kimball; H. Boettcher, gardener to W. V. Hester; R. Marshall, gardener to J. R. Delamar; J. MacDonald, gardener to J. H. Ottley; H. Cliff, gardener to W. D. Guthrie; V. Cleres, gardener to Mrs. F. S. Smithers; James Duthie, gardener to E. M. Townsend; W. Vert, gardener to Howard Gould; J. Johnson, gardener to Paul Dana; A. Reidenback, gardener to T. Leeming; J. W. Everatt, gardener to John Pratt, and R. Walker, gardener to H. C. Smith.

The attendance was large on both days and the society is to be congratulated on having had quite the most successful exhibition in its history. J. M.

AMHERST, MASS.

The annual chrysanthemum exhibition at Massachusetts Agricultural College was held on Saturday, October 26, and was the most successful ever given.

The college exhibited specimen blooms of many of the new varieties, which were cut, labeled and staged by members of the senior class.

The members of the junior class gave an exhibition of table decorations, using chrysanthemums for the flowers and autumn foliage, ferns, smilax and asparagus as accessories. There were sixteen tables entered in the competition and these were arranged with more taste and skill than any previously shown. Three prizes were given; a copy of Scott's Manual, valued at $5, for first prize, a cash prize of $3 for second and $2 for third. The first prize was awarded to Miss L. E. Bates, of Kingston; the second to H. W. Levine, of Roxbury, and the third to Miss S. J. Strange, of Marshfield. The first prize table was of Peter Pan chrysanthemums and smilax; the second, a tall vase of four large Rose Pockett chrysanthemums set in a brass jardiniere filled with Peter Pan chrysanthemums and Whitmani fern; the third, a table of Miss Mary Pope chrysanthemums and smilax.

Besides the varieties exhibited by the Agricultural College, A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., sent several vases of chrysanthemums and a vase of Milady roses. C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., sent a large number of single chrysanthemums and a vase of his new rose, Mrs. Shawyer.

The past year has been the most successful in the history of the floricultural work at the college. Of the six men completing the work in June, two are with A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; one is in charge of a commercial range in Kingston, Mass.; one is instructor in floriculture at the Pennsylvania State College; one is with Thomas Galvin, Inc., at the Tremont street store, Boston, and one has returned to college for further work. A graduate of the department two years ago has just accepted an instructorship at Cornell. The present senior class numbers nine and the junior class sixteen. In addition, thirty-eight are taking the plant material course. E. A. W.

YONKERS, N. Y.

The autumn show of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was a fine success. Louis Milliott was manager. The Yonkers Nursery Co. sent many specimen palms for decorative effect, the armory giving ample space for display. The mums were fully up to the quality seen at any of the fall exhibitions.

C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., showed his new rose, Mrs. George Shawyer, and a selection of new mums, big and little. Scott Bros., of Elmsford, N. Y., staged Wm. Eccles carnation. Julius Roehrs Co. had a fine display of orchids and stove and blooming plants in variety. Henry A. Dreer, presented by John S. Hay, staged the new glory fern, Adiantum Farleyense gloriosa, which promises to be a popular acquisition.

Among the principal exhibitors and prize winners among the nearby gardeners and growers were W. H. Waite, W. C. Roberts, Robert Angus, Howard Nichols, P. W. Popp, the Fairview Garden School, John Canning, R. L. Cushman, Wm. Wright, Thos. A. Lee, A. McDonald, Ed Kane, W. J. Seely, H. Wells and John Heeremans. A fine group arranged by Mr. Milliott occupied the center of the armory. J. A. S.

MADISON, N. J.

Eugene Dailledouze, of Flatbush; Wm. Turner, of Oceanic, and Albert Millard, of Riverdale, who judged the show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, October 31 and November 1, agreed that it was a better exhibition than any of its predecessors, and the attendance also was the best yet.

Wm. Turner was the leading mum. The two classes in which interest centered were those for thirty-six flowers in six varieties and for twenty-four flowers in four varieties, short stems. These were won by W. H. Duckham, gardener for Mrs. D. Willis James, Madison, N. J., and A. A. Macdonald, gardener for Jas. B. Duke, Somerville,

N. J., the former winning first and the latter second in each class. Mr. Duckham's six were Wm. Turner, Hon. Mrs. Lopes, Pres. Viger, Pockett's Crimson, Onunda and Mrs. H. Stevens. Mr. Macdonald's most notable vases were Wm. Turner, Pockett's Crimson, W. Mease and Mary Donnellan. For twenty-four vases, twenty-four distinct varieties, Mr. Duckham secured first, Mr. Macdonald second.

For eighteen flowers in six varieties Ernest E. Wild, gardener for C. W. Harkness, Madison, was first. He staged some remarkable flowers in several classes. His exhibit of three flowers each of six varieties contained Pres. Viger, Wm. Turner, Alice Lemon, Mrs. D. Syme and G. Lock. Second prize in this class was won by John Downing, gardener for Dr. D. H. McAlpin, of Morris Plains, N. J. The best of Mr. Downing's flowers were Mary Mason and Wm. Turner. The third prize in this class was won by Peter Duff, gardener for Mrs. J. Crosby Brown, Orange, N. J.

For twelve flowers, twelve varieties, one vase, A. A. Macdonald was first; Jas. Fraser, gardener for O. H. Kahn, Morristown, N. J., second, and John Downing, third.

In the class calling for ten flowers each, white, yellow and pink, honors were divided between A. A. Macdonald and Harold B. Vyse, gardener for the Witney estate, Morristown, N. J. The varieties most strongly represented in this section were Mary Donnellan and Beatrice May. In the class calling for three vases, six flowers each, pink, yellow and white, Mr. Macdonald won first.

The class calling for twelve flowers, twelve distinct varieties, on short stems, brought forth a marvelous display of bloom. First prize was won by Ernest Wild, second by Peter Duff and third by J. Lindabury, gardener for Robert D. Foote, Morristown, N. J.

The Stumpp & Walter prize for six flowers in six distinct varieties was won by Jas. Fraser. Second went to Henry Gaut, gardener for H. L. Pratt, Glen Cove, L. I., and third to H. B. Vyse. In the class calling for six white, Chas. Barbanes, gardener for Dudley Olcott, Morristown, N. J., scored first with fine Mrs. Syme. For six yellow Jas. Fraser was first with Yellow Miller. The same exhibitor won first on six pink with Wm. Duckham. For six crimson J. Lindabury won with Pockett's Crimson. On six bronze Mr. Fraser was first with Glenview.

In the class calling for a vase of flowers with other foliage, arranged for effect, Mr. Fraser won with a beautiful lot of Beatrice May, with asparagus and autumn foliage. The second prize went to Mr. Macdonald, who used small flowers and had a heavier foliage effect.

For pompons, number of vases not to exceed ten, Hamilton Scott, gardener for C. W. McAlpin, Morristown, won first. The single classes brought out a large lot, in which Alex MacKenzie, gardener for Percy Chubb, Glen Cove, L. I., was the principal winner.

The largest flower in the show was a Mrs. H. Stevens, shown by Mr. Wild.

In the commercial classes, Chas. H. Totty secured first in their colors with Mrs. David Syme, Mary Donnellan, Reginald Vallis and Mrs. O. H. Kahn.

The rose exhibits were sufficient to fill a table and the quality was excellent. C. H. Totty's Mrs. Geo. Shawyer was shown on 5-foot stems, towering over the Beauties and everything else exhibited. This won first for twenty-five any undisseminated variety and the special prize of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer for the best vase of roses, any variety except American Beauty. The Beauty classes were won by L. A. Noe, Madison. L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J., was first for twenty-five Killarney, for twenty-five Richmond, for twenty-five White Killarney and for twelve Maryland. He also secured first for twenty-five yellow, with Lady Hillingdon. Christmas Cards and Envelopes for Florists' Use.

TAGS AND ENVELOPES.

A more extensive use of the Christmas tag or card, the dainty lithographed and embossed affair used for marking Christmas gifts, is to be recommended to florists. On a potted plant, a Christmas tag bearing name of sender is attractive. In a box of flowers, enclose a Christmas card. The illustration shows a dainty set for this purpose; envelope with Christmas sentiment in red, and floral card to fit. Both are die stamped and quite distinctive.

When an engraved card is used, enclose it in a Christmas envelope, or use your regular envelope with a Christmas seal in the corner. This is easily done and is inexpensive, but shows good taste and that much appreciated business quality, thoughtfulness as to small details. But order your holiday specialties early. Nothing can be gained by waiting until the last minute.

NEW YORK PUBLICITY WORK.

As secretary of the New York Florists' Club's publicity committee, I have been instructed to send the publishers of The Review a black and white cut of the Thanksgiving show card which our committee is going to distribute to the retail trade for display in their shop windows the week preceding November 28, Thanksgiving day.

This card will present a taking appearance, printed in three colors on a sheet 11x12¼ inches. This show card in turn is mounted on a neutral cardboard 13x14 inches, the board being punched for a cord by means of which it can be suspended. These cards are sent to each recipient in large manila envelopes, in which are also placed fifty box slips, about 4½x6, on which will be printed a few facts concerning the observance of Thanksgiving day and the use of flowers for that occasion. Retailers will be requested to place one of these slips in each package or box of flowers they send out prior to Thanksgiving day, in order to promote sales of flowers on Thanksgiving day itself.

The drawing is by a celebrated artist, Charles Livingston Bull, and represents a spray of deep pink roses as the leading feature.

In the lower left-hand corner is shown a Puritan and his wife going to Thanksgiving service in the little stone church in the distance. The Puritan is armed with his flintlock musket, as was the custom in those days. The ancient and modern customs of celebrating Thanksgiving are thus brought into full contrast.

This will be the second show card distributed by the publicity committee of the New York Florists' Club. The first, a Hallowe'en show card, met with great favor, and it is expected that the Thanksgiving card, on account of its artistic execution, will be in still heavier demand. At least 2,000 of these latter will be distributed in New York city and its immediate vicinity, and it is expected that this distribution will have a marked effect upon the people at large in inducing them to purchase flowers for Thanksgiving.

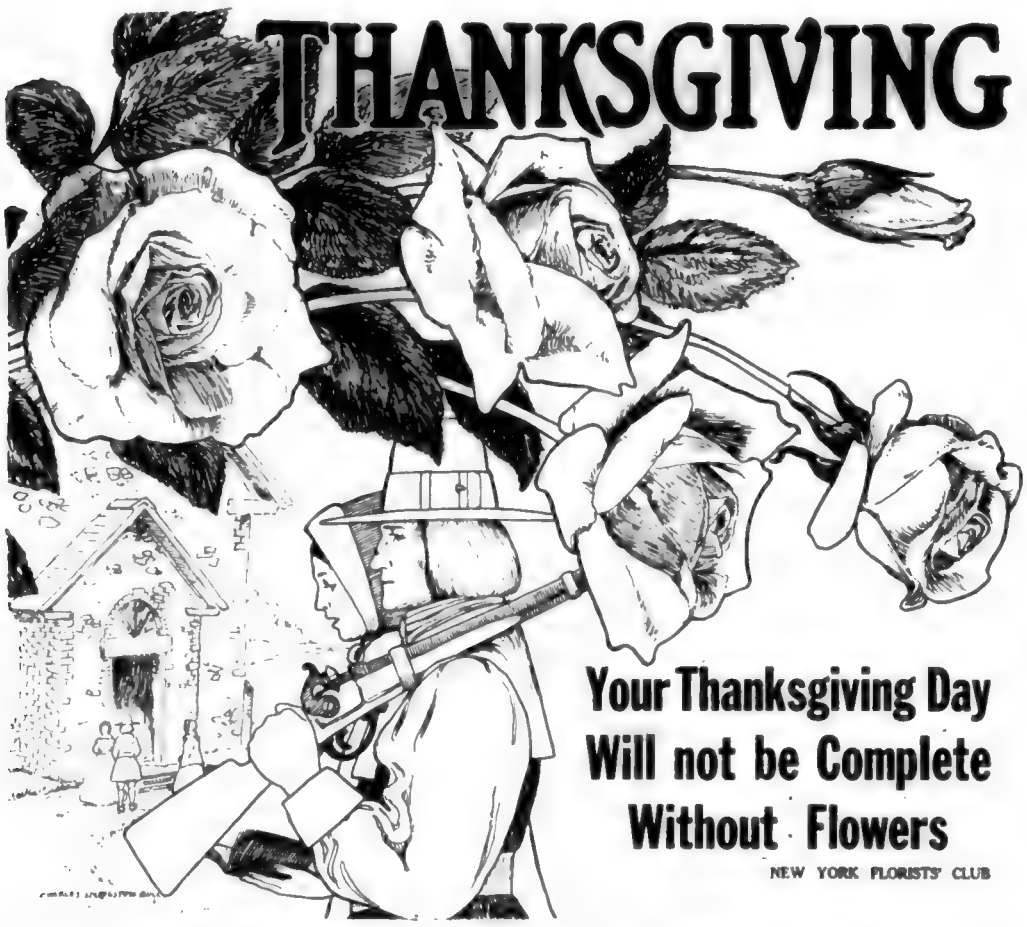
In conclusion I beg to say that the New York Florists' Club will esteem it a favor if you will reproduce the cut sent you in the forthcoming issue and use as much of the above information as you think fit and proper.

John Young, Sec'y.

Raising the Funds.

The publicity committee of the New York Florists' Club, which is handling the work referred to above, consists of I. S. Hendrickson, chairman; John Young, secretary; W. F. Sheridan, treasurer; Charles Schenck, Herman Warendorff, C. C. Trepel, L. W. C. Tuthill, A. T. De La Mare, Leonard Barron, F. R. Pierson, C. H. Totty, C. A. Dards, A. L. Miller, Alex. McConnell, Alfred Bunyard, W. R. Pierson, M. C. Ebel, H. A. Bunyard, W. E. Marshall, J. B. Nugent, Jr. The committee has made the following appeal for funds:

"Do you realize that ten times the amount of flowers and plants ought to be sold in Greater New York?



"Do you also realize that with an added sale amounting to ten times the amount, your profits would be ten times larger?

"You do know that there are many millions of dollars spent right here in New York to advance the sale of every article of merchandise which retails for 5 cents up, while hardly a dollar is spent in furthering the sale of cut flowers and plants.

"Realizing the enormous amount of capital invested in establishments for producing flowers and plants, does it not appeal to you to assist in furthering the project of giving flowers and plants the publicity due this class of merchandise in which you are directly interested?

"During the last years the New York Florists' Club, which has at heart the interest of everybody connected with the florists' trade and allied interests, has debated and argued at its regular meetings the advisability of a publicity campaign. To this end a publicity committee has been appointed, composed of twenty representative members of all the different branches of the trade, who are now taking practical methods of bringing flowers and plants to the attention of the public in some forceful yet refined manner. The first effort will appear in time for the Hallowe'en season, and then in their order all the holidays and eventful days, such as Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's, McKinley's, Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, May day, Memorial day, Arbor day, Mothers' day, and many others.

"If interested, we hope you will enclose your check for whatever amount you wish to contribute."

Show Card to be Distributed by the New York Florists' Club Committee.

OBITUARY.

John Watson.

John Watson died October 30, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. H. Duncan, in Albany, N. Y., of heart failure, his death not being known until his wife arose next morning and called him. Mr. Watson was born in Lincolnshire, England, seventy-seven years ago, and has lived in this country for the last thirty-two years. He first came to New Hampshire and later lived in Pennsylvania and the state of Washington, where he was in the florists' business at Seattle for a number of years before removing to Albany two years ago. Besides a widow, he leaves three children, John Watson, a florist at Tacoma; Richard Watson, of Portsmouth, N. H., and Mrs. Wm. H. Duncan, of Albany.

Charles E. Schoenle.

Charles E. Schoenle, of St. Louis, died at his home, 2619 Eads avenue, Tuesday, October 29, at 8:30 a. m. Death was due to heart disease, superinduced by cirrhosis of the liver.

For many years Mr. Schoenle conducted a flower store at Lafayette and Jefferson avenues and no one had more friends. He was a prominent member of the Florists' Club and served many years as trustee, and there never was a harder worker for the best interests of the club. Mr. Schoenle had been in the florists' business ever since he was a small boy, his first employment being with Luther Armstrong and later with Mrs. Ayres. He was born in St. Louis and was 39 years old. The funeral was held Thursday, October 31, from the residence of Mrs. Schoenle, 3665 Cook avenue, and the Florists' Club attended in a body and sent the usual floral design. The Retail Florists' Association also sent a floral offering and the room was packed with floral designs of every description from members of the trade. The pallbearers were W. C. Smith, Geo. H. Angermueller, C. A. Kuehn, Andrew Meyer, Jr., and N. Moran. The burial took place at Calvary cemetery. He leaves his wife, who was his helpmate in the store, a mother, four brothers and a sister.

J. J. B.

Gottfried Gross.

Gottfried Gross, one of the best known citizens of Quincy, Ill., and a florist there for a third of a century, died at Blessing hospital on Saturday evening, October 26, at the age of 69 years. During the last two years his health had been failing, but it was not until a few weeks ago that his condition became serious. He entered Blessing hospital October 9, and on the following day he submitted to an operation. Complications followed and his strength gradually waned until death came.

He was born September 8, 1843, at Zurich, Switzerland, and when a young man, not yet 21 years of age, he left his native land for this country. He located in New Jersey and was there some time before moving to Fort Wayne, Ind. In that city he married, in 1874, Miss Catherine Cook. His health impaired, he disposed of his business and moved west, locating in Quincy, where the family has since lived. When a youth he had been employed for some time as an assistant to the chief florist in the royal gardens of France and after coming to this country he was employed by a florist in Hoboken. In Fort Wayne he had a small greenhouse, and during the thirty-four years he lived in Quincy he was in the florists' business, though for some years at first he also owned an orchard that produced fine crops of peaches and pears. What was his orchard is now Lawndale. Sixteen years ago he built a large frame house, which is now the Gross home place, at 1886 Maine street.

There were seven children, two sons and five daughters. Six are living—one son, George Gross, of Quincy, and five daughters, Mrs. O. F. Rudd, of Needles, Cal.; Mrs. N. B. Pond, of Clovis, N. M., and Misses Carolyne, Catherine and Ida, all three at home. He is also survived by his wife and by two sisters in Switzerland. The Quincy Turn Verein had not been in existence long when Mr. Gross became affiliated with that organization. He was also a member for many years of Lambert lodge, No. 659, A. F. and A. M., and also of Quincy lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Fort Smith, Ark.—F. P. Stout, of Rogers, is erecting a large greenhouse for lettuce and other vegetables.

(For report of the visit see pages 33 and 76 of The Review for October 31.)

FIRST SNOW COLLAPSE.

October is pretty early to have greenhouses begin to collapse under the weight of snow, but at Minot, N. D., a recently completed house belonging to George E. Valker went down under the snow that fell October 30. The house was 30x100 and is described by local reporters as being of steel frame. The loss includes a quantity of young stock and, naturally, the season's profits.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

With the arrival of pompons and such midseason varieties of chrysanthemums as Virginia Poehlmann, Alice Byron, Appleton, Ivory, Bonnaffon and Amorita, the supply is catching up with demand and threatens to overtake it within the week. Mums of all kinds and conditions are plentiful, with the possible exception of white, which has been a trifle short. Carnations, generally a glut at this date, are scarce. The quality is all that could be desired. Roses are equal to all demands, both as to quality and quantity. Lilies, valley, green goods, etc., are selling fairly well.

Various Notes.

October 29 the following florists from Cleveland and vicinity visited Adrian, Mich.: F. C. Witthuhn, F. R. Williams, H. A. Hart, Adam Graham, Charles Graham, Guy Bate, Charles Russell, H. P. Knoble, R. F. Ensley, T. J. Kirchner, Max Naumann, Charles Schmitt, J. Blechschmidt, Frank A. Friedley, C. M. Wagner, A. M. Coe, A. A. Hart, Frank Bauers, A. Lingruen, W. Warnke, G. H. Bruehler, H. G. King, Robert Weeks, A. Barber, F. Gompf, C. A. Wilson, A. B. Wilson, J. W. Wilson, J. C. Fisher, Lars Anderson, Cleveland; F. H. Adgate, Warren, O.; L. L. Lamborn, Alliance, O.; John Merkel, Mentor, O.; W. E. Cook, of Stumpp & Walter Co., New York. The party went in a special car and at Toledo was joined by fifteen of that city's growers, with a considerable sprinkling of ladies. Arriving at Adrian at 11 a. m., we were met by Elmer D. Smith, who escorted us to his greenhouse plant, where thirty-five Detroit florists were inspecting the mums. After an hour's trip through the houses, which, judging from the number of notebooks in evidence, was instructive to most of the visitors, the entire party, to the number of ninety-four, which included E. G. Hill, of Richmond; R. Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati, and Christ Winterich and family, of Defiance, was escorted to the packing shed, where lunch was served. Adam Graham, on behalf of the visitors, thanked Mr. Smith for his hospitality. E. G. Hill was then called on and made a brief but characteristic talk, after which the host also spoke briefly.

A Man We All Know.

The opening of the West Side Market House was the occasion for using large quantities of stock last week.

The J. M. Gasser Co. reports several large decorations for the week. This concern secured the decorating at the Hotel Statler and, since the opening a week ago, has had the work for several elaborate banquets.

The Ohio Horticultural Society has just announced a number of special prizes for the exhibition to be held in Gray's armory, November 14 to 16. In addition to a lot of fine specials by local business houses, the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; John Evans, Richmond, Ind.; S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia; John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, and Harry Balsley, Detroit, offer cash or trophies. Entries are coming in rapidly and competition promises to be keen in several important classes. The table decorations promise a close fight, as there will probably be seven entries in this class.

Our first real frost was November 2. Outside stock is now pretty well killed off.

MEN WE ALL KNOW.

One of the daily papers at Albany, N. Y., is running a series of cartoons on the leading citizens, under the heading "Men We All Know." Reproduced herewith is the drawing of which Wm. G. Gloeckner was the subject. Mr. Gloeckner is a member of the S. A. F., the Albany Florists' Club and several other trade organizations, but in Albany he is known as the president of the Boosters' Club, a thirty-second degree Mason, an Elk and an active worker in all the affairs that go to achieve civic progress.

Antwerp, O.—J. B. Caruthers is installing a new boiler, which will heat his residence as well as his greenhouse.

Princeton, Ill.—Ten members of the Princeton Game and Fish Club broke the state record for number of ducks killed from one blind during a single day's shoot by killing 146 mallard ducks at Goose Pond November 4. Those who enjoyed the sport were W. E. Trimble, of the W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co., C. L. Trimble, Judge Joe A. Davis, Howard Bailey, Joe Duplain, Joe Milner, Bert Gibbs, Charles Althoff, John Dalstrom and guest.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

WITH this issue The Review becomes 15 years old. It is the age at which well grown, healthy youngsters really begin their best development.

WE should not speak of flowers as a luxury. Times change. At one stage of our country's development a gun was a necessity and a sewing machine a luxury. Now the sewing machine is a necessity and the gun a luxury. To a great many people flowers are a necessity.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY, at which is the trial ground of the American Sweet Pea Society, has just issued Bulletin No. 319, being Part II, Sweet Pea Studies, by Alvin C. Beal. This is devoted to winter-flowering varieties, with varietal descriptions, notes on origin, culture and tests at Cornell.

WELL, our quadrennial national spasm is over again. This time it caused less than the usual interruption to business, but, no matter how the result coincided with our individual preferences, we can all be glad it's over and settle down to work. The last two weeks have been full of politics. Now let's get busy.

RESULTS COUNT.

The one factor which has enabled The Review to carry so great a list of advertisers is that the results from the first advertisement almost invariably brought the advertiser back with another offer when he had stock to sell. This is how:

Last year we got fine returns from The Review. It is THE paper. Results speak for themselves.—Franklin Plant Farm, Frank Brunton, Mgr., Norfolk, Va., October 30, 1912.

AZALEAS are cleaning up quickly. The stock generally is good this year and the forcers have not been afraid to take hold of the small and medium sizes in quantity.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

GET a reputation for expecting your pay promptly and your customers will get the habit of coming up to your expectations. On the other hand, get the reputation of being easy with your debtors and they will pay only as suits their convenience.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Rochester, N. Y.—The West Side Floral Co., in the U. S. District Court, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, scheduling liabilities of $1,005.27 and assets of $541.23.

READERS' VIEW OF THE ADS.

The other day a Chicago florist walked into the office of The Review and laid a dollar on the cashier's desk with the remark, "I get so many papers I can't find time to read them, so I let my Review run out, but I find I can't get along without it. I need it if only so I can see the ads—you have so many that don't appear anywhere else." And here is one by mail:

I hardly know what I would do without The Review. The advertisements have saved me lots of dollars, to say nothing of the valuable information each issue contains.—V. V. Phillips, Brigham City, Utah, October 29, 1912.

In the eyes of the average reader the advertising is an important part of a trade paper.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The opening of the month of November has found the market in a much better condition than was noted at the beginning of last month, so far as the supply of stock is concerned, and prices on most lines have again become normal. While there is no oversupply, with the possible exception of the poorer grades of mums, which are being shipped to this selling point in large quantities, the wholesalers are finding it possible to fill all orders without trouble. Especially in roses, there is no lack of excellent stock, with the exception of Beauties. Carnations continue to shorten up and hardly enough of these can be secured to take care of the combined local and out-of-town demand for stock needed in funeral work.

As far as chrysanthemums are concerned, they have taken possession of the local market and will predominate for some time to come. Almost every variety in bloom at this season is to be found on the market and Major Bonnaffon made its appearance this week. Some excellent shipments are to be seen and the better grades move off quickly. Thus far fewer high quality mums than usual are offered and there also is a smaller percentage of yellow than is usually the case at the start of November. Another week, however, is expected to find the market well stocked with all grades of chrysanthemums. There already is an oversupply of the

ROSES

A FINE FULL CROP IS ON

There are three strong reasons why the thinking buyers are ordering their Roses of us this season: In the first place, it is well known that better Roses cannot be grown; in the second place, we have a full line—the largest in the market; and, thirdly, we have this year fully doubled our supply—from new glass—so can take good care of a large number of new customers.

KILLARNEY WHITE KILLARNEY RICHMOND
RADIANCE BULGARIE (Taft) SUNBURST
MRS. AARON WARD MY MARYLAND

MUMS! MUMS!!

Our Mums are grown by specialists—and that makes a very important difference. The stock is of quite a different character from that grown simply as a catch crop—a space filler. It means uniform stock in quantity—the ability to supply 500 all of the same grade and variety instead of mixed. The good late varieties are now beginning to come in in quantity. All colors.

BEAUTIES

If you order Beauties direct of us, you are sure of your supply—naturally we take care of all our regular Retailer customers before we fill the wholesale orders. It is well known that our supply of Beauties is the largest and by far the steadiest in the west, and probably in the entire United States, while the quality is all that the most critical buyer could ask. Order direct and avoid all possibility of disappointment.

CARNATIONS

Carnations show marked improvement in quality. The flowers have been clean and good; now they are of increased size and the stems have lengthened out. At the same time the supply has increased. You will like our Carnations.

ORCHIDS

We offer the finest quality of Cattleyas at prices that make it possible for every retail store to do a nice business with them, and at a good profit. The best trade everywhere calls for Orchids. Don't let the flower buyers go elsewhere because you have no Orchids. We can keep you supplied. A fine large crop is on.

VIOLETS

We now have large daily supplies of Violets that are excellent for so early in the season. Let your orders come. Don't you want a daily shipment?

lower grades. Pompons are popular, although the prices of other years are hard to get, as the supply is much larger than heretofore.

The change in the supply of Beauties came abruptly and the stiffening prices took some of the trade unawares. Killarney and White Killarney are arriving on the market in quantity, and also of excellent quality, the buds being good sized and of improved color, while the stems and foliage of the majority of the shipments are all that could be asked. The same is practically true of all the other roses, including Richmond, Maryland, Mrs. Taft, Aaron Ward, Sunburst, Radiance, and Lady Hillingdon, although they are in small supply as compared with the Killarneys. Mrs. Taft, as Rivoire-Bulgarie generally is known, is selling exceptionally well and is short of the demand.

Violets have hardly met with the demand that was in force a week or ten days ago. Easter lilies are still in light supply and continue to bring good returns, although the eastern stock is beginning to come in again. Valley is abundant. Cattleyas are possibly not quite so plentiful as they were, although there is an abundance as compared with the demand. Quite a few eastern cattleyas continue to come in, mostly on shipments to advertising retailers. There is nothing new in the green goods situation.

Business in October.

October did not show up as well as it might have done in the matter of total sales in this market. While a few houses had excellent increases, others had none at all, or even a little decrease. The first of the month was, relatively, better than the latter part, in spite of the fact that there was little stock. A good many say their sales ran ahead of a year ago during the first half of the month and fell back during the second half, a peculiar circumstance when the condition of the supply is considered. A part of the slackening demand at the end of the month is attributed to the warming up of politics, but, as one wholesaler remarked, "Explanations as to how it happened don't get the money."

October Weather.

Only three times in the history of the weather bureau has October provided as much sun as this year. The average duration of daily sun was seven hours and fifty-four minutes, which is seventy-one per cent of the possible, the normal for the month being sixty-four per cent. There were ten days that gave the full 100 per cent of possible sun. The temperature was three degrees above normal, the precipitation an inch above normal, the excess all falling in one day, and the wind movement was moderate. Ideal growing weather.

Various Notes.

Now that the market has loosened up, the retailers are using big spaces in the daily papers. C. A. Samuelson is using the south side street cars this season instead of the newspapers.

The Chicago Florists' Club will hold its meeting for the nomination of officers at the Union restaurant at 8 p. m. tonight, November 7. A special attraction will be a paper on the retail side of the business by Irwin C. Bertermann, of Indianapolis, president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery. C. F. McCor-

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The good later varieties are now coming in. We have them in all colors, big fancy flowers if you want them, but the greater part of the stock we can sell at from $1 to $2.50 per dozen—and that's the kind of Mum you can sell in quantity. White, pink and yellow in all sizes.

Plenty of bunched sprays of fine Pompons and Singles, pink, yellow and white.

FANCY ROSES.

Our present crops of roses are not only A No. 1 in quality but are so large we can fill every order. Specially strong on the Killarneys and Richmond, but also can supply all the other varieties. We believe we are conservative when we say there are no finer roses to be had anywhere.

ORCHIDS,

Our cattleyas are the home-grown kind. Excellent value at $5.00 and $6.00 per dozen. Once you use these you will be content with no other kind. Fancy sprays of oncidiums, yellow, $4.00 per 100 flowers.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES.

Buyers who appreciate good Beauties like the stock we now are shipping. It is fine in every respect—and the cut is large. Can supply all lengths.

VIOLETS.

Anybody can tell you their stock is the best to be had. But the stock does not always back up the claims made for it. Ours will.

LILIES.

You can get all the Easter Lilies you want, and at fair prices, if you send your orders to us. We have much the largest supply in the west.

VALLEY.

You need never be without valley if you look to us for your supply.

SUPPLY SPECIALTIES

RUSCUS

The experienced buyer of Ruscus knows that there are fully as many qualities of Ruscus as there are houses dyeing it. Good Ruscus, bright and even in color, is about the best seller the trade has got hold of in many a day. But the dull, dirty-colored, moldy, spotted Ruscus—well, about all you can do with that kind is to ship it back to the house you got it from, and order some really good Ruscus from Randall.

Randall's Ruscus is prepared according to the celebrated Marechal method. This means supreme quality. A post card will bring you samples and prices. Send one today. You really should not buy except by sample—the price means nothing until you see the quality. Bright Christmas red, violet, green, lavender, cerise, purple, gold, silver, etc.—any color you want promptly made up to order if not in stock.

BASKETS.

We are offering some special bargains in Baskets in assortments. A great variety of sizes and styles. Put up in assortments at $5.00, $10.00, $15.00 and $25.00. Send for one of them—just give us a line on what you intend to use them for and we will see to it that you get your money's worth.

A. L. RANDALL CO., 66 EAST RANDOLPH ST., CHICAGO

mick, who has gone on the road for the A. L. Randall Co., has placed his resignation as secretary in the hands of the officers. The club's ladies' night will be November 14 with banquet and dance at the Hotel Sherman. Chairman French promises quite the finest entertainment the club has yet given. Members who have paid their dues will receive tickets. Extra tickets are to be had at $2 each person.

The Chicago Carnation Co. will exhibit carnations at two shows next week, at St. Paul on Monday and at Cleveland on Friday.

Oscar Wiegand has returned from San Diego, Cal. He made a real estate investment while there.

Carl Thomas returned November 4 from West Springfield, Pa., where he has spent the summer on his farm. He was accompanied by Mrs. Thomas and they have taken up housekeeping on the south side. The Randall forces are now complete for the winter season, A. L. Randall and family having returned some weeks ago from their summer home on a Michigan fruit farm. Mrs. Randall has been quite ill, but is now convalescing.

John Enders resumed his place with the Poehlmann Bros. Co., November 4, after an absence of four weeks, a fortnight of which was spent in a hospital.

The Cook County Florists' Association announces a dance December 4 at the Bush Temple, on North Clark street. The details are in the hands of A. Zech, who has arranged many such pleasant affairs.

George Bayer, of Toledo, has begun his annual shipments of chrysanthemums to Kennicott Bros. Co.

Wietor Bros. this year have a set of thirty-five varieties of new pompon and single chrysanthemums. N. J. Wietor says they sell well, but at nowhere near the prices once obtainable for much less attractive varieties.

The 4-year-old son of Paul Kubis, foreman of the wire department of Winterson's Seed Store, died November 2.

Lewis H. Winterson was so ardent a Bull Mooser that when Mr. Roosevelt's wound was found to be not serious he wrote the leader a letter of congratulation. The acknowledgment now is one of Mr. Winterson's most prized possessions.

H. Bauske is this year giving a trial to a bench of Mrs. Jardine. He has cut some fine blooms, but thinks it doubtful if he will get enough of them to make the variety pay by comparison with the other sorts grown, which are the Killarneys and Richmond.

Schultz Bros., of Park Ridge, are planning a rather extensive addition to their plant next season. In case the season continues as well as it has begun for them, they will double their glass area. They now have 27,000 square feet, growing carnations and mums, which are sold by the A. L. Randall Co.,

Erne & Klingel have found it necessary to utilize the remaining overhead space in their store and the west side of the quarters has been double-decked to care for shipping boxes and supplies. Mr. Erne says the shipping trade is increasing every day.

Gov. Woodrow Wilson, William Howard Taft and Theodore Roosevelt have made their headquarters at the establishment of A. L. Vaughan & Co. They come from the Rockford mum growing plant of H. W. Buckbee. The Gov. Wilson is a fine looking yellow, but nevertheless "Teddy" quite "de-lighted" a majority—especially the Bull Moosers.

William Homburg, of J. A. Budlong's shipping department, reports business rather quiet by contrast with the big All Saints' day rush, but expects it to pick up again now that election is over and Thanksgiving approaching.

Miss Ida Evert, who is selling the chrysanthemums of her brothers, John and Nick Evert, at the newly opened store at 32 East Randolph street, reports good business thus far. The season's cut will be around 150,000.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of the E. C. Amling Co., says he does not recall a time when there was a better shipping demand at the end of October, even if this was presidential year.

C. L. Washburn says that the retailers are in no hurry to take up the single chrysanthemum, but that, once tried, they almost invariably come back for more.

but is still forced to have the injured member dressed daily. John Sinner has had both the greenhouses and store on his hands since July 4.

Henry Wittbold has a Federal truck that is of great value in hauling plants and decorative materials. It has made two trips from Evanston to the South Shore Country Club in one day, hauling heavy loads.

At a meeting last week, participated in by representatives of most of the leading wholesale houses, the National Wholesale Florists' Association was organized. There are no officers. Mr. Webb, of the Wilber Mercantile Agency, was elected manager. The purpose is to operate a credit and collection bureau, for the equal benefit of all, such as are in successful operation in other trades and among the wholesale florists in New York. Each member pays $150 per year dues and posts $100, to be forfeited in case the rules are violated. Eighteen houses joined at once. A provision is made for admitting some of the smaller wholesalers at a proportionate fee. The majority feel that the association will correct the worst evil in the trade today, that of lax credits.

One of the week's visitors was W. W. Dederick, of Warsaw, Ind., who was buying material for an addition to his establishment.

Bloomington, Ill.—The I. D. Lain greenhouses have been completely overhauled during the summer and are now in first-class condition.

Creston, Ia.—The greenhouse of the Creston Greenhouse & Floral Co., 306 South Birch street, was open to the public on a recent Sunday and there were more than 1,000 visitors. Carl Gehrecke is the owner and, though he has been here only a few months, already finds he needs another house.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The chrysanthemum dominates the market. All values circle around this glorious autumn flower, now at its best, and its beauty and power accentuated by the numberless flower shows here and all around us. Prices are steady and likely to remain so. The novelties, if they reach the commercial market, will sometimes command 50 cents, but the cream of the older kinds do not often go above 25 cents. Splendid stock could be had last week as low as $8 to $10 per hundred, while the great bulk of the arrivals sold at from $5 down to $2 per hundred and still there was an overflow. It is believed there will be no scarcity of blooms up to Thanksgiving.

The market is surfeited with roses; old and new varieties alike are in unlimited supply. The American Beauty is now at its best, but 25 cents seems to be its top, and this only for the choicest. The supply is increasing daily. All the standard varieties hold last week's quotations.

Carnations are now abundant. Prices do not yet advance, waiting evidently for the departure of the mums. There is no change in lily or valley quotations, the tendency of the former being downward. Violets are excellent in color and quality, but no improvement in demand is noted. The department stores are still giving them away. Gardenias are improving. Orchids are coming in from many growers, especially the cattleyas, and prices are low when the perfection of the stock is considered.

Various Notes.

Next Monday, November 11, is chrysanthemum and ladies' night at the New York Florists' Club. F. H. Traendly will look after the ladies and Mr. Chenck will provide entertainment.

The annual flower shows to date have been unusually successful everywhere near New York.

The American Institute is holding its annual mum show, at 19 West Forty-fourth street, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, on the same dates as the show of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society.

Hallowe'en was well advertised through the publicity committee of the Florists' Club. Every retail and wholesale florists' store decorated its windows with the attractive posters. All things considered, the innovation was encouraging and much greater results are anticipated for Thanksgiving. The poster will be more elaborate and the leading daily papers will be used to awaken interest.

The MacNiff Auction Co. held a special sale November 6. The company has imported large quantities of boxwood, evergreens, roses, blue spruce and rhododendrons. Greater space has been found necessary and Mr. MacNiff has secured the entire store, with five floors, at 58 Vesey street, only two doors distant from his headquarters. The season to date has been unusually successful.

At the funeral of John T. Meehan last week there were displayed in the church over 200 floral tributes, many of unusual cost and beauty.

The Bedford Hills Flower Co. has completed the tall chimney and the artesian wells. Mr. Moore, of Chatham, took the trip inside the chimney to its top to have a good view of his company's property.

The Beechwood Nurseries, of Bound Brook, have opened their winter depot at 113 west Twenty-eighth street, over the big store of Wm. Kessler. Gardenias are the principal specialty handled.

New York flower show and shared with the judges and others the hospitality of Messrs. Newbold and Pierson at a banquet at the Manhattan. Mr. Vincent was accompanied by his granddaughter and was on his way to New Orleans.

Manager Glass, of the H. M. Robinson Co., says the new rose, Mme. Charles Russell, is all sold before arrival. It is proving a favorite.

The Kervan Co., with its refrigeration facilities, will undertake to store wild smilax so as to make it available every day in the year.

The trade rejoices in the assured recovery of Mrs. C. H. Totty, after a severe illness at her home at Madison, N. J. The New York Florists' Club's committee visited the greenhouses of Mr. Totty last week to inspect his new rose, Mrs. Shawyer.

Several of the employees of the Greek wholesale houses on Twenty-eighth street left November 2 for their native land.

Many from New York have been attending the near-by flower shows, Madison attracting a specially large number.

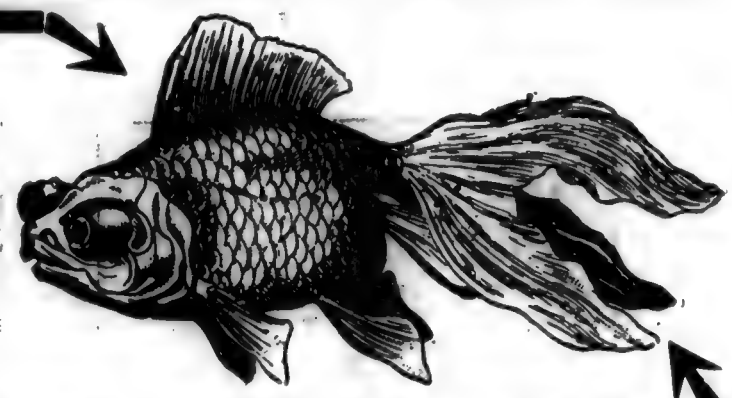
A new corporation has been licensed by the secretary of state under the title Butler, Florist, Inc. The capital stock is $15,000. The incorporators are V. Clement Jenkins, 200 Fifth avenue, and Anthony Gross and Percy M. Brown, 154 Nassau street.



BOSTON.

The Market.

Conditions are somewhat improved compared with a week ago. Sharp killing frosts have at last claimed the balance of the outdoor flowers and, while the output of flowers continues heavy, more in fact than the market can assimilate, prices show a little improvement. The present week marks the flood tide of the mums and their numbers will now steadily decline. The unusually hot October brought all varieties on much earlier than usual and, with the exception of Maud Dean, Nonin and one or two late sorts, all now are in evidence. Colder weather is improving the quality of roses, also reducing their numbers, but they are still overabundant. Russell is, of course, head and shoulders over all others as a favorite. Cardinal is taking well, and one or two growers find Killarney Queen a good seller. Sunburst, Hillingdon and Ward sell well as yellows. Killarneys in variety are unusually fine for so early in the season.

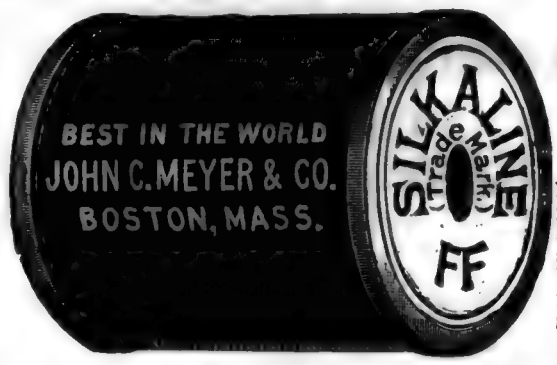
Carnations are in big supply, but prices show a little advance. They will not come into their own, however, for a few weeks yet. Violets, both single and double, are abundant and 50 cents per hundred is top-notch price. Cosmos from outdoors is over, but some good indoor stock is arriving. Valley is abundant and good, as are lilies. A few callas only have appeared. Plenty of cattleyas, cypripediums, oncidiums and Dendrobium Phalænopsis are coming in, with only a fair demand. Green stock of all kinds is selling better.

November 2 saw a good market. The Harvard-Princeton football game created a lively demand for a few specialties.



Various Notes.

There is a good entry list for the annual chrysanthemum show, opening November 7. The season is an early one and many blooms could not be held for it. Neither big specimen blooms nor plants are favored here as they were a dozen years ago, but while chrysanthemum interest has declined, other seasonable flowers have advanced in favor.

October proved a warm month; only two corresponding months since 1870 have been so warm. The rainfall was only a little over an inch and we now have an accumulated deficiency for the year of 9.41 inches. The maximum temperature was 86 degrees and the minimum 36 degrees, the mean being 56.5 degrees.

The carnation houses of Littlefield & Wyman look remarkably well at present. White Wonder, Pink Delight, White Enchantress and Beacon are particularly fine. They also have some excellent seedlings.

Mme. Charles Russell rose at the Waban Conservatories now attracts many visitors from a distance, all of whom are carried away with its color, vigor and free flowering qualities. We venture the prediction that the demand for this grand novelty will break all records for an American raised rose, not excepting White Killarney, which emanated from the same establishment.

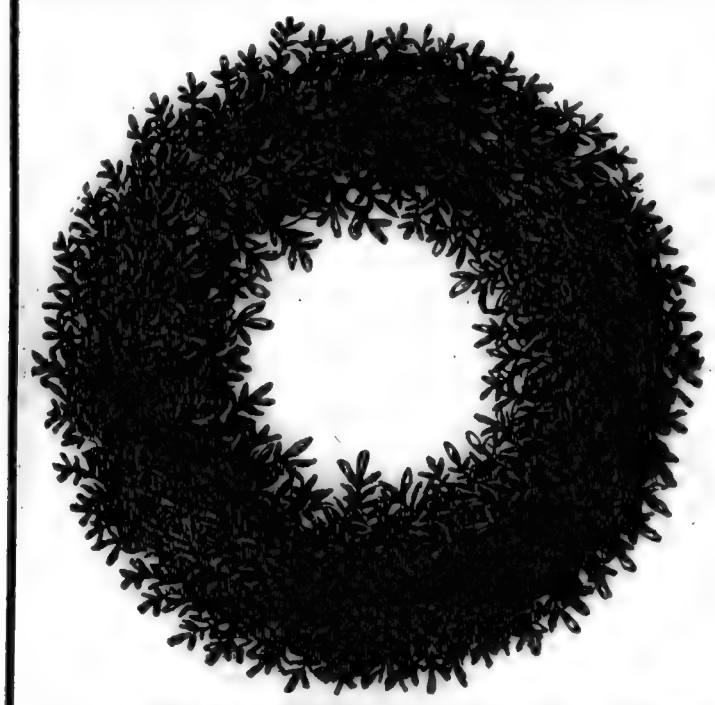
Peirce Bros., of Waverley, are now cutting a fine crop from two houses of marguerites. In addition to chrysanthemums and carnations, they are also having a fine cut of roses.

Plans are now perfected for the silver jubilee banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Horticultural hall November 11, and the attendance will be the largest the club has ever had at any similar function.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. were well pleased with their October business and with the advent of cooler weather anticipate a steady improvement of business. Among other roses, they handle a good many of the new Mme. Charles Russell.

The Halifax Garden Co., through the Flower Growers' Sales Co., is disposing of a heavy cut of high grade carnations and chrysanthemums. They are having their annual exhibition at the greenhouses this week and have many visitors.



W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, and H. F. Calder, of Norwood, are two successful growers of Campbell violets for the local market. Single violet growers are numerous, but only a limited number make a success of doubles.

The J. F. Flood estate, of Montvale, is one of the leading growers of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri for the local market, the stock being sold at the Boston Coöperative Market.

November 4 gave us a minimum temperature of 14 degrees, the lowest to date, which effectually killed off the lingering remnants of outdoor flowers.

W. N. Craig.

Catlin, Ill.—The greenhouse of which Mrs. Florence Terpening is proprietor was completed October 26 and is now ready for business.

The Market.

Business last week was good, with brisk funeral and decorating work, which continues. The supply of cut flowers is excellent in quality, with plenty on hand, although no stock has gone begging for the want of a buyer. Chrysanthemums are exceptionally good, bringing a fair price. Carnations have also increased in supply, but there is not an overabundance. They are not bringing as good a price as they should. Roses are improving in size and color. At present roses are in rather heavy demand.

Various Notes.

Miss Elizabeth Carlson has opened a store at 702 Walnut street and says business is as good as could be expected.

Nelson Jarrett is spending a few days hunting on Grand river.

Hiedermann & Son are building a conservatory 14x60, which they are trying to finish before cold weather sets in.

Mrs. Mosely says that business is improving across the state line.

Henry Kusik & Co. report business fine.

S. Kice, formerly employed by the Rosery, is now at the store of the G. M. Kellogg Cut Flower & Plant Co.

A. T. Barbee reports business good, his carnations and mums being first-class.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports that its advertisement directed to married men was a big success.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co has been busy with out-of-town work this week.

M. Tobler went hunting last week, up to Bean Lake. W. J. B.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The events of the week ending November 6 are the frost and the election. The frost on the night of November 2 destroyed outdoor flowers. Lest there should be any that escaped, it was repeated with greater severity on the following night. It is a question whether frost really made any particular difference in the market. Outdoor flowers after the middle of October cannot compete with indoor stock. They have helped the market wonderfully for two months, and their mission is ended. What remains of them does not signify. These progressive opinions are not shared by the conservatives, who believe that frost should come on schedule time, October 10, and that the market would greatly benefit thereby.

The election of November 5, when the people of the nation went to the polls in an effort to decide the most extraordinary political contest of our time, is of interest because of its failure to affect business in the smallest degree. It is a floricultural tradition that the autumn of a presidential year is bad for business; so bad, in fact, that it was always spoken of with bitterness by every florist. This year the remarkable struggle and the vast expenditure of money have had no effect whatever. The market has been just as good as it could be under the heavy load of stock that must always be carried before winter arrives.

Chrysanthemums are at their height. The midseason varieties are fine and sell at moderate prices. Yellow is in oversupply. Bonnaffon, Halliday, Kelley and some Eaton, with Roman Gold for variety, make a grand show, sometimes hard to move. Charles Razer leads in whites, with Ivory, Byron and others following. Pink is quite scarce. Dr. Enguehard, Maud Dean, Balfour and Pink Ivory are the principal sorts. It is a curious fact that the street men will often pay more for Bonnaffon, their favorite corsage variety, than the stores will pay. Pompons, both indoor and out, are used in quantities, but they seem to require pushing.

BERGER BROS.

Come and go daily in great numbers. An especially fine crop now on. All the best varieties that are worth offering to buyers that know. We have them in quantity and all colors. The prices are right—so order your Mums from us—also anything else you need—then some more mums.

The violet reports conflict. There are more violets used, only they bloom so freely they cannot go fast enough. The cooler weather has helped carnations in quality and in favor. There is no marked change in the rest of the flower and green list, except to chronicle the arrival of Cypripedium insigne and of sweet peas, pink, white and lavender.

Wyncote.

Joseph Heacock, state senator from Montgomery county, is one of the busiest men in Pennsylvania. A front position in the ranks of floriculture, wide business interests, an important position in the gift of his neighbors at a time when the public conscience was quickened, all bear silent testimony to the good use made of time and of abilities. No one who calls on Mr. Heacock feels for a moment that he is in a hurry; the cordial greeting, the careful attention given to what is said, denote the gentleman quite as much as the man of affairs. Mr. Heacock has every detail of his large business at command; an important point—nay, an essential to continued success.

Everyone who is well informed knows that all the roses of the Joseph Heacock Co. have been transferred from Wyncote to Roelofs. Their place was immediately filled by palms, ferns and orchids. The growth of the palm department has been remarkable. Homegrown kentias, and to a less extent arecas and cocos, fill house after house of the large range. The kentias many times outnumber those of a few years ago in every size, while a new size, larger and finer than anything yet offered, is being grown. All the kentias over six inches are now in tubs; a neat, indestructible arrangement, much prized by the decorators. Cibotium Schiedei is also increasing in numbers. Boston and Scottii are produced in quantity, many of them being hung from the roofs. The houses in the palm and fern department show that the order to close up the ranks, after the busy October, finds the sizes still unbroken.

Six or seven years ago an orchid department was started in an experimental way. Today there are over 12,000 orchids, that produce flowers every day in the year. The plants are beautifully arranged, many staged to secure the best results from light and air. They embrace all the commercial varieties of cattleyas and a house of Cypripedium insigne.

Three boilers, 100 horse-power each, have been installed this summer, replacing the old battery of less power. An addition to the packing shed has been built.

Various Notes.

There was no special business scheduled for the Florists' Club meeting held election night, November 5.

Recent visitors included W. J. Palmer, Buffalo; W. Smith, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., Cleveland; James Hill, who is opening a new store in Jacksonville, Fla.; Walter R. Thomas, Atlantic City; Philip Carbone, Boston; Carlman Ribsam, Trenton, N. J., and William Engler, West Philadelphia, Pa.

Hallowe'en did not make any marked impression on the flower market.

Miss Maude Chamberlin, of Buffalo; Mrs. Etta Wilmot, of Pittsburgh, and Miss Sadler, of this city, escorted by Edward G. Bowers, were guests on board the Wisconsin at the League Island navy yard this week.

The oxidized German silver fern vases with porcelain dishes are proving an excellent seller, according to H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

The Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club has invited J. Otto Thilow to speak at its silver anniversary banquet November 11. Mr. Thilow's subject will be "The Florists' Clubs of This Country; what they have done, what they are doing, and what they may do."

Walter M. Yates is devoting his attention largely to ferns.

There is a shortage of good lily of the valley pips.

Berger Bros. report the midseason chrysanthemums and the single violets as exceptionally fine this year.

Snowballs, just the size you would make for pelting, glistening white, are the latest novelty of M. Rice & Co. They are beautiful for decoration.

Maud Dean and Bonnaffon are reported by George Auegle, manager of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., as of high grade.

Louis Berger has shipped all the bulb orders for city parks. He reports business in healthy condition.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business has been quiet, but this is a condition which prevails at this time during election years. There is plenty of stock of all kinds, more than can reasonably be used, with the possible exception of carnations. Toward the close of last week these were quite scarce, especially reds. There has been a decided drop in temperature, which has killed off practically all outdoor stock and leaves the market open for the indoor flowers.

Violets, both single and double, are in much better shape, but there is as yet little demand for them, even at 25 and 50 cents per hundred. Chrysanthemums are, of course, all the rage at present, and these are bringing from $4 to $20 per hundred, the average prices being from $10 to $12. Roses of all colors are running from $4 to $6 per hundred; American Beauty roses, of which there are enough to supply all demands, run from $1.50 to $4 per dozen. Irish Fire Flame, a beautiful single introduced in this city about two weeks ago, is taking well. Lady Hillingdon also is meeting with a fairly good sale, and the Richmonds of local growth have improved immensely. Carnations are bringing from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. There are plenty of orchids in the market, and, while the price per dozen is being held at $6, this figure is shaded when a large sale is impending. Gardenias are being offered at from $1.50 to $3 per dozen.

100 candle-power Mazda electric lamps. In the ceiling are two skylights. The walls are buff and at the rear is a large double doorway leading out into a driveway to which wagons may go. On either side of this door are windows, and all are grated with iron bars to prevent entrance after business hours. At the rear of the store, on a mezzanine floor, is the private office and the bookkeeping department, which later on will be fitted with numerous office appliances, including a cash carrier system. The ice-box measures 10x20 and is capable of housing a large quantity of stock. There will be over forty feet of cases in which to show ribbons and other supplies of a like nature. A new feature is the use of a cool room for the storage of carnations and other flowers which do not require the use of ice. The room is in the cellar, and has two shafts, one having an opening at the bottom and the other at the top of the room. The former brings in the outside cold air, while the other takes off the warm air, which rises towards the ceiling and passes through the vent. Adjoining this is another ice room, wherein will be kept greens, etc. At the far end of this basement is the heating plant, and the balance of the space will be utilized for the storage of boxes, paper and other stock.

S. S. Pennock, C. E. Meehan and E. J. Fancourt were in the city last week looking over the property and declared themselves to be well pleased with the developments. William E. McKissick, manager of the branch, is busily engaged in getting the store in shape for the formal opening, which will take place November 21. No special invitations will be sent out, but everyone who comes will be welcome.

Among the visitors in town last week were August Poehlmann, of Poehlmann Bros. Samuel Mastin, formerly with Z. D. Blackistone, has entered the employ of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

Condition of Trade.

Had it not been for All Saints' day, last week would have been exceedingly poor. The week started well. On Monday almost every florist in the city was busy getting out orders for the funeral of one of our most prominent citizens. From then on business was extremely quiet, while stock commenced to pile up faster than it could be disposed of. Orders for All Saints' day were numerous and Saturday proved to be a busy day for us all, although most of them report that the volume of business done this year for All Saints' day did not come up to that of a year ago. Chrysanthemums, which only a week ago were hard to obtain, are abundant now. The extremely large varieties are still quite scarce, but there are plenty of the pompons and medium-sized ones.

The weather of last week was against carnations; thus they were a little backward in opening and were shorter in supply than they have been. There were enough to fill last week's requirements. Roses are still plentiful, with enough to go around and some left over. Red roses and Beauties are especially fine. Violets are of good quality and sell remarkably well, as the demand for corsage bouquets is increasing steadily.

October, generally speaking, was quite gratifying along all lines.

Various Notes.

citizens, it is somewhat hard on the florist.

M. Anderson was in Cincinnati on business last week.

Elmer Jenkins expects to leave for North Carolina soon, where he will select his Christmas greens and place his bulb orders for spring.

The Advance Floral Co. has rented the large display windows of the Fenton Dry Cleaning Co., on Ludlow street, where a fine display of potted plants is made.

Frank Young, of Vicksburg, Miss., who was called to Dayton by his mother's sudden illness, returned home October 30.

George Lampert, of Xenia, O., was in town last week. Mr. Lampert tells us that they are picking some fine single violets.

Miss Nellie Kable, of Springfield, O., has been the guest of her cousin, Elberta Engle.

The Dayton Floral Co. had an exceptionally fine trade on made-up bouquets for All Saints' day. They had one order for 200 that came from Piqua, O. This company is putting in a large McCray refrigerator, which will be used for the storage of wild smilax.

Mrs. B. Haschke reports a good week, being busy with receptions, parties and weddings.

The Miami Floral Co. is getting in some large importations of rhododendrons and azaleas for the holiday trade.

The Market.

We are glad that we can report a satisfactory condition of the market in Nashville this week. Flowers of all kinds are equal to the demand, but there is little to go to the dump. Carnations continue in light supply, our growers wisely holding them back till the demand for them appears. At present everyone prefers chrysanthemums. There is a good supply of these flowers in all varieties and grades, and there seems to be a fair demand. Dahlias are still in evidence, although in smaller numbers. There have been several frosts, but they have failed so far to do their work well. As soon as we get more cold weather there will be a better market for all cut flowers.

Violets of good quality are appearing and are selling fast. Roses continue in good supply. In fact, there comes nearer being an oversupply than in any other line. Cosmos is less plentiful in the windows than it was before mums came in such good supply. Cosmos never in this market is counted on to do more than fill up when there is a lack of other things.

Hardy shrubs persist in believing that it is spring. We gathered a bunch of good lilacs and snowballs this evening and received a phone message from a customer for whom we had set a bed of hyacinths. She is in distress because the hyacinths are up two or three inches and are getting ready to bloom. We shall take these up and pot them for Christmas and set more for her.

Good green of all kinds is rather scarce, especially smilax and asparagus. Fortunately, we can always secure an abundant supply of dagger ferns from the hills near by that, although not the best of greens, can be used in many places when stock is low.

Various Notes.

As an evidence of the increasing number of up-to-date farmers and fruit growers in this vicinity, McKay, Reece & Co. say they have just purchased a carload of lime-sulphur solution from the Sherwin-Williams paint people. A few years ago a barrel would have supplied the demand.

The Joys continue to cut some good orchids, but the feature at their store last week was the American Beauty roses. In size and color as well as length of stem they were all that could be desired. They report business as better since the frosts have come.

The windows of Geny Bros. are a delight to all beholders these days, and the business done inside is proof that it pays to keep up a good show. Their decorations at present are mostly chrysanthemums and dahlias, set off with a vase of fancy Richmond roses. They say that business has picked up a great deal of late. Mums are abundant and it is no wonder they sell, for they are well grown.

Haury & Sons are displaying a pretty evenly balanced line of flowers of all kinds this week. Possibly the feature of the place is their roses, of which Sunburst continues to take the lead. They say that while there has been no special rush, business has been satisfactory. F. B.

Club Meeting.

A meeting of the Lancaster Florists' Club was held October 24. One of the features of the meeting was an endeavor to get at the cost of production, which brought out a lively discussion, but not much in the way of practical results.

Henry Rohrer gave an interesting account of a trip through the west and his visits to various florists, including Breitmeyer's, of Mount Clemens, Mich.; Van Bochove & Bro., of Kalamazoo, Mich.; the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., and others.

The Board of Trade rooms were engaged as a meeting place for a year, and if any visiting florist is within reach on the third Thursday of any month he is welcome to attend the meetings.

Henry Rohrer exhibited some fine chrysanthemums; so, also, did Rudolf Nagel, and a fine exhibit of chrysanthemums and carnations was made by Mr. Spinner, gardener for the Locher estate.

Various Notes.

At Albert M. Herr's place carnations have been relegated to one large house and will be grown for rooted cuttings only. The other houses are filled with stock plants of geraniums, of which he grows only three varieties, Nutt, Ricard and Poitevine. Of these there are five houses full of rooted cuttings in various stages. He recently bought his father's place and has torn down all the houses thereon and erected one large house, intended eventually as a start for a range of cut flower houses, but used this season for coleus, of which he has some twenty varieties now in 4-inch pots for stock. L.

Earlville, Ill.—Floyd Weaver, formerly of Pawpaw, Ill., has opened a flower shop in the front part of the Kossert store building, in this town. The formal opening was held November 2.

Roswell, N. M.—Thos. A. Gettys, proprietor of the Alameda Greenhouses, has offered to assist in the beautifying of the courthouse park by presenting, each year, 250 bedding plants to the city and the same number to the county.

The Southwestern Market.

The market last week continued about as was reported the week previous. Nothing out of the ordinary has taken place in retail circles, and wholesalers report favorable conditions during the week, as far as the supply is concerned. Stock in all grades is of better quality than for some time. Prices have not been high; in fact, have been too low, and some of the retailers have taken advantage of this and have had bargain sales.

Roses as a rule have gone begging all the week. There is some splendid stock coming into this market in Killarneys, Richmonds, Wards, Marylands and Beauties. Brides and Maids are in little demand at present. Carnations, too, have been plentiful in the short-stemmed grades. The long, fancy were in demand and quite a few of the common varieties were dumped. Chrysanthemums, cut blooms, had a good call and good prices prevailed during the week. Fancy graded stock brought from $2 to $3 per dozen and the lesser grades from $5 to $15 per hundred. These are now the predominant flower for all buyers. Some excellent blooms of Poehlmann, Kelley, Halliday, Appleton and Bonnaffon were seen during the week at the different markets.

There are plenty of California violets and the better grades sell well, but are not at their best as yet. They brought hardly over 35 cents per hundred during the week. A lot of good lily of the valley and Easter lilies are to be had. A good demand for these is reported. The recent frosts have killed what little outdoor stock was left. With this out of the way, prices should advance somewhat in the coming week. Plenty of good greens of all kinds are to be had.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold a meeting Thursday afternoon, November 14, in Odd Fellows' hall. The meeting will be called promptly at 2 p. m. The club has a lot of important business to transact, and reports from the recent officers' meeting and the publicity committee will be heard. All the officers, from President Weber down, are making efforts to have a large attendance.

The sudden death, October 29, of Charles E. Schoenle was a great shock to his many friends in the trade. Further particulars may be found in the obituary column of this issue.

The Engelmann Botanical Club will hold its regular monthly meeting Monday night, November 11, at the Missouri Botanic Garden, in the lecture room. President Moon and Secretary Pring say the meetings of late have been well attended and that good talks on interesting subjects will be made at all the winter meetings.

tractive window display last week. Mr. Sanders says he has nothing to complain of, as business has been quite good for the last month and he expects it to continue.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, Ill., has been cutting a fine lot of Touset and other fine mum blooms, which he is shipping to this market. He expects a large cut from all his late varieties, especially Chadwick and Golden Wedding, two favorites with him.

Fred C. Weber's two large show houses are filled with fine blooming and decorating plants.

Adolph G. Ahner, of Kirkwood, is cutting fine yellow mums of the Mrs. Kelley variety. Mr. Ahner expects to be long on a crop of carnations and sweet peas this season.

The nurserymen have had a fine week for planting. The fine weather kept them all busy. Messrs. Weber, Sanders, Rothenheber and Schuette say they have had a busy season in all lines. The Weber and Schuette nurseries have done a heavy shipping business.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, has taken to growing lily of the valley, and is at present cutting a fine lot, in addition to his carnations, violets and sweet peas, which he consigns to the Windler Wholesale Floral Co.

August Schuerman, of the Schuerman Decorating Co., says he will have a lot of Christmas novelties for window decorating during the week of the horse show. They had a number of fine window decorations for downtown department stores.

FLOWERS BY TELEGRAPH report plenty of business for November 1 and 2, in plants and cut flowers, for All Souls' day.

H. Young & Son, Maryland and Euclid avenues, have an attractive display of blooming plants in their large conservatory.

John R. Steinicki, at Old Orchard, has been having a nice cut of carnations of extra good quality.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. had a great lot of fancy cut mums last week, with fairly good demand. They say violets have sold well all the week.

Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. has added a lot of new orchids to its already large collection and says the demand for cut blooms is growing.

Visitors during last week were W. J. Pilcher, Edwin Denker, H. Emunds, J. F. Ammann, A. H. Ahner, W. J. Edwards, A. Scheidegger, Hugo Gross, F. W. Ude, John Connon, Geo. Hartmann, John R. Steinicki and Joe Hauser. J. J. B.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The somewhat cooler weather has caused a corresponding stiffening of the local market and slightly accelerated the demand, especially for chrysanthemums. Carnations are of better quality and are coming in larger quantities. Roses are especially good, but the mums hold the center of public favor and it is noticeable that a larger number of persons have taken to wearing single blooms as part of their street costume. Funeral work holds up well and there is an increasing call for wedding and social work.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

BEANS appear to be poor the world over this year.

THE later reports on peas indicate that the pessimists are well backed up by the outturn of merchantable seeds.

THE Busch Seed Store, Lawrence, Kan., has moved into the Pearson building, recently purchased by Mr. Busch.

THOMAS W. CHISHOLM, sales manager for the Braslan Seed Growers Co., San Jose, Cal., is leaving the coast for his annual visit to the trade.

IT is reported from Cadillac, Mich., that the D. M. Ferry Seed Co., Detroit, has suffered the loss of five large crops by recent heavy frosts in Wexford and Missaukee counties.

THE New Albany Seed & Implement Co., New Albany, Ind., has been incorporated, with $5,000 capital stock. The directors are Herman Brown, Sr., Louisa Brown and Henry Goetz.

THE Central Kentucky Blue Grass Seed Co. has been incorporated at Lexington, Ky., with a capital of $20,000. The incorporators are Clarence Le Bus, S. H. Malley and C. H. Berryman.

THE Ford Seed Co., of Ravenna, O., is building an addition to its seed house. This will provide 5,076 square feet of extra floor space which was made necessary by the increase in business.

THE first 1913 general seed catalogue to reach The Review was that of the Ebbert Seed Co., Rocky Ford, Colo. It quotes all seeds by the pound, with a table showing the weight of each variety required to plant a given area.

THE Henry Field Seed Co., of Shenandoah, Ia., has purchased two buildings formerly occupied by a manufacturing concern, and has remodeled them with the intention of using them for the garden seed department, which has outgrown the facilities of the main building.

MCKAY, REECE & Co., Nashville, Tenn., are laying plans to make that city a center for the growing of Seven Top turnip seed. They have contracted over 25,000 pounds for next fall's delivery thus far and are still going after business. Their fields are already up and are looking well.

A NASHVILLE seed house reports about eighty per cent of their garden pea contracts being filled, with the heavy shortage on the late varieties. Beans are not in yet, and their growers are not able to even estimate what per cent of their contracts they will be able to fill. It is pretty certain that they will be short in all varieties. Lettuce, radishes, onions, cabbage and spinach are filled in full as per contract. Tomatoes are mostly in and there will be a full delivery of all varieties, the same being true of melons. No sweet corn, of course, is in as yet and there is some fear of shortage in a few varieties.

L. H. Archias, of Archias Seed Co., Sedalia, Mo., with Mrs. Archias, celebrated their twentieth wedding anniversary October 28, having the assistance of 100 guests.

Chris Reuter, New Orleans, recently has taken the building adjoining his already large establishment and has added materially to his facilities. A full line of seeds is handled.

Some of the buildings of the well-known firm of Dippe Bros., at Quedlinburg, recently suffered by fire, probably caused through spontaneous combustion of a quantity of mangel seed. The loss of seeds was not large.

The J. S. Ashbrook Seed Co., of Mattoon, Ill., recently suffered considerable inconvenience from a fire in the basement of the building, but the damage was not heavy. The flames were supposed to have been started by friction in the blowing machinery.

The German seed growers are making full deliveries on radish and spinach. It was a wet season and the rains continued until late in the summer, so that shipments were later than usual in starting and such crops as are most affected by moisture, either during growth or during harvest, are below normal in yield or quality.

This appears to have been a poor year for Illinois seedsmen in politics. Frank H. Funk, founder of Funk Bros. Seed Co., at Bloomington, accomplished nothing more than the defeat of the Republican candidate for governor and the division of the vote between three candidates for congress in the second district produced this result: Mann (Rep.), 20,967; Knight (Prog.), 15,907; Vaughan (Dem.), 15,539; Mann's plurality, 4,860.

Because of an inaccurate article in a Harrisburg newspaper a few days ago, an erroneous report has been circulated regarding the plans of the Holmes Seed Co. Mr. Holmes states that the company expects to occupy its present store until after the first of the year. The building at 119 South Seventh street, in which the wholesale department is located, is being remodeled, so that eventually the entire business will be under one roof.

Watkins & Simpson, London, have issued a handsome pamphlet in colors showing their exhibit at the International Exhibition last spring. In the preface they say: "We have long thought that if the general public could be shown the possibilities of annuals when properly grown, and the many new and beautiful varieties that have recently been introduced, there would be a much larger demand for them. We considered the Royal International Horticultural Exhibition an excellent opportunity for doing this, and of giving an object lesson of what can be done with easily-grown annuals when given proper room for their development, and it was with this purpose in view that we arranged our exhibit. As we are wholesale only, we were unable to reap any direct benefit, but, judging from the numerous orders we could have taken, we think the retail trade should benefit to some considerable extent through the interest aroused."

SHOOTING PURELY ACCIDENTAL.

We desire to correct the impression that J. Charles McCullough was shot while in front of his office. As a matter of fact, Mr. McCullough was on the Zoo-Eden Park street car, returning to his office, just ready to leave the car, when a revolver in someone's pocket was accidentally discharged, the bullet going through the fleshy part of Mr. McCullough's right forearm, just below the elbow, not injuring any of the bones. Mr. McCullough was immediately taken to the Good Samaritan hospital, where he has been for five days. He is recovering rapidly and no serious results are anticipated.

We wish you would insert this in your paper as given, as the wrong impression seems to have gotten out among the trade.

J. Chas. McCullough,
Per Strong.

A Cincinnati newspaper gives the following account of the affair:

"Mystery surrounds the shooting of J. Charles McCullough, prominent seed merchant, yesterday afternoon. Mr. McCullough was returning to his office at Fifth and Eggleston avenues from luncheon about 3:30 o'clock and was on the rear platform of a Zoo-Eden car when a bullet struck him in the right arm. Who fired the shot, whether it was accidental or an attempt on the man's life, is not known.

"Though the bullet plowed its way through the arm just below the elbow and came out on the other side, Mr. McCullough did not know he was shot until he was about to get off the car. He walked into his office, assisted by Conductor Kleinberg, of the car, and a bystander. Later he was removed to the Good Samaritan hospital, near the scene of the shooting. Dr. C. L. Bonifield, who dressed the wound, said the wound was not necessarily dangerous, and he looked for the early recovery of Mr. McCullough, unless complications set in.

"Mr. McCullough bore up wonderfully well, declaring as the surgeon dressed his arm that his only worry was for his wife and daughter, who he felt would collapse when told of the shooting. The injured man talked to an Enquirer reporter directly after the arm was dressed and said:

"'I have not been in the city for the last four weeks, yesterday being my first day in the office in that time. I was returning to the office to clear up some small details and was reading a paper on the rear platform of the car. The only person I knew on the car was the conductor. Shortly before we reached my office a shot came from someone on the platform in front of me, and another man yelled, "A man has been shot!"

"'At that time I did not know it was myself, and even replaced the newspaper in my pocket before the blood seeped through my coat sleeve. A large, heavy-set man, with an overcoat over his arm, got off the car when I did and walked away, but I am sure he did not mean to do me personal harm, if it was

All the florists here are smiling today over the heavy frost we had last night, although when they think of All Souls' and Saints' days being past, leaving them with an abundance of large and small mums, besides the other flowers they usually dispose of on those two days, it brings sadness to their faces.

We have had several big weddings and funerals during the month, which have helped us to hold our faces fairly straight and treat everybody with politeness.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

All Saints' day, November 1, did not turn out as satisfactory to the wholesalers and retailers as at first anticipated. The main cause was the sudden change in temperature on that day. From beautiful, springlike weather we were plunged, over night, into a real winter day, with a strong northwester blowing from early morning until night. Naturally, all who had ordered their bunches or designs either had them delivered or, as in most cases, called for them, but thousands of buyers who get their flowers on All Saints' day would not venture out on account of the sudden cold weather.

The stock of chrysanthemums grown here turned out better and in greater quantity than last year, and every dealer was well supplied. About half a carload of Chicago flowers came in at night, October 30, and smaller shipments the following two days. These consignments consisted of mums, roses, carnations, valley, orchids, etc. It must be said, to the credit of the shippers, that seldom has better stock reached this city for that day. Although the old-style designs are still ordered by certain families, the bulk of the flowers are made up in either strictly chrysanthemum or mixed bunches. Northern flowers, especially mums, roses and carnations, are now sold even at the markets and by street venders, but the sale of these flowers at the places mentioned did not amount to much this year. It must be said that the cemeteries were in many cases elaborately decorated and even the most humble grave was not forgotten. However, the immense throng that on a warmer day visits the different cemeteries was nowhere to be seen.

Various Notes.

Abele Bros. report good sales. They could have sold more high-grade mums if on hand.

The subjunctive mood, past perfect tense of the verb "to know," is responsible for a very large per cent of failures. It goes something like this:

If I had known	If we had known
If thou hadst known	If you had known
If he had known	If they had known

It's the saddest tense in all the business world, and is usually used as a result of careless consideration in beginning an undertaking.

To embark in the art of lily growing without protection as to quality of the bulbs you embark with, is like buying a ticket in a raffle—there's but one chance to win and many to lose. We know of no more undesirable investment than an undertaking in the lily growing business without such protection.

We reap what we sow—and generally a little bit more. Plant good bulbs and you will reap good results. Always buy the best you can get and you will always have the best average of results and profits. After all, it's the profit you are after—you are not in business to see how cheap you can conduct it—but to see how profitable you can make it. A good investment is a good speculation. TOMATO LEAF BLIGHT.

Will you kindly tell me the name of the disease that shows on the enclosed tomato leaf? The plants are growing in a greenhouse and are about three feet high, with four spikes of fruit on them, some of the fruit commencing to ripen. Please tell me, also, what is the best treatment for them. J. F. J.

The tomato leaves are affected with tomato leaf blight, the scientific name of which is Cladosporium fulvum. When a crop is badly affected with the disease, it does considerable damage and is hard to exterminate. It is a fungous disease. The spores are made on the under side of the leaves and are carried to, or fall on, the upper side of the others. The fungus itself grows between the upper and lower skins of the leaves and breaks out on the lower side in the form of a brown, mold-like fuzz, covered with the spores or germs of the disease.

Spraying with Bordeaux mixture on the upper side of the leaves does nothing except to prevent the leaves from being affected on plants that are perfect and healthy now. If the leaves are sprayed on the lower side with a fine spray, it will kill the disease which is showing on the lower side of the leaf. For the Bordeaux spray use what is called the 5, 5, 50 mixture; that is, five pounds of lime, five pounds of blue vitriol and fifty gallons of water. Dissolve the vitriol in five gallons of hot water. Slake the lime in a little water in a pail; when cooled off, add enough to make five gallons. Do not mix the two together until poured into the barrel of water. Keep it stirred well while using it and use it the day it is made.

Spraying the upper side of the leaves from the time the plants are small is a pretty sure preventive and in this case it is not necessary to spray the under side, but when the disease is once established it is almost impossible to separate the affected vines. They will live, but will not pay. H. G.

THRIPS ON FIELD BEANS.

Enclosed you will find a bean leaf. Please state the name of the disease and a remedy for it. L. G.

The forwarded leaf was covered with thrips. These sometimes attack beans and other crops during spells of warm, dry weather. Lack of moisture at the root makes plants an easier prey to this pest. Spraying with cold water through a fine nozzle, and also with one of the nicotine or soap sprays, will help considerably to reduce the numbers of the thrips, but to completely destroy them on outside crops is almost impossible. C. W.

BODDINGTON'S QUALITY Decoration Day or May-Flowering TULIPS

It is surprising that these grand Tulips have not been more largely planted. As an early display, they are magnificent in their beauty and coloring, coming into flower, as they do, from May 15 to the first week in June, according to the season, and are most useful from a decorative point of view, after the early-flowering Tulips are past. The colors are various, as described in the following varieties, and their height, after being well established, reaches nearly three feet in some types.

	100	1000
Bouton d'Or. Has deep clear yellow, globular medium-sized blossoms, with curious black-anthered stamens	$1.25	$11.50
Gesneriana spathulata, or major. This variety has long been in cultivation. The beautifully curved flowers are brilliant scarlet, with a bluish-black center, on tall stems. A large group of this Tulip massed by itself looks very striking	1.25	11.50
Gesneriana macrospila. Crimson-scarlet, black and yellow center	1.00	8.75
Gesneriana lutea. Beautiful, yellow, tall and handsome	1.75	16.00
Inglescombe Scarlet. Very brilliant scarlet, black base	2.00	18.00
Inglescombe Yellow. A large canary-yellow, perfect form	4.50	42.00
Inglescombe Pink. One of the best pinks	1.50	14.00
Isabella, or Shandon Bells. The petals are a rose color, flushed or flaked with white when they first open, and after two or three days it changes to a suffused deep rose and red color. Remains longer in bloom than many others; stands well when cut	$1.00	$ 9.00
La Merveille. A magnificent variety with very large, sweet-scented blossoms. Salmon-rose, overlaid with orange-red. A grand border variety, 25 cts. per doz.	1.00	8.50
Mrs. Moon. The finest late yellow; beautifully reflexed petals. A charming variety, 50 cts. per doz.	3.50
Maiden's Blush, or Picotee. Clear white, margined on the edge with pink. The flower is beautifully curved, but it is somewhat difficult to give a correct idea of the color. When it opens the petals are white and margined or penciled with pink to cerise. After two or three days the flowers change to a deep rose, and, unless one is acquainted with it, it would not be recognized as the same Tulip. It stands remarkably well when cut	1.25	10.00

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

An account of the San Francisco flower show appears under the general exhibition heading on page 15 of this issue.

San Francisco, Cal.—Neil A. McLaren is putting up the greenhouses being built on the grounds of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Oakland, Cal.—Announcement has been made of the marriage of Arthur Polley, a florist of this city, and Miss Eva Beatrice Newman, of Malden, Mass.

San Diego, Cal.—J. Lester Hollis, of the Hollis Plant & Seed Co., who enjoys some local reputation as a musician as well as a florist, recently had a narrow escape from serious injury and sustained a severe scalp wound when he was struck on the head by a heavy timber while engaged in tearing down an old residence which he had purchased for the lumber.

Pasadena, Cal.—For the funeral of ex-Mayor Earley, October 26, F. S. Kempton, presumably the youngest florist on the coast, received the city work. It consisted of a large broken column which took 2,000 white carnations and 700 Killarney roses, from the city hall employees; an immense star, to represent the police; a broken wheel, from the fire department, and an immense wreath of valley and violets for the park department, besides many small wreaths and sprays.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The end of October was remarkable for the large amount of funeral work, which helped materially to clean up stock. Flowers of all kinds have been plentiful, especially mums, but there has been no surplus of the better grades. Duckham is in fine shape this year and I do not remember having ever seen so many good Bonnaffons. Appleton has hardly lived up to its early promise. There are sheaves of outdoor pompons around the wholesale stores, but they are poor, colorless imitations of flowers, that never ought to be sent in. About the same may be said of carnations. The "hothouse" varieties were never better and many of the lath house and outdoor-grown ones are excellent, but some of the trash sent to the wholesalers sufficiently accounts for the profanity heard when the boxes are opened. Victory leads in reds, as this fine carnation stands the dry atmosphere and continuous sunshine better than most. The local white called Los Angeles White is good, but is on the scarce side just now. There are plenty of pinks. Violets are fairly plentiful, but the quality is not good, the weather being too hot for them.

Outdoor roses are not quite so good as last reported, Maman Cochet being the best. Indoor stock is about equal to the demand. Beauty is good for the season. Local Killarneys are not so good as those shipped in from the north, which are excellent. Radiance is coming from several growers in good shape, but if Rose Queen turns out to be as good as it promises in some places, then Radiance will have to take a back seat, for the color and form of the Queen are magnificent. The same may be said of Killarney Queen. Eastern growers can have little conception of the beauty of this rose as grown under California conditions. It is superb in every way.

Valley and orchids have cleaned up well lately. There is a big demand for all kinds of greens and the prices are well maintained.

Various Notes.

Ed. Howard left, October 28, for another plant-collecting trip in Mexico in the interest of the Doheny collection.

C. J. Muller, of the Rosery, has closed a lease on a store on Third street, between Broadway and Hill streets, and will remove from his present location January 1, when his lease expires.

I called in at the H. N. Gage Co.'s place at Montebello, October 29, and was surprised indeed to see the progress made there. Seven acres of daffodils and other bulbs have been planted and many are up and growing strongly. The whole ten acres have been cleaned up and leveled, a Skinner system of irrigation has been put in and an immense lath house is well under way. Foreman J. Russell has surely done well and deserves credit. I was much interested in the trials going on of cold storage bulbs of gladioli, etc., but will have to reserve comment for a while, as they are yet incomplete. It looks, though, as if Gage were on the right track.

Among the recent funeral pieces at Morris Goldenson's was a magnificent broken column, eight feet high, composed entirely of choice cattleyas and lily of the valley. The price was $150 and it was well worth it, as Mr. Goldenson believes in giving his customers good value for their money.

Otto C. Dieterich is now in the nursery business at Eagle Rock.

At the Los Angeles Flower Market mums are moving off rapidly and C. Morton says that October 28 was the biggest day they have had in four months.

Four funeral pieces for $460 is pretty good business and this was the experience of the Broadway Florist. These were four separate orders for the same funeral, at Murrietta Springs.

Funeral work of the better class has been plentiful with J. W. Wolters; several large wedding decorations have also helped out.

Angelo Tassano, of the Los Angeles Evergreen & Cut Flower Supply Market, has returned from San Francisco to help out here, the business being more than Tony could manage alone. Bernard, the youngest brother, will remain in the north, for a time at least. Tony says he never had better business or looked forward with more confidence to a good season than now. By straight dealing and strict attention to business he has worked up an elegant connection, of which he is justly proud.

The window displays in the Freeman-Lewis store continue to be most attractive.

O. C. Saakes speaks in glowing terms of the San Francisco show. He was especially pleased with the way the Bay City men arranged their Phalænopsis and other orchids, while the show, as a whole, he classes as a magnificent one.

At S. Murata's Broadway store I noted some extra fine "hothouse" carnations. Tom Highbridge, an employee of the firm, lost his wife October 28.

Sam Slack, lately of Wittbold's, Chicago, has left the devious ways of the florist to embark in the chicken business.

Still another addition to the list of nurserymen and florists: This time a Londoner, W. Hunt, father of Mr. Hunt of the Hamburger floral department. Mr. Hunt, besides having large floral interests, is an expert potato hybridist and has brought with him from England many pedigreed kinds for trial and experiment. The new place is to be at Ramona. I hope he will be as successful as his son, who has turned a losing department into a profitable one at the big white store.

The heat is not good for the winter sweet peas and many of the growers east of the city report poor stands.

J. McLeod, a local landscape gardener, has been arrested on the charge of passing valueless checks to the tune of about $300. H. R. Richards.

FRUIT GROWING IN CALIFORNIA.

Olive planting is on the increase in this state, there being reported for next year the prospect of over 1,000 acres set to olive trees in southern California alone.

Hundreds of acres of hitherto worthless land are being set to apple trees, which seem to do well after getting started.

The fig crop for last year in Los Angeles county is estimated at 1,140,000 pounds, valued at $28,500. Planting is on the increase.

Never before in the history of the Pacific coast has the demand for Loganberry and Phenomenal plants been so great. The appreciation of these berries is manifest in the eastern demand for fresh fruit, dried fruit and canned; also a new product for soda fountains, called Loganberry juice. The latter can also be used to make jellies and for other household purposes. L. F. S.

PASADENA, CAL.

The funeral of former Mayor Earley, October 26, called for a profusion of floral pieces and left the retail stores rather depleted in stock. Kempton's Flower Shop had all the work for the various city departments and made about a dozen different designs. The most notable were: A beautiful broken column, standing over six feet tall and requiring 2,000 white carnations and 700 Killarneys for the base and garland; a large star on a base, from the police department; two immense wreaths, one of valley and violets, the other of white roses and cattleyas; a large sheaf of chrysanthemums; a wreath of white and pink roses and a number of smaller pieces. The broken column is particularly interesting to florists as an illustration of the old saying, "Necessity is the mother of invention." The order came too late to have the wire frame manufactured, so F. L. Kempton, who is probably the youngest florist on the coast, used a packing box for the base, fastened on two lengths of common stove pipe for the column, covered the whole with moss in the usual way and the frame was complete. The Orchid had an express wagon load of sprays and wreaths for the same funeral, probably over half of the orders from the friends of the former mayor's family going to this popular store. Eldred's Flower Shop and other retailers were also well represented, the orders being well scattered among all the florists.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

The weather threatens rain at any time, but thus far the days and nights are favorable to all kinds of stock. The month of October has been on the side of the growers and, with the possible exception of violets, all flowers have been at their best. This is especially noticeable with mums, for never in the history of the local trade have they been in better form. Owing to the climatic conditions, however, they have been at bargain prices for the last three weeks, and will no doubt continue so until frost makes its appearance. Other lines of outdoor stock are beginning to show the lateness of the season. A few late gladioli and dahlias are seen, but they will be over in a few days. Indoor stock of all kinds, with the possible exception of fancy roses, is plentiful enough. Carnations are cheaper by twenty per cent than they were one year ago. The extra favorable weather is to blame for this, as also is the fact that there are more carnation growers than last season. Valley is not plentiful, but there is sufficient to cover requirements. Orchids are daily becoming more plentiful and are being well used up. Some good late longiflorum lilies are seen. Maidenhair, which has been going at ruinous prices all summer, has suddenly taken a new lease of life. The early summer and fall crops are nearly exhausted and from this time onward the growers will get much better prices. Other kinds of greens are scarcer also, with the exception of smilax, which is much more plentiful.

Business is not as lively as we should like to see at this season of the year, but all indications seem to point to the fact that we may expect a good fall trade. Funeral orders are fairly plentiful.

and funeral work. Chrysanthemums are now at their best. While the California mums are not quite so much in evidence, there is ample home-grown material to take their place. The small-flowered and single varieties are more largely grown and used than in past years, and they add to the usefulness of the flower, being much used in decorations. Carnations are now arriving in quantity and are, as a rule, of first-class quality, though some of the stems would be better with a little more air. The sale is good and the demand fully equals the supply. There are fine roses in all the stores and some of the newer varieties are meeting with popular favor.

Orchids are selling well and the blooms are of better quality than used to be offered here. Local violets are none to plentiful, but ample supplies of the scentless varieties from California are being offered. Cosmos is now the only outside flower that amounts to anything. There is an increased demand for pot plants. Cyclamens and Lorraine begonias are good and sell well. Mixed pans of ferns and obconicas seem to please the buyers.

Various Notes.

The florists were well represented at the funeral of the late L. P. Walz. The Florists' Club sent a casket blanket made of smilax and Chatenays, constructed by the H. Harrington Co., and individual florists in many cases sent their tributes. It was universally acknowledged that Mr. Walz would be much missed in the trade here, his example always having a tendency to elevate the florists' business.

An unusual floral design was made by the Woodlawn Flower Shop last week. It was an anvil ordered by the employees of the Westerman Iron Works for the funeral of a member of the firm.

H. J. Hefty, for a long time with Martin & Forbes, in Portland, is now with H. A. Crouch, on Second avenue.

The wholesale and retail business of the late L. P. Walz, on upper Second avenue, is at present being continued by his widow, under the personal management of Tom V. Rhoades, who for a considerable time has been assistant in the store. Mr. Rhoades lately indulged in the luxury of matrimony, the lady being Miss Edythe Hodgins.

Miss Clara M. Burbank is now assisting Miss Wagner at the Crescent Flower Store. There are no signs of potatoes, spineless roses or thornless cacti there, but everything for business.

The Hollywood Gardens are now cutting lots of carnations, their average output being 1,800 daily.

A. E. Buxton was up in Vancouver, B. C., last week, visiting his friends in the trade.

R. C. Calloway, at Bellevue, is shipping fine chrysanthemums to this market. He is selling a crop of late cucumbers at a good price. T. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

October business was well up to the standard. Frost has put a quietus on all outside stock and thus has enhanced the demand for the florists' product. Weddings and social functions have kept up a constant call for choice stock. Mums are in their glory and move at a price that is profitable to the growers. The H. W. Buckbee is coming in nicely and it always proves a good seller. Roses are gradually improving in quality, with a daily clean-up. Carnations, while not in oversupply, are plentiful. The change of weather seems to help their keeping qualities and proves a blessing to the shipping trade. The best grade goes for $3 per hundred, but there will soon be an upward trend in prices. Valley and orchids are particularly scarce. Violets are equal to de-

Martin & Forbes have installed a handsome white McCray ice-box of the four-door type. It was much needed, to take care of their heavy cut of stock from their range near Forest Grove. It also improves the general appearance of the store.

P. Haas, formerly of the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, has charge of the growing end of the Baker City Seed & Floral Co., Baker City. Ira B. Sturges recently took back the plant from a leased contract and practically rebuilt and reglazed the entire range. The heating apparatus was completed last week, just in time to prevent a freeze-up; the temperature was down to 22 degrees. They report business good, with a scarcity of flowers.

Louis Goodfriend, representing Wertheimer Bros., is in town with a line of ribbons.

Florists in general, and Pacific coast florists in particular, are asked to give attention to the flower show which will be held at the Armory November 15 and 16. This is the first fall show ever held here, but will be made an annual event. All arrangements have been completed and the premium list has been issued. Many valuable prizes are offered. [Continued from page 17.]

Mr. Reid, the latter gardener for Sydney Colgate, Orange, N. J., divided the honors in the classes calling for twelve carnations.

Special exhibits in this section that were awarded certificates were the new varieties, Northport, shown in excellent shape by C. H. Totty and Jos. Cockcroft, of Northport, L. I.; Commodore, by C. H. Totty; the new white, Matchless, exhibited by Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, L. I.; Wm. Eccles, red, staged by Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y.

The class for group of mum plants in flower, arranged with foliage and other flowering plants for effect, brought out three entries. H. B. Vyse was first, John Downing second and Mr. Macdonald third. The specimen mum plants, always a feature of this show, were better than ever this year. Peter Duff won first for yellow, with Mrs. R. Hooper Pearson; for white, with Garza, and for crimson, with F. T. Quittenton. Robert Tyson, gardener for Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Convent, N. J., had a splendid plant of Mrs. J. Tranter on exhibition. In single stem plants Mr. Macdonald secured first, Peter Duff second and H. B. Vyse third.

C. H. Totty had a table arranged with new singles which was one of the features of the exhibition. He also showed in pots a lot of new varieties especially adapted for pot culture. Not for competition he had a vase of Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, a variety that he says will give Wm. Turner a hard run when generally distributed.

Reading, Pa.—Mrs. Charles F. Graul has opened a flower store at 905 North Ninth street and is selling the products of the Brookside Greenhouses.

La Crosse, Wis.—The La Crosse Floral Co. is ready to begin the erection of a $15,000 addition to its range. The plans, as outlined by C. E. Schaefer, president and general manager of the company, call for the construction of four greenhouses, of the same size as the four houses now on the tract, but of more modern design. Mr. Schaefer has specialized in the growing of carnations and chrysanthemums, and most of his output has been sold in Minneapolis.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

THE Mutual Nurseries Co. has been incorporated at Monroe, Mich., with a capital of $50,000.

THE McKinney Nursery Co., McKinney, Tex., has opened a flower store at Dallas, Tex., where it also has its general office.

THE Intermountain Nursery Co., of Payette, Idaho, has been incorporated, with $25,000 capital stock, by H. S. Wayne, C. F. Wayne, T. A. Wayne, H. M. Sutfin and W. R. Williams.

ISAIAH MARTIN advises that he is no longer located at Redlands, Cal., in the nursery business, and requests that his name be taken off trade mailing lists. Mr. Martin is now president of an investment and home building company at Los Angeles.

THE gypsy moth is proving a tough customer for the Federal Horticultural Board, just as it has for those who have attacked it from a different angle. In the days following the hearing October 30, fully reported on pages 20 and 21 of The Review for October 31, the board was in almost continuous conference for several days, but has not yet issued its order. The hearing to a large extent relieved the apprehensions of New England nurserymen, as it was made apparent that much less drastic regulations will be issued than were at first feared. Apparently the board agreed that the regulation of shipments of nursery stock is not nearly so important as the regulation of shipments of other articles more likely to be infested.

THE NEW HYBRID HICKORY.

In the issue of The Review for October 17 I am credited with discovering a hybrid hickory. The hybrid hickory referred to was discovered by Henry T. Brown, the surveyor of the Rochester park system, and he called the attention of Dr. C. S. Sargent and myself to it, October 11. Dr. Sargent determined it as a hybrid between the bitternut hickory and the common shagbark hickory and in this I thoroughly agreed, as it has clearly intermediate characters between the two species and has none of the disagreeable taste of the bitternut. Outside of the pecan hickory, it is the best edible hickory nut I have ever come across.

John Dunbar,
Asst. Supt. Rochester Parks.

DETROIT.

The Market.

If business for the whole of November keeps up as it has started out, there will be few complaints. With the market now well supplied with mums, roses and carnations, it is a pleasure to take orders and do business. The demand has been largely for funeral flowers, causing a heavy call for white stock. Several large receptions were held last week and the social season has now begun.

Various Notes.

Finely engraved invitations are out for the annual chrysanthemum show at Breitmeyer's House of Flowers, to be held November 6 and 7.

John Carey, of Mount Clemens, paid Detroit a flying visit November 4.

E. A. Fetters has been doing considerable decorating lately in Windsor, Ont., his fame as a floral artist having spread to the Canadian city.

In Schroeter's window are displayed some immense azaleas in full bloom. Mr. Schroeter is always one of the first to have azaleas in the store.

Thursday, November 7, the members of the Detroit Florists' Club went on the annual outing to Mount Clemens. The party left at 9 a. m. on a special car.

Hufford & Maebius have moved from 247 Randolph street to 249 Randolph street. They also have opened their stand in the Broadway market and are well pleased with the outlook.

Ed Beard finds a big demand for his ferns.

The growers at Greenfield and Redford are so busy with their mums and carnations that neither Thomas nor George Browne nor Albert Stahelin could go to Adrian.

C. H. Maynard, of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, reports business as being fine. H. S.

Franklin, Pa.—Joseph McElhaney, Jr., who has been in the garden and plant business here for the last ten years, is completing two new houses 20 x 100, to be devoted to bedding plants.

This is a fine porch-box plant and wholesales at twenty-five cents each in the Spring. We are so crowded, we can not house all our stock and offer these at this very low price.

A trial order will convince you that our stock is right.

JOHN BADER COMPANY, N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Conditions here are all right as far as the wholesalers are concerned; they are getting quantities of chrysanthemums and everything else and are cleaning up fairly well at prices which are fairly satisfactory. There really has not been an oversupply of chrysanthemums at any time this season, which is some satisfaction to the wholesalers. Beauties are both plentiful and good, and realize fair prices. Valley and roses are a little overabundant.

The retail stores are doing a fair trade for the season; there is no great rush anywhere. It is not thought that the political situation has affected the trade one way or the other.

Various Notes.

The first snow fell here November 2 and the weather is still quite cold, but clear.

George Marshall, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., keeps in the store a bantam rooster, which he has trained to crow every time he cheers for Wilson.

The Blind Floral Co. had an extensive Hallowe'en decoration in the store. It was so artistic as to reflect great credit on the decorator.

The Florists' Club met on Tuesday evening, November 5, and there was a fine show of chrysanthemums. After the show the members adjourned to hear the election returns. Hoo-Hoo.

Glendale, O.—John Bigler has started in the greenhouse business, growing vegetable and bedding plants.

Florists Look! Prosperity! Prosperity! Prosperity!

PREPARE FOR THANKSGIVING AND THE HOLIDAYS

Election is now over, the country is settled, Godfrey Aschmann elected with a big majority. At last prosperity has arrived. Fill and stock up your houses now with the best for the Holidays; turn your pennies into dollars.

WHEN THE VOTE WAS COUNTED.

When they counted the vote there could be no mistake,
Godfrey Aschmann was at head of the poll.
The Bull Moose was nowhere and Debs was a fake,
While Taft was left in a hole.

Not one of lot ever knew how to pot
Up a plant in the way it should grow.
The contest was hot. Who said it was not?
No one else had a ghost of a show.

Aschmann showed us his charms, then back to their farms
His competitors scurried in haste,
His Araucarias, Ferns, Azaleas and Palms
Appealed to all who had taste.

Said the Florists all around, "None better are found,
We're for Aschmann down to our last cent."
With volumes of sound to his house they're bound
To stock up with the best, their intent.

And they sing, as they go, "Our old friend is not slow, He's on top of the heap, all his rivals below."

Look and see what Mr. Fred J. Michell, of the so well-known firm, Henry F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, has to say about our plant, Sept. 14, 1912:

"I have just visited the greenhouses of Godfrey Aschmann, and must say that it was indeed a great surprise to me. I have never seen a better lot of Araucarias, Ferns of all sizes and varieties and prices, Rubbers, Palms, Azaleas and all other seasonable plants ready for shipment, as are at present at Mr. Godfrey Aschmann's."

"Saskatchewan Greenhouses, E. J. Coster, Prop., Prince Albert, Sask., Can., Oct. 29, 1912. Godfrey Aschmann, Esq., Philadelphia, Pa. Dear sir: Your shipment of $33.60 worth of ferns Oct. 23rd arrived in first-class shape, and I beg to state that I never bought as good ferns at the price in my life, and I have been buying them for over sixteen years. Now I am coming back to you for some more stuff, if you treat me as well as you have done this last time. Yours truly, E. J. COSTER."

AZALEA INDICA

New importation, unpacked and in first-class condition, full of buds. I must say that they stood the sea voyage well, and I do not say too much when I say that ever since I began the Azalea importing I never received such a fine lot as this time. If you want to force Azaleas for Christmas successfully, do not wait long, but start right away, giving at first 50°, then 55°, and gradually raise the temperature to 60°-65°, when they show color then slowly cool off again. We have Petrick, the best early pink, Deutsche Perle, double white, Simon Mardner, double pink, Vervaeneana, double rose variegated (one of the best old standard varieties), Pharailde Mathilde, resembles Vervaeneana, but much lighter in color, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. For later and for Easter blooming we only imported the well known American varieties, such as Mme. Vander Cruyssen, Paul Weber, Niobe, John Llewellyn, Apollo, DeSchryveriana and a few others (the Christmas varieties also can be kept for Easter very easily), 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.80 to $2.00. We only ship out good stock, all are worth the money charged for them—but look, Brother, the importing of Azaleas is no more profitable; when they arrive in America we have to pay 50 to 60% on duty, freight and other charges; in Europe we have to pay $2.50 for every box for packing, and have to pay duty on the packing also. Therefore we must have the CASH WITH THE ORDER, and nothing else.

WHOLESALE GROWER, IMPORTER AND SHIPPER OF POT PLANTS.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The Market.

Cooler weather has come, and with it an increase in the volume of business. The Hallowe'en trade was not unusually large and few extra novelties were sold. Chrysanthemums are getting better as the cold weather approaches and some of the later varieties are now arriving. Bonnaffons and Eatons have made their appearance. Carnations are much improved. Violets are going at a lively pace. Orchids and valley are selling well. Roses have all been in good condition since the cool weather set in. Beauties are scarce. Jerusalem cherries, Boston ferns and potted mums are in demand.

Various Notes.

Quarrey the Florist, of Worcester, Mass., called on several florists here recently and he reports that he finds business good. He has added a goldfish department to his store.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., is shipping some fine valley and cattleyas to this city.

The chestnut blight has reached Northampton. George W. Cable, who has a beautiful chestnut grove on his place, noticed this fall that something was affecting his trees and called an expert nurseryman, who has just completed his labors, after being at work on the trees for the last three weeks.

Wm. Schlatter & Son did a fine Hallowe'en decoration at the Kimball hotel.

Meacham & Hassell have put up a splendid new sign and the store is now known as the Posy Shop.

N. F. Higgins is growing some excellent Harrisii lilies and Bonnaffon chrysanthemums. He has just potted a large importation of azaleas and is planting his bulbs for winter forcing.

Osterman & Steele have some good mums on display at their store.

Steve Green, of Bayersdorfer's, Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

The Springfield Amateur Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting in the Science building, November 1. No formal program was prepared, but Joseph Aumer told of the methods of preparing bulbs for both indoor and outdoor growth.

The chrysanthemum show that was talked of for this month was given up, but different members brought specimens to the meeting, thus assuring an unofficial display for a few days.

Mark Aitken is growing some unusually good violets at his greenhouses in Agawam. The Hallowe'en window display at Aitken's was quite fetching, with its pumpkin, rose and chrysanthemum centerpieces. Mr. Aitken also did a nice wedding decoration last week.

Wm. Gardner, a landscape architect, has recently come to this city from New Haven, Conn. He will locate here permanently and establish a business.

Visitors: H. Kurth, of Reed & Keller's, New York city; S. A. Weller, Zanesville, O. E. C. A.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Hallowe'en brought a demand for yellow chrysanthemums which made trade quite lively. The festivities of Hallowe'en appear to be on the increase, especially in this section. We have a great mixed population in this neck of the woods and many of the people manifest a great deal of interest in the mystical ideas connected with Hallowe'en. Many of the store windows have been decorated with pumpkins, cornstalks and yellow mums, the florists falling in line, and some of their windows have been nicely decorated. It is well for the florists to put some energy into this, as it quickens the demand for yellow flowers, particularly mums.

Various Notes.

Last week Scranton was favored by a visit from Alonzo J. Bryan, of Washington, N. J. When he left town he was in high glee over the number of orders he had received in this section for his specialties.

J. M. Bayersdorfer, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, has been here, showing his Christmas novelties and other wares.

Mrs. J. L. Dillon, of Bloomsburg, called on some of the stores in this vicinity last week, and she informed the writer that the Dillons have added another rose house, 30x250, to their already extensive plant. The Dillon greenhouses are being consolidated; heretofore they have been in two separate plants, about half a mile apart, but the Bloomsburg State Normal School has bought the land upon which the original plant was situated. The moving of these houses over to the new plant will give the Dillons one of the best plants in the country. They grow roses, carnations and chrysanthemums for cut flowers, besides roses, carnations and verbenas for spring plants. William Ahlers, who for two years has been the rose grower for the Dillons, has bought the establishment of the Bloomsburg Floral Co. and remodeled it into a most complete plant. Mr. Ahlers is an expert along the rose growing line.

A representative of Krauss & Co., of New York, has been here with a complete line of baskets and willow ware.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green.

These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to Look Us Up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years, and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers up to date. Special attention to long distance orders. Lowest express rates and delivery in good condition guaranteed to any part of the country. Some of many testimonials: "I had 3000 of your Pansy Park Perfection pansy plants last fall. They began to bloom in February, and from then on were a sight; immense blooms, wonderful coloring and great variation. Shall want at least 10,000 for next fall and possibly more of the same giant mixture." F. E. Peckham, Norwick, Conn. "Pensy plants are strong, sturdy, well rooted; have bought of you for the last four years and never saw such a variety of colors. I used to buy the very best seeds and plants possible, but have never had any to equal yours." C. C. Wonneman, Mexico, Mo. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Cash.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are plentiful but are inclined to be small. The supply of carnations has suddenly dropped off. Roses and violets are about in normal supply, but valley seems to be scarce.

Various Notes.

James Vick's Sons report unusually good sales of bulbs.

The new greenhouse of Albert Rayton is completed.

E. R. Fry has purchased a large farm just east of the city. He expects to live on the farm during the summer and to grow all the outdoor stock for his retail trade.

Charles Nuhlbeyer, for some years gardener at the Rochester State Hospital, has now assumed the additional work of farm manager. S. A.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been unusually quiet for the last two weeks. Funeral work has been as dull as the counter trade. The extremely fine weather that we have been having has not been for the good of the florists. Chrysanthemums are in full blast and have not been cleaned up. Carnations have been a trifle scarce. Roses and Beauties are both of good quality. Orchids and valley are to be had, but the call is light. Some home-grown California violets are offered, but most of the doubles are shipped in. Easter lilies are not having much call. Good pot chrysanthemum plants are scarce this year.

Various Notes.

The Hill-Heller Co. held an opening in the new store last week. The store was elaborately decorated for the occasion, many new varieties of chrysanthemums and roses being shown.

John Grande and the Roepke-Rieman Co. have been sending in some good pot chrysanthemums.

L. F. Benson has moved into his new store in the Denison hotel. He has an attractive place and this location should prove a good one for a flower store.

Hartje & Elder will have their annual chrysanthemum inspection day Sunday, November 10. All florists are specially requested to be there.

Bertermann Bros. Co. has a new Premier delivery car in service and it surely is a beauty.

The Pahud Floral Co. is cutting some fine carnations from the new house erected this summer.

Frank Hasselman, of the Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co., is off on an extended visit in Iowa. H. L. W.

Battle Creek, Mich.—The Aldrich Flower Shop, now at 41 North Jefferson avenue, will remove to the Post Tavern building, about December 1. The style of the firm will then be changed to the Post Tavern Flower Room. October 1 V. R. McFee was taken as partner by Mr. Aldrich and they will continue to run the business at the new location.

What is the best strain of white snapdragon for the florist to grow? Is there a variety of white that grows like Silver Pink? Can you tell me anything about the everblooming aster and where it may be had? W. F. C.

Quite a number of florists have a fine form of the white snapdragon. These you will find offered through the classified advertisements in The Review. There are tall, medium and dwarf strains of snapdragon. You can get larger spikes on the white and yellow than on the pink forms. For market purposes a variety which does not grow too tall would be preferable. I do not know what the everblooming aster can be. Can you not furnish the botanical name? C. W.

THE FUEL MARKET.

Coal men are looking for a break in the market in the near future, as cars are commencing to move more freely than for some time. The fuel mart apparently has hit the high water mark on some grades, but hardly any of the companies are yet able to get enough cars to fill what they booked on contract during the summer. Eastern shippers are finding it most difficult to find the necessary transportation for coal that has been mined, but only the need of cars is keeping the price up. The shortage of the coal itself is over for the time being, but owing to the fact that the railroads cannot provide the carriers the dealers have not been willing to accept any great amount of business at even the highest bid. Should the relief come from the transportation companies the market will be affected and prices are expected to become normal until the first bad cold spell, when the coal men predict that the shortage of both coal and cars as well as the difficulty of moving cars in severe weather will compel the operators to ask higher prices again.

CAR SHORTAGE SERIOUS.

Every grower whose bunkers are not full of coal should note that the shortage of freight cars, the menace of a coal famine, and industrial paralysis in some parts of the country have become so serious that the Interstate Commerce Commission has sent shippers and railroads recommendations for its relief. The proposal was accompanied by a thinly veiled intimation that should they fail to remedy the situation the commission itself would find a way to do so.

"The condition is acute," said Commissioner Franklin K. Lane, who for several weeks has been conducting an inquiry. "Great institutions of the country—the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, for instance—are practically out of fuel and cannot get it because there are no cars for its transportation. If an immediate remedy is not found, people in parts of this country will be freezing to death because of their inability to get coal."

The car shortage is said to have been found to be due in part to delay in unloading cars, the slow movement of freight cars, and failure of railroads to return cars to the lines owning them. In the latter case, it is said, railroads hold cars, paying a nominal charge for their use. This the commission denounces as "nothing less than theft." The investigation of slow movement of freights developed that a freight car averaged about twenty miles a day and that while one was moving thirteen were standing still.

The commission makes several suggestions for the improvement of the efficiency of freight equipment and the relief of the car shortage:

"That a higher per diem rate shall be made to apply for the use of cars as between carriers.

TRAVIS GREENHOUSE ROCKER GRATES

The grate that handles Pocahontas coal with perfect success. Cleans entirely by shaking and not a particle of coal goes through into the ash pit. Those of you who are wasting expensive coal, take notice. We can give you the names of customers who are now using Pocahontas coal and they will give you their personal experience and convince you that our grates are a valuable improvement.

Strictly self-contained. Fits any style of furnace. Handles any kind or grade of coal. We have installed many where other rocker grates have failed. Many customers, after thoroughly trying them, are reordering for other boilers.

Greenhouse operators who are installing our grates this year are more than pleased. Our customers are all boosters. We manufacture Rocker Grates only and build them along scientific lines. It is entirely wrong to think anything that will shake will answer for a Rocker grate. We are furnishing you Rocker Grates because others have failed to give service.

Stationary grates are good for about 1 hour. Then the openings begin to close up and they require more coal and the demand increases until they are thoroughly cleaned again. Did it ever occur to you that a satisfactory Rocker Grate could be made? Yes! We will guarantee that, with reasonable care, these grates will give you the service you require, just as they are doing for your friends, who are operating greenhouses over the entire country.

We will guarantee perfect satisfaction to those entrusting their business to us. For prices, give size of furnace.

once instituted which shall report to the commission violations of the rules existing which are intended to insure the return of equipment to the home line.

"That operating officials be instructed to make fuller use of locomotives and cars by increasing the speed of freight trains. An average movement of less than twenty-five miles per car per day is not adequate to the need of times such as this. An increase of speed is tantamount to an increase in equipment."

The commission's recommendations, sent broadcast as a circular to the railroads and shippers of the United States, point out that the commerce and industries of the United States would suffer great loss were a car shortage to continue. Florists will suffer most of all if their coal is not in.

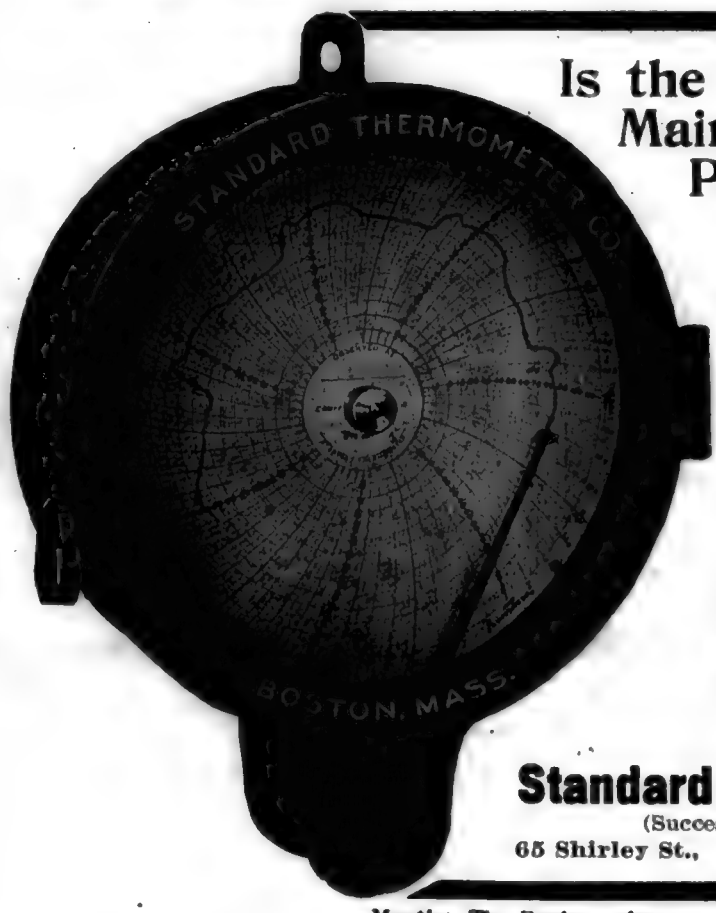
are double boarded to a height of two feet; above that they are glass. I am now heating the house to 55 or 60 degrees with six runs of 1½-inch pipe on one side and across one end, and one 2-inch flow overhead, using steam. The pipe is all on one side on account of three other houses which abut at right angles, with doors opening into each. Please inform me how much, if any, pipe I shall have to add if I change to hot water. Also tell me how many lineal feet of 2-inch pipe or flues, bricked in the same as in a water tube boiler, will be required to heat the house with hot water to 55 or 60 degrees, in this New York climate.

I have another house, 22 x 110 and eleven feet to the ridge, with sides five feet high, two and one-half feet of which is glass. This house contains one 3-inch flow and two 2-inch returns on each side. Is this sufficient pipe to maintain a temperature of 55 degrees, using steam? L. F.

If only one side of the house is exposed, it should be possible to maintain the temperature specified if one 2½-inch flow pipe and three 2-inch returns are added to the present radiation. The flow pipe could be run along the plate on the side adjacent to the other houses, and, if possible, the returns should be under the benches. A pipe boiler to heat the house described will require forty-eight feet of 2-inch pipe.



The house 22 x 110 feet should have two more 1½-inch returns if it is to be heated economically with low pressure steam.

BALTIMORE VISITS WASHINGTON.

At the national capital October 30 the bowling team of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Baltimore met defeat at the hands of the team which the Florists' Club of Washington hopes will prove victorious at the next S. A. F. convention. Messrs. Boone, Klotzer, Perry, Bauer and Moss represented the Baltimore club, while Messrs. Cooke, Ernest, Dalglish, Shaffer and McLennan carried the colors of the Washington club, and the latter won three strings in a row.

The Baltimoreans journeyed to Washington early in the afternoon and went directly to the Propagating Gardens, where the Department of Agriculture has been holding its annual chrysanthemum show. They were then guests of the team, being entertained at a stag supper at the Rathskellar.

The Washington team has been playing in the District League since the start of the season and thus far six out of ten teams arrayed against them have suffered defeat.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

The last week's business drew heavily on the florists. A number of debutantes' receptions and other social affairs proved profitable for the retailers. Carnations continue to come in soft and the demand is much heavier than the supply. Pompons and the small-flowered mums are much in demand and the larger mums are also holding up well. Roses are fine and sell readily.

Preparations for the Show.

The preparations for the flower show are rapidly nearing completion. It will be impossible to get into the Auditorium until Wednesday, November 6, and as the show opens on Friday, November 8, that means a great deal of work to be accomplished in the two days.

On Sunday, November 3, the leading newspapers had a special section devoted to the flower show, and that, no doubt, helped considerably in the way of publicity. A good idea being carried out by the committee is the placing of blooming chrysanthemums in the show windows of the leading business houses and calling attention to the flower show. The trophies, which have been temporarily on exhibition at Holm & Olson's, have been placed in a window of the Boston Clothing House for exhibition.

Various Notes.

Hoffman & Sullivan, the new firm that recently located at 18 West Sixth street, will hold their formal opening next week. Though the firm is new to St. Paul, both members have been with L. L. May & Co. for a number of years. Their location is advantageous and, as they are both hustlers, they should build a good business.

L. L. May, O. J. Olson and Charles Vogt have been appointed as a committee to arrange for a banquet to be held on Monday, November 11, to visitors and local florists. C. R. F.

Carthage, Ill.—Robert C. Crum has had an active fall business, including decorations for college banquets and a good amount of funeral trade, and the weather has been favorable to the supply of plenty of good stock.

Mitchell, S. D.—W. T. March, lately of McCook, Neb., has taken over the general management of the corporation known as The Newburys, the largest horticultural establishment in South Dakota. Mrs. March has taken Mrs. E. C. Newbury's place in the flower store. The Newburys are retiring to southern California for a much needed rest.

The Market.

Trade has been about all that anyone could desire, with plenty of stock to go the rounds. Mums are in good supply and they are about all used up as they come in. Pink is about the only color that is scarce and some of the Enguehards are cut much too closely. Appletons are plentiful, and Bonnaffons, both white and yellow, have arrived, reminding us that the midseason varieties are due and the mum season is well advanced. Roses are in good supply, with a fair demand. The quality also is good, especially in Killarney and White Killarney, and there are some good Richmonds. The demand for Beauties varies; on some days there is no demand and at other times the supply is quickly exhausted.

Carnations are plentiful and the demand is sufficient to keep them fairly well cleaned up. The demand for violets is good, mostly for corsage work. Sweet peas have made their appearance, but not in large enough numbers to cut much of a figure.

Funeral work has been heavy of late and has included some large orders for two or three prominent citizens. The craft in general reports trade good.

Various Notes.

Guy H. Woodrow is in a critical condition, as he has been down with typhoid fever for eight weeks and now he must undergo an operation for another ailment and his friends are much concerned about him, since he is in a poor condition to undergo an operation after his long siege with fever. The doctors state that the operation is the one chance of saving his life and all his friends are hoping for the best.

How is that for an old man? I joined it to my other greenhouse. I do not hire any help and I do not have much time to sleep in the daytime."

SAVES TIME, LABOR AND MONEY

We call your attention to our Gravity Carriers for conveying soil into and out of greenhouses. You are aware of the great amount of labor necessary for changing the loam in your benches. It requires but a few feet of our Gravity Carriers to reduce this expense.

Carriers are made in eight and four foot sections, which can be instantly joined; the rollers are of the best seamless steel tubing, ball bearing, and are 14 inches in length by 2¼ inches in diameter. Cut shows how they operate.

A run of carrier is set up with one end projecting through a window and a cart containing the loam is placed at this end. The loam is shoveled into the boxes, which are pushed or conveyed by gravity into the house and dumped into the benches. Empty boxes are pushed back to cart over same run of carrier. When the beds within a convenient radius are filled, the carrier is set up at another window and the work continues until all benches are filled. For removing soil the process is, of course, similar.

We shall be pleased to furnish further details relative to construction and durability of the carriers; also, upon receipt of information relative to size of your greenhouses, furnish an estimate of the cost of a system for your requirements.

Covington, Ky.—The will of W. R. Miller, who died September 23, directed that his greenhouse business, started ten years ago as a side issue of the Covington Seed Co., be continued by his two sons, A. R. and C. C. Miller, for a period of five years, at the end of which time the business is to go to his three sons, the two managers and W. R. Miller, Jr. A. R. Miller took over the Covington Seed Co. and is running that business as heretofore. The Miller greenhouse establishment consists of 60,000 feet of glass.
